tales of the wild

NIVI SHRIVASTAVA

At the age of 19, when most teenagers are still trying to figure out life, Raihan Rajiv Vadra is set for his first exhibition of stunning shots of wildlife and metaphysical abstract photographs he captured in the past few years. On International Tiger Day, both his parents Priyanka Gandhi and Robert Vadra proudly shared some of his best works from Ranthambore National Park to raise awareness about the majestic animal and were proud to announce his first online venture.

Despite being born in one of the most well-known political families of India, Raihan prefers to stay away from the limelight and spend time in the wilderness to pursue his passion. He graduated from the Doon School in 2018 and is currently pursuing a BA Politics Degree in the UK. He agrees that coming from a family that is in the public eye comes with certain difficulties as well as great privileges. While managing life in a public domain, he says, "I feel it's important to respect those privileges and to understand one's place and value as an individual independent of them. I look up to my parents and the values they have in life, learning from them throughout my childhood. My parents are very supportive of my deci-

"In early 2017, I lost all vision in my left eye in a sporting accident at school. My world was literally divided into half. One half was vibrant and visual, the other was dark and still. sions whether they are related to my studies or my career. They have raised both me and Miraya, my sister, to be independent and self-sufficient."

At this point, it's undecided if he wants to follow his family profession in the long run, but he adds with a certainty that "when it comes to the future, I would like to choose a profession about which I am passionate, whether it is photography or anything different."

The talented young lensman, who usually prefers to be low-key, opens up about his personal life and passions.

PHOTOGRAPHY, FIRST LOVE

"My parents are very supportive of my decisions whether they are related to my studies or my career. They have raised both me and Miraya, my sister, to be independent and self-sufficient"

"As a photographer, I feel drawn to telling the story of the forests and animals. I thrived in a visual world as a child — I love to read, to take pictures, and to draw.

Raihan's favourite forest story

A couple of years back, he went for a wildlife shoot to the Ranthambore National Park. After spending a long day in the jungle he spotted a rare sloth bear for 10-15 minutes. After moving a couple of hundred meters ahead, he chanced upon a leopard at a water hole and just a few hundred meters away they saw a huge male tiger. It was a rare sighting as they saw all the three coveted animals in a short span and came back with many interesting pictures.

Nature and wildlife have been a passion since I would spend weeks in the jungles of Ranthambore exploring their feral mysteries. I have spent many months tracking, photographing, and observing these unique and beautiful animals. Over the years as I grew older my work matured, I began to explore other forms with my camera, capturing our world in my perspective. In the past year, I have made my work more professional. I now do photoshoots and have expanded my body of street photography and abstract photography."

HIS EYE ACCIDENT

famous photographers Steve McCurry and Sebastiao Salgado while growing up. At the age of 16, he took a course in photography at the International Centre of Photography in New York and worked on a project called the '2nd Lens', where he used the iPhone as an interlocutor, between an SLR camera and reality. Little did he know that this project would alter his photography views and become a significant turning point in his life. However, in a twist of fate, he soon met with an accident. "In early 2017, I lost all vision in my left eye in a sporting accident at school. My world was literally divided into half," he shares.

One half was vibrant and visual, the other was dark and still. When I began to take photographs again two years later, my entire perspective had changed. My camera became my second eye, one that I could train to create images that returned my world to me.

The privilege of sharing them with others is what drives me to create and innovate with a sense of fulfillment. With the change in photography came a change in style, I adapted and broadened my work in the metaphysical and street photography genres, which apart from wildlife photography are my two favorites."

POLITICAL INCLINATIONS:

Although wildlife is Raihan's present passion, politics is an undeniable part of his lineage. To be involved in political matters and create awareness around similar issues, he co-founded a student initiative called I-Parliament with his friend Yasharth Goyal during their Doon School days. Speaking about it, he says, "It brings together students from different schools across India to discuss, debate, design, and enact sessions to form laws as it happens."

pens in a real parliamentary session. I-Parliament offers school students, for the first time, the possibility of conveying their ideas to the law-makers of the land, as all legislation generated during a session is reviewed by Members of the Lok Sabha. It has a strong policy-learning component. Students meet and interact with key national political leaders, policymakers, and policy experts. It is a student-run initiative that attempts to create a community in which young people are politically aware and have a voice that is heard by the leaders of their country."

SOCIAL SCENES

As a person in the creative field, Raihan finds social media to be an essential tool. "I use Instagram as a portfolio of my work, Facebook to network and post about things I am passionate about and finally Twitter for a combination of all those things as well as to put up my analysis of football and daily thoughts," he says. He is extremely passionate about football and also supports a series of causes on his social platforms. Speaking about his social interests, he says, "I occasionally write about football, analyse matches, and the larger picture that football paints. A few of my friends and I are starting a podcast called '18 Yards' to discuss the beauty of this game in all its aspects. While football remains a favourite, I also spend time to support some social causes like 'He For She', 'Extinction Rebellion', 'The School Strike for Climate Change', 'Movember: The Mental Health Awareness Campaign', 'CALM', and Project Tiger."

"These causes cover some of the issues I feel are very pertinent. The stigma around mental health problems must be removed and the awareness of these problems must be brought to the fore of the public discussion. I also feel climate change is a cause of high concern to the human race and the movements surrounding it must be supported and policies must be created to curb the impact," he says, ending the interview.

All eyes on KCR-Jagan meet on Aug. 5

People of the Telugu-speaking states are curious to see how the proposed online meeting between Chief Ministers K. Chandrashekar Rao and Y.S. Jagan Mohan Reddy goes off on August 5, if it is not postponed. The two CMs have met at least thrice along with their family members and exchanged pleasantries. Both have decided to settle disputes amicably and share the Krishna and Godavari waters for mutual benefit. But circumstances changed after the AP government decided to take up irrigation projects, especially one meant to use Srisailem water in Rayalaseema. The Telangana state government lodged a strong objection, and the project was halted by the Krishna river board. AP has also lodged complaints about some TS projects. The big question is whether the bonhomie will continue at the Apex Council meeting headed by the Union water resources minister.

It turned out to be a guided tour, after all

After facing the wrath of the Telangana High Court for not allowing the media to report on the demolition of structures in the Secretariat from the ground, the government took scribes and video journalists to have a first-hand look last week. Scribes and lensmen hoped that they would get a chance to walk around the premises they knew so well, both to get a story and to relive old memories for one last time. All they got instead was a guided tour of the premises amid tight security. They were not allowed to head towards the site where the two mosques and a temple were demolished. The scribes quickly realised that the visit was only organised to show the High Court that the government had complied with its direction and that it had nothing to hide.

‘Dada’ Talasani prefers state hospital if struck by Covid-19

Talasani Srinivas Yadav, the feisty TS minister from Hyderabad, for whom no subject is off the table when it comes to talking about or holding official reviews, has been putting up a courageous act for a while now. He has been fearless in declaring that if at all he contracts Covid-19 and needs treatment, he will head to the government-run Gandhi Hospital. This is in stark contrast to his Cabinet colleagues, MLAs and MLCs rushing off to expensive corporate hospitals the moment they test positive. “Talasani anna is a ‘dada’,” is the refrain among many of his followers. What this makes other politicians, at least from the TRS, after the Chief Minister famously announced that irrespective of stature, every Covid-19 positive case must be treated only at Gandhi, is a moot question. All it took for a change of heart on this front was a couple of TRS MLAs testing positive. For Talasani, the promise of being one with the common folk clearly carries a lot of significance and weight. Politicians are expected to keep their promises to the people. Here is hoping that Talasani will never need to keep this one.

AP babus teach docs on Covid-19 treatment

Government doctors in Andhra Pradesh are facing a piquant situation: They are being ‘taught’ by some officials on how to treat Covid-19 patients. This includes lessons on wearing the face mask, using the pulse oximeter, checking blood pressure, handling medical equipment and even what treatment is to be given to patients. These officials are mostly posted at the Covid Command Control Centre in Vijayawada as well as district-level units. Doctors caution that officials are giving the wrong interpretation in handling equipment, which could cause trouble. While giving unwarranted lessons in medicine to doctors is one thing, officials back off when they are confronted. Some officials have set doctors the target of conducting 25 Covid-19 tests at each primary healthcare centre in a day. When a senior doctor who arranges for distribution of testing kits said he did not have enough of the kits, the official fell silent. Doctors only want to be allowed to treat patients as per ICMR guidelines. But try telling that to the babus.

Going beyond his love for hip-hop, the actor gave his fans a peek into his interest in varied rock genres

Ranveer's rock and roll

DC CORRESPONDENT

It's no secret that Ranveer Singh has a knack for music. The music aficionado, who gave a stellar performance in hip-hop based Gully Boy and even owns a music label, has a varied taste in music. And this time, the Band Baaja Baaraat actor went beyond his love for hip-hop and gave his fans a peek into his world of rock and roll.

Taking to Instagram, the actor posted a selfie in which he is seen wearing a popular American rock band Red Hot Chili Pepper's vest. Posting a verse from the band's song Otherside, Ranveer wrote, "I gotta take it on the other side....what's your favourite @chilipeppers track?" In another post, the '83 actor paid a tribute to the legendary British rock band Queen. Posting a photo, in which he is replicating Freddie Mercury's classic pose next to his statue, the actor wrote a verse from the band's song. "I want to break free...@officialqueenmusic," he captioned. Later, the actor went down a memory lane to reminisce the time he attended the British electronic band The Prodigy's concert in Milan in 2012. "World's On Fire...#throwback to Milan 2012 @maxim...@theprodigyofficial," he wrote alongside pictures he clicked at the concert.

The Gully Boy actor took to Instagram to discuss some of his favourite bands such as RHCP, Queen and The Prodigy

Alia turns into a pap

DC CORRESPONDENT

Last month, actress Alia Bhatt became a cat mother to a beautiful black cat named Juniper. The actress, who already has three more cats, loves her feline clowder and is often seen sharing their photos with sister Shaheen Bhatt. This time again, the Shaandaar actress became a photographer for her babies. Taking to Instagram, the actress posted portraits of Juniper and Edward. The actress even joked about ditching acting to become a paparazzo for cats. "When all else fails turn cat paparazzi (sic)," wrote the star. Extending the joke, a well-known celebrity paparazzo commented on the picture, inviting the actress to join his team.

On the work front, the actress has been spotted making rounds to a dubbing studio in the Mumbai city.

Rihanna gets real

DC CORRESPONDENT

After conquering the music world, singer Rihanna had made waves in the cosmetics industry with her inclusive make up line called Fenty Beauty in 2017. Moving ahead, the Umbrella singer has now launched a line of skin care products called Fenty Skin.

Rihanna opened up about her trio of gender-neutral products — a cleanser, toner and moisturiser — with E!

Talking about the inspiration behind the products, she revealed how she suffered from skin issues. "I kind of got that, like, messed up moustache from the sun," the 32-year-old star explained. "And you don't want to wear makeup, but then you have a moustache because it's just dark," she said, before adding that she started using toner. "I finally started to believe in toner. Because I didn't understand what toner did besides strip my skin all the time....It always felt really dry after, like I just cleaned it with something really harsh, and I don't like that feeling," she said.

She further opened upon the skin issues she has had to deal with in the past. "I've been through several stages of skincare issues, whether it started with acne or products that were too harsh and discoloring my skin, to hyperpigmentation...to getting older, being on a plane all day all night. There's so many things that affect the performance of your skin," she said.
