Book FIR for doc assaults: MHA

New Delhi: The Centre on Saturday asked state governments to register cases and invoke the stringent Epidemic Diseases (Amendment) Act, 2020 against those who indulge in assault on doctors and healthcare professionals. Union home secretary Ajay Bhalla's letter to States and Union Territories came following several incidents of attack on doctors.

Bhagirathi past danger level

Dehradun: Ganga and Bhagirathi rivers in Uttarakhand crossed the danger mark on Saturday following three days of incessant rains in the hills prompting authorities to sound an alert and evacuate villages along their banks. The Ganga exceeded danger level in Haridwar and Rishikesh districts while Bhagirathi crossed it at Devprayag in Tehri district, reports said.

Tech to translate in real time

New Delhi: The Central government is working on a technology that can translate in real time various vernacular Indian languages to enable exchange of communications between two persons not speaking the same language, a top official in the Ministry of Electronics and IT said on Saturday. This ambitious language translation project, with a timeline of 5-7 years, is being developed using artificial intelligence and modern technologies to end the language barrier in the country.

3rd wave in 6-8 weeks: AIIMS

New Delhi: If Covid-appropriate behaviour is not followed, the next wave of the viral infection can strike the country in the next six to eight weeks, AIIMS director Randeep Guleria warned on Saturday. Until a sizeable number of the population are vaccinated, Covid-appropriate behaviour needs to be followed aggressively, he said and stressed on the need for stricter surveillance and area-specific lockdowns in case of a significant surge.

Race for TPCC chief gathers pace in Delhi

DC CORRESPONDENT
HYDERABAD, JUNE 19

After a brief lull, the race for the post of the Telangana Pradesh Congress Committee (TPCC) president has intensified again with aspirants camping in Delhi and lobbying hard with the party high command to secure the post. The issue has taken centre stage after reports emerging from Delhi that the party high command has initiated the process to select the new TPCC chief and it has shortlisted some names for the purpose before zeroing in on one. Congress circles are abuzz that the party high command has shortlisted the names of Bhongir MP Komatireddy Venkat Reddy, Malkajigiri MP Anumula Revanth Reddy, MLC T. Jeevan Reddy and former minister Duddilla Sridhar Babu. An official announcement is expected anytime this week.

● THE FRONTRUNNERS rushed to Delhi to meet AICC leaders and and bag the coveted post

This prompted frontrunners to rush to Delhi and camp there to meet AICC leaders and make efforts to bag the coveted post.

Leaders from Backward Classes led by former MP V. Hanumantha Rao are also making strong efforts to ensure a BC leader gets the post this time, alleging that leaders from the Reddy community had failed to take on the ruling TRS effectively since 2014 due to which the Congress was facing humiliating defeats in elections for the past seven years since the formation of the new state. The appointment of the TPCC chief is getting delayed under one pretext or the other, testing the patience of Congress leaders and cadres since incumbent chief N. Uttam Kumar Reddy offered to step down after owing responsibility to the party's worst performance in the Assembly elections in December 2018.

The party continued to suffer defeats at the hands of the TRS in rural and urban local bodies polls in 2019, bypolls for the Huzurnagar, Dubbak and Nagarjunasagar Assembly seats and the GHMC, Warangal and Khammam municipal corporation polls. Except for winning four Lok Sabha seats in 2019, the party has had nothing to cheer. Besides the TPCC chief post, there are expectations that four working presidents, vice-presidents and secretaries will also be appointed to pacify disgruntled leaders and to balance caste, region and religion equations in the party. At present, there is a jumbo TPCC consisting of 11 vice-presidents and 31 general secretaries which was constituted in April 2016.

LAC to Covid fight: IAF chief showcases power

ZDC CORRESPONDENT
HYDERABAD, JUNE 19

The Indian Air Force is currently in a phase of intense and rapid infusion of niche technology and combat power, in view of the security scenario in India's neighbourhood, Air Chief Marshal R.K.S. Bhadauria said.

The IAF chief was speaking at the combined graduation parade at the Air Force Academy in Dindigul on the outskirts of the city on Saturday.

The transformation of IAF, he said, was "primarily because of the unprecedented and rapidly evolving security challenges that we face, coupled with rising geopolitical uncertainty in our neighbourhood and beyond." The past few decades, Air Chief Marshal Bhadauria said, established the critical role of air power in achieving victory in any conflict.

"It is in this backdrop that IAF's ongoing capability enhancement assumes tremendous significance," he said, adding that the IAF, over the past year, also increased vigilance amid the tussle with China in Ladakh.

The IAF chief also spoke about how the Air Force assisted in the country's fight against Covid-19. "Strict Covid discipline within the IAF helped us to undertake all Covid tasks on a war-footing," and that the IAF's transport fleet flew more than 3,800 hours within two months in a huge effort within and outside India to transport critical oxygen tankers, and other medical equipment and supplies.

To the graduating cadets, he said, "It is essential for all of you to bear in mind that, as future leaders, you will stand shoulder to shoulder with your comrades in olive greens and whites and prosecute integrated operations. You will be an integral part of this important transition in the years ahead."

Bhadauria said that the IAF was on track for inducting 36 Rafale aircraft by 2022. The timeline for receiving the Rafales was on track, he said.

Lockdown lifted, physical classes begin from July 1

Cabinet takes decision on reports of Covid cases falling

DC CORRESPONDENT
HYDERABAD, JUNE 19

Putting an end to more than five weeks of restricted movements and stringent curbs on normal activities, the state Cabinet on Saturday decided to lift the lockdown entirely from Sunday.

The Cabinet also directed the authorities to reopen all categories of educational institutions from July 1 with full preparedness. Students are allowed to attend classes physically once the institutions resume their activities.

The Cabinet meeting, chaired by Chief Minister K. Chandrashekar Rao, which met here on Saturday at Pragathi Bhavan, examined the reports submitted by the medical and health department officials which stated that number of new Coronavirus positive cases had drastically come down — it was 1,362 on Saturday — and the situation was now under control.

Hence the Cabinet has arrived at the decision to lift the lockdown. The ongoing lockdown from 6 pm to 6 am ended on Saturday.

The Cabinet has instructed officials from all the departments to lift all restrictions imposed during the lockdown since mid-April.

It also observed that the Covid-19 cases were coming under control in the neighbouring states also. Based on the reports submitted by the officials, the Cabinet came to the conclusion that compared to other states, Coronavirus cases had come under control faster in Telangana.

HYDERABAD, JUNE 19

The Cabinet approved the construction of three super speciality hospitals under the GHMC limits and to modernise the Telangana Institute of Medical Sciences (Tims) at Gachibowli as a super speciality hospital.

Of the three new hospitals, one will come up on the premises of the Government Chest Hospital, the second on the fruit market at Gaddiannaram, from where the market was shifted, and the third one will be in Medchal-Malkajigiri district between Alwal and the Outer Ring Road (ORR).

The Cabinet has ratified the decision taken by the government to modernise the vegetable market at Kothapet and convert it into an integrated vegetable and meat market.

The Cabinet instructed officials concerned to relaunch the sheep distribution scheme for the Yadav community. It directed officials to take measures to set up modern hairdressing salons in villages as decided earlier for the benefit of the Nayi Brahmin community.

It was also decided that measures should be taken to ensure that the toddy tappers get insurance immediately, in the way farmers' insurance is being paid quickly.

The Cabinet also instructed the officials to take measures to pay the handloom workers' insurance.

The government after announcing complete lifting of the lockdown warned that anyone found violating the face mask rule will be penalised ₹1,000. The government, in its orders issued on Saturday evening, also made it clear that individuals must maintain social distancing.

It said that wearing of a face mask will be compulsory in public places, in work places, and in all means of transport and any deviation will attract prosecution.

The orders were signed by Chief Secretary Somesh Kumar.

Amid reshuffle talk, ex-babu close to PM is UP BJP V-P

DC CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI, JUNE 19

Former bureaucrat A.K. Sharma, considered close to Prime Minister Narendra Modi, was appointed vice-president of the BJP's Uttar Pradesh unit after speculations of him being inducted in the state Cabinet have been doing the rounds for the past couple of weeks.

In a rejig in the state organisation ahead of the Assembly polls next year, the party in a statement by its state unit chief Swatantra Dev Singh, named Archana Mishra from Lucknow and Amit Valmiki from Bulandshahr as secretaries of the state unit.

Sharma, a former IAS officer, who had joined the BJP in January this year and is an MLC, is known for delivering time-bound results and was Modi's secretary during his tenure as the Gujarat Chief Minister. He is credited for handling the Vibrant Gujarat campaign to get investments to the state and was involved in the MSME ministry's affairs, a crucial department working under the PM's plan for the revival of the economy.

The BJP central leadership has held series of meetings with the state leadership, including Chief Minister Yogi Adityanath. BJP national general secretary (organisation) B.L. Santhosh and UP in-charge Radha Mohan Singh are expected to meet party leaders in Lucknow next week.

‘Flying Sikh’ used to train at EME Centre, run up Ammuguda hill with stone-filled bag

MOSES KONDETY | DC
HYDERABAD, JUNE 19

Milkha Singh made waves at the 1960 Olympics in Rome, but his baby steps as a sprinter were taken here in Secunderabad, where he was recruited in the Corps of Electrical and Mechanical Engineers (EME) of the Army back in 1952.

The 'Flying Sikh' died of Covid complications late on Friday night. He was 91. He trained in and around the EME Centre area, building his strength and stamina by taking up many an uphill task — he would run up the Ammuguda hill carrying a stone-filled bag and also run alongside a train, which ran on the then metre gauge track between Bolaram and Ammuguda.

"The driver of a particular train used to encourage and egg me on. It was kind of a motivation and I could run for a longer distance," Milkha recalled in interviews later. He has always credited the Army, EME and Secunderabad Cantonment for his sporting success. "Had I not joined the Army I would not have worked so hard,"

Milkha said. Fittingly, a colony in the EME Centre is named after him, as also the Stadium inside the EME Centre where he trained. While inaugurating the Milkha Singh Stadium in 2014, the legend had got emotional, kissed the turf and said it was like a gurudwara to him.

Secunderabad, where Milkha lived from 1952 to 1960 and prepared for the 1960 Olympics at which he missed the 400 metres bronze medal by a whisker, was always special to him. "Whenever he came across athletes from Secunde-rabad/Hyderabad, he would develop an instant affinity. 'Mai Secunderabad ka rice khany ke baad running start kiya' (I have started running after eating rice in Secunderabad) he once told me in jest. He would also talk about his many memories here," Prabhakara Rao Mulagala, veteran long distance runner from the city, told this newspaper.

"We should also remember Milkha used to run on cinder tracks, not on the present synthetic ones that give athletes the advantage of up to a second. He was the first to run the 400m under 46 seconds, at a meet in Oslo (Norway) a fortnight or so before the Rome Olympics, where he was unfortunate to finish fourth, 0.1 second behind Malcolm Spence of South Africa. Later, South Africa was banned from sport for 36 years because of apartheid... that bronze could've belonged to Milkha, who competed against the world's best," added Prabhakara, who has won 300-plus gold medals at national and international races, and at 69 still competes in races.

It said that while shops, offices, and establishments can open on Sunday, they will have to ensure Covid-19 safety norms of physical distancing and sanitisation are followed. The establishments will be held responsible if they fail to implement these norms and will attract action under Disaster Management Act, 2005 and other relevant Acts.

EDUCATION DEPT. TO PREPARE GUIDELINES

With educational institutions getting reopened from July 1, the Cabinet directed the education department to prepare instructions and guidelines on compulsory attendance of students, online classes and other related issues and release the same at the earliest.

The Cabinet sought support and cooperation from people for its decision, which was taken in order to safeguard livelihoods and for the general benefit of public life. However, the Cabinet made it clear that lifting of lockdown should not lead to negligent behaviour; people should wear masks, maintain physical distance and use sanitisers and other self-regulatory methods to curtail the spread of the virus.

TS OKAYS PROJECTS ON KRISHNA TO COUNTER AP

DC CORRESPONDENT
HYDERABAD, JUNE 19

The state Cabinet on Saturday approved the construction of irrigation projects to lift water from the Krishna river to safeguard the interests of Telangana state and to counter the 'illegal projects' undertaken by the Andhra Pradesh government.

The Cabinet expressed severe anger over the AP government going ahead with the construction of the Rayalaseema lift irrigation scheme (RLIS) to divert Srisaillam water over the Krishna as well as the right canal of the Rajolibanda Diversion Scheme (RDS) over the Tungabhadra, terming both as 'illegal projects' being undertaken without any approvals of regulatory bodies concerned. The Cabinet took strong exception to the Centre's inaction in ensuring a justifiable share of Krishna water to Telangana state even seven years after the formation of the state.

It said that though the Telangana state government had withdrawn the case from the Supreme Court on Krishna water sharing, complying with the Centre's assurance that it would reallocate Krishna water between the Telugu states, nothing had happened so far.

It was decided to construct a project at Alampur to divert 60 to 70 thousand million cubic feet (tmc ft) through pipelines and fulfil the needs of the Palamuru Ranga Reddy lift irrigation project ayacut. A total of two lakh acres will be irrigated in Nalgonda and Suryapet districts by constructing the Pulichintala left canal.

Another lift irrigation project will be constructed at Sunkesula reservoir to irrigate one lakh acres in Nadigadda region in Nalgonda district. It was also decided to construct a flood canal at Kusumurthi village where the Bhima river enters Telangana.

The Cabinet decided to enhance Kalwakurthy lift irrigation reservoirs capacity to 20 tmc ft.

A lift irrigation project will be constructed at Nagarjunasagar tail pond to irrigate two lakh acres upstream under Nagarjunasagar project limits.

Hell hath no fury like officials scorned!

Our bureaucrats seem to get a tad touchy when someone points out their negligence. A recent report in these columns on a wounded tiger enraged them to such an extent that one of them called the reporter a "rascal" on his official Twitter handle. The report was about the efforts of forest officials in Andhra Pradesh and Telangana state in catching and providing treatment to an injured tiger. The tiger which belongs to the Nagarjunasagar tiger reserve (NSTR) in Andhra Pradesh was spotted in the Amrabad tiger reserve (ATR) in Telangana state. The tiger was in discomfort, with a clear wound under one of its eyes. So, officials from NSTR and ATR joined forces to catch it if needed, treat the wound, and save the tiger. But the report in this newspaper about the tiger being injured in NSTR and moving into ATR was enough to ruffle the feathers of some babus. NSTR officials seemed to be upset over the report saying the tiger was injured in AP. 'NSTR-tiger' took to Twitter to say there was no scientific evidence that the tiger was injured in AP. In another tweet, 'NSTR-tiger' said the reason for the injury was yet to be found. "A 'rascal' wrote that it was injured in AP," an NSTR official said, venting his ire!

Muthyala Raju finally gets a Herculean task

Finally, R. Muthyala Raju, who entered the AP Chief Minister's Office more than two months ago, has got something to do, with his immediate boss Praveen Prakash allocating him some subjects. Raju, who has earned for himself the tag of a hard-working and sincere officer, had to wait for a longer period than most. He has now got housing and CM Relief Fund besides the Herculean task of addressing the problems of elected representatives. Ideally the subject of resolving issues raised by MPs and MLAs should be handled by senior officials as they involve inter-departmental consultations which need lots of pushing and pulling of strings. Apparently, all senior officers in the CMO avoided the task, which the babus consider a headache. Maybe they could have learnt a lesson from former chief secretary S.V. Prasad's unparalleled handling of the CMO during the Naidu regime. With an everlasting smile, Prasad used to receive MPs and MLAs, read a patient hearing and try to resolve their issues. However, his successors with some exceptions like Ajay Kallam have avoided meeting people's representatives, leave alone addressing their problems.

TD neta throws NRIs' success party

A mega agglomeration of companies is on an aggressive mode of acquisitions. The recent addition to its basket is a group of educational institutions set up by non-resident Indians. It owns an engineering and two medical colleges besides intermediate colleges. The company is also close to completing the acquisition of a corporate hospital in Hyderabad's financial hub. The mega company had its humble beginnings in the irrigation sector and made enormous strides within a short span of time. The company no doubt owes a lot to late chief minister Y.S. Rajasekhara Reddy for the first break. The company earned the reputation of honouring its commitments, and that helped it grow across India and win friends cutting across party lines. The vision of the man behind the company's success is that irrigation works have been reaching the saturation point and diversification is the only answer. The company made forays into oil and gas, battery-run vehicles, realty and has now entered the education sector: Joyous over a friend's success, the flamboyant son of a veteran Rayalaseema Congress leader currently sailing with the Telugu Desam threw a grand party recently to celebrate the takeovers!

Old photo of KTR opposing sale of state lands goes viral on social media

Political parties and leaders adopt divergent stands on specific issues while in power and when they are in the Opposition. An old picture of IT minister K.T. Rama Rao has gone viral on social media platforms of late, its newsworthiness being the row over auctioning government lands to raise funds for welfare schemes and development programmes. In this picture, KTR is seen sitting on a dharna on a road holding placards against the then Congress government's decision to sell land parcels in Hyderabad to raise funds. The placards read, 'Stop sale of government lands' and 'State government must stop indulging in real estate business'. Now, the TRS is in power Telangana and the government has put up public lands for sale. In a strange twist, Rama Rao and finance minister T. Harish Rao, who had strongly opposed the land sale by the previous Congress government, are now the members of the Cabinet sub-committee on resource mobilisation which has recommended that the government sell its land assets to raise revenues. In fact, Harish Rao is heading this committee; he was once arrested when he tried to block the sale of government lands by the then Congress government.

Parents unwilling to send kids to schools

Oppose govt's decision over physical classes from July 1

HARLEEN MINOCHA | DC
HYDERABAD, JUNE 19

Even as the state government on Saturday said it was ready to open schools and colleges for physical classes from July 1, the decision has not been received well by parents. Several parents in the city unanimously said they were not ready to let their children out in public yet. Some even said this decision was a sure shot invitation to a third wave of the virus spread in the state.

"There has been enough talk about this and a lot of experts are suspecting that the third wave which is imminent, will affect children the most. Allowing schools and colleges to reopen, even with as many precautionary measures as possible, cannot ensure safety," said Venkat Sainath, a parent and member of the Hyderabad Schools Parents' Association.

Other parents said until there was a vaccine ready for children under the age of 18 years, they would choose not to send kids for physical classes. "This is the most irresponsible decision the government can take despite the crisis we witnessed a little over a month ago. How and who will ensure that people don't let their guard down once normalcy begins in the state?" another parent of a Class 7 student said.

However, most private schools said they were ready with all facilities in place to conduct physical classes safely as per government guidelines. Suneer Nagi, Principal, Pallavi Model School in the city, while expressing confidence in their preparation to conduct the classes and reopening school for students, also highlighted the concerns parents might have in sending children. "We are prepared for whatever the government finally decides, but will the parents feel comfortable?" she asked.

Big schools like Meridian, Glendale, Johnson Grammar and the like also said that they were prepared for any scenario, and would wait for detailed guidelines from the state government before reaching a decision on managerial level.

Even as detailed guidelines for reopening of government and private educational institutions in the state are awaited, the Telangana State United Teachers Federation (TSUTF), a government teachers' body, has said that government schools were not prepared to commence from July 1.

In a statement here on Saturday, the Federation members, while welcoming the decision to resume physical schooling, also pointed out that most schools lacked basic infrastructure and July 1 was round the corner. "No action has been taken to fill vacant teacher posts and there is an urgent need to appoint staff to maintain sanitation in schools," they said.

The teachers' body demanded that the government should urgently restore educational volunteers and concentrate on providing quality mid-day meals in all government schools.

Khammam MP to extend full cooperation to ED

No switchover to BJP: Nama

DC CORRESPONDENT
HYDERABAD, JUNE 19

Khammam MP Nama Nageshwara Rao, the TRS floor leader in the Lok Sabha, on Saturday rubbished reports of him quitting the party to join the BJP to protect his business interests in the wake of recent raids by the Enforcement Directorate (ED) on Madhucon Group of Companies owned by his family members in ₹1,064 crore bank loan fraud case.

Speaking to media persons here, Nageshwara Rao said TRS president and Chief Minister K. Chandrashekar Rao and the people of the K h a m m a m Parliamentary constituency were his strength, adding that there was no question of deserting the TRS or betraying the faith of Chandrashekar Rao in him.

"Whatever troubles I might face, I will continue to sail with the TRS and KCR" he said.

Nageshwara Rao said he would appear before the ED on June 25, as per the summons issued by the latter and extend full cooperation to the ED and other investigating agencies probing the alleged bank fraud of ₹1,064 crore.

He made it clear that he did not hold any executive position in Madhucon Group, which was named in the alleged fraud as he relinquished posts in 2004 after he entered politics. He said he was being dragged into the issue unnecessarily. The TRS MP said Ranchi Expressways Limited was formed as a special purpose vehicle in March 2011, and was awarded a contract for four-lane works of Ranchi-Jameshedpur section from 114 km to 277.4 of National Highway-43 in Jharkhand on DBFOT (design-build-Finance-operate-transfer) basis.

He claimed the NHAI awarded the contract, but failed to fulfil its contractual obligations and even took a U-turn by terminating the contract without following the terms of contract, putting their company to material loss and damages.

"The issue has been referred to arbitration following which the Arbitration Tribunal was constituted on November 11 last year and the proceedings are in progress," he said. He said the project got deferred due to inordinate delay in handing over of the land (Right of Way) and obtaining of environmental and forest clearance by the NHAI.

"Out of the total project cost of ₹1,655 crore, the company's equity was ₹463 crore, but it had brought in ₹485 crore, whereas bankers released only ₹652 crore. There was no default or siphoning off funds because the money was in the escrow account over which only banks have the authority to withdraw. Since the issue is sub judice, I cannot comment more," Nageshwara Rao added.

DEVELOPMENT IN KMC AT FULL SPEED: MAYOR

DC CORRESPONDENT
KARIMNAGAR, JUNE 19

Mayor Yadagiri Sunil Rao on Saturday said development of various divisions within Karimnagar Municipal Corporation (KMC) limits is being accelerated at an expenditure of ₹70 crore.

He was speaking after laying the foundation stone for constructing a CC road and drainage canals at Kisan Nagar in 26th division of the corporation at a cost of Rs. 24 lakh. Pipelines will also be repaired, so that water supply in the area improves, he said.

Sunil Rao disclosed that Chief Minister K. Chandrasekhar Rao has been sanctioning ₹2.5 crore every month under the Pattana Pragathi Programme to KMC for carrying out various development works. Kisan Nagar and Karkhanagadda areas coming under 3, 4, 25 and 26 divisions are the ones lagging behind in terms of development. These are also the areas where most of the poorer families reside. "Our endeavour is to take up developmental works in such areas, so that living conditions could be improved," he said.

It is the people who create history, not individuals, said former minister Etala Rajendar on Saturday, apparently referring to Chief Minister K Chandrashekar Rao. Addressing a press meet along with BJP state unit president Bandi Sanjay Kumar, the former minister stressed once again on the point of ownership of the party which he had raised a few months ago in Huzurabad. He said any party did not have a single owner, every activist who was working in the party was also an owner of it.

He said the Telangana Rashtra Samithi (TRS) leaders were threatening people to stop the welfare schemes if they did not support the party.

They had to remember that nobody had the right to stop the schemes that were introduced by the government, he said.

"The TRS is purchasing leaders. By this, one can understand how worse the situation of the TRS is in the state. Purchasing leaders like commodities in the market is against democracy. If elections are held in a democratic way, then the TRS will not even get its deposit," he said.

After the formation of a separate Telangana, K Chandrashekar Rao became arrogant. He killed democracy and self-respect of the people. The power and authority made him conceited and he stopped taking wise decisions in the best interest of people, Rajendar said.

Rajendar said it was the TRS ministers and other leaders who wished to have by-elections in Huzurabad and demanded that he resign from the party.

But they forgot that it is the people of Huzurabad who had given six times victory to him and now they were ready to teach a befitting lesson to the TRS in upcoming by-elections in Huzurabad, he added.

Bandi Sanjay Kumar, speaking on the occasion, said if the TRS and its leaders tried to malign the image of Rajendar, then the BJP would demolish landlord Chief Minister's gaddis.

"The BJP is the only platform for real fighters who bravely participated in the separate Telangana movement facing a lot of hardships. As they are losing self-respect being in the TRS, many true hard workers who played a key role in achieving separate Telangana are leaving the TRS and joining the BJP," he said.

Since Huzurabad had been developed in all sectors under the leadership of Rajendar, the people had given him six times victory, Sanjay Kumar said and asked how TRS leaders could forget that.

"The BJP is going to hoist its saffron flag on the Golconda Fort in the days to come. The BJP is the only party which has guts to face Chandrashekar Rao and will win with a thumping majority in the Huzurabad by-elections," he added.

Two-wheeler lifting gang busted

Warangal: Warangal commissionerate of police arrested ten people along with a four-member gang of two-wheeler lifters in Gundala of Jangaon district on Saturday. Police seized 19 two-wheelers worth about Rs 11.5 lakh from them.

The gang members were identified as Bunga Mahesh, Amritam Rajesh and Samanu Shivaji all three from Raghunathpalli of Jangaon district along with Lakkamalla Ravi of Govindaraopet village in Mulugu district.

Warangal Police Commissioner Tarun Joshi said Mahesh and Shivaji used to work in a catering service. They were acquainted with the other two accused, Ravi and Rajesh with whom they grew closer. Their earning not sufficient for their boozing, they decided to steal two-wheelers that are locked on the roads and sell them.

The accused used to observe the movements of the owner of the vehicle being stolen in advance before finding a suitable time. The accused stole nine two-wheelers under Jangaon police station limits, five vehicles under Raghunathpalli police station, three vehicles under Matwada police station, one each under Ghanpur and Gundala police stations. The stolen vehicles were sold at a low price.

The police are received complaints about the thefts of these two-wheelers formed special teams with West Zone DCP Sreenivas Reddy, Ghanpur ASP Abhinav Gaikwad and Jangaon Rural Circle Inspector Vinay Kumar. As part of the investigation, CCTV cameras in Jangaon town were examined to identify the culprits.

FOLLOWING HEAVY RAINS, FIVE GATES OF KLIP LIFTED

DC CORRESPONDENT
KARIMNAGAR, JUNE 19

Officials have been releasing water from Kaleshwaram Lift Irrigation Scheme (KLIS) Project for the past two days, following heavy rains in Maharashtra and huge inflow of water into Godavari River.

By lifting five gates from the Sri Raja Rajeshwara Reservoir (Mid Manair Dam) situated at Kodurupaka village of Boinapally mandal in Rajanna Sircilla district, officials of irrigation department released around 6,300 cusecs of water to Lower Manair Dam (LMD) along with lifting around 9,450 cusecs of water from Gayatri Pump House situated in Ramadagu of Karimnagar district to the MMD.

At present the water level in MMD is about 12.85 tmc ft (thousand million cubic feet) against its full capacity of 27.5 tmc ft. Whereas the water level in LMD is around 10 tmc against its full capacity of 25 tmc ft.

The officials said that the process of lifting of water from Gayatri pump house to MMD and releasing water to LMD would continue until the water level in LMD reaches 20 tmc ft.

At present, the water level at Lakshmi barrage is 11.953 tmc ft against its full capacity of 16.17 tmc ft. The inflow of water from upstream into the barrage is around 3,600 cusecs of water while outflow of water is around 21,000 cusecs. The water level in Sarawathi barrage is 7.96 tmc ft against its full capacity of 10.87 tmc ft. The inflow of water from Lakshmi barrage into Sarawathi barrage is around 22,400 cusecs of water and outflow is around 21,000 cusecs of water, whereas the water level in Parvathi barrage is 5.176 tmc ft against its full capacity of 8.83 tmc ft. The inflow of water from Sarawathi barrage into Parvathi barrage is around 14,650 cusecs while the outflow is around 10,440 cusecs.

ADILABAD COTTON, SOYA FARMERS BEAR THE BRUNT OF HEAVY RAINS

DC CORRESPONDENT
ADILABAD, JUNE 19

Unseasonal heavy rains that lashed last week have resulted in only 60 to 70 per cent of germination of seeds that were sown for Kharif in Adilabad district.

The heavy rains have added to the woes of farmers by a lack of appropriate germination of seeds.

In some places, agriculture fields that are adjacent to overflowing rivulets and streams were completely inundated.

As a result, farmers have to go in for purchase of additional cotton or soya seeds to fill the 'gaps' as many of those sown were washed away.

Ramakanth, a farmer from Palli (K) village, said that only 60 per cent of the cotton seeds that he had sown were germinated due to heavy rains and they were filling the gaps by sowing fresh seeds in their 20 acres of land in Talamadugu mandal.

He pointed out that in normal circumstances because of normal rainfall and good moisture in the soil, germination would be 90 per cent but cotton or soya seeds get washed away by heavy rains.

Agriculture officials say that farmers can sow cotton or soya seeds when there is 30-40 per cent moisture in the soil. But, the unexpected rains caused huge damage to the freshly-sown seeds.

CM to lay foundation for new hospital on Monday

DC CORRESPONDENT
WARANGAL, JUNE 19

Chief Minister K. Chandrasekhar Rao is going to visit Warangal on June 21 to take part in several development activities. Revealing details of the CM's schedule here on Saturday, minister for Panchayat Raj Errabelli Dayakar Rao said that the KCR would lay the foundation stone for the multi super-speciality hospital on the demolished jail premises at 10.30 am and inaugurate the administrative building of the Kalaji Narayana Rao University of Health Sciences (KNRUHS) at 11 am. Later, the CM will inaugurate the Integrated Collectorate Complex of Warangal Urban district at 11.45 am and move on to Yadadri-Bhongir district.

Speaking on the occasion, Errabelli said CM KCR has been striving to tackle the Covid-19 situation effectively despite the Central government obstructing development in the state. He said that the BJP-led Central Government which claims credit in the Covid-19 vaccination drive across the country has in fact did very little compared to other nations. "Even though the vaccine is produced in Telangana, the Centre neglected the state and did not give a fair share. The state also made its own arrangements in regard to oxygen supply while the centre made no attempts to help," he pointed.

Referring to some of the BJP leaders, who approached the court to stop the construction of a 24-story multi super-speciality hospital, he said it is ridiculous given that the BJP leaders are known land grabbers.

Chief Whip Dasyam Vinay Bhaskar, MLAs Nannapuni Narendar, Aroori Ramesh, KUDA chairman Marri Yadava Reddy and Warangal District Libraries chairman Md Aziz Khan were present among others.

IN BRIEF

AYESHA: WILL CONTINUE FIGHT FOR L'DWEEP

Thiruvananthapuram, Jun 19: Filmmaker Ayesha Sulthana, who was booked for sedition in Lakshadweep, on Saturday said she has not done anything against the country so far and would continue her fight till the islanders get justice.

She was talking to the media at the airport in Kochi before leaving to the archipelago to appear before the Kavaratti police for questioning on Sunday in connection with the case. She said her advocate was also accompanying her and she would cooperate with the police. "I believe that I will get justice as I have not done anything wrong."

My words were wrongly interpreted and I have already mentioned everything in detail in my recent Facebook post," Sulthana said.

On her controversial usage of 'biological weapon' during a television discussion, she said all these controversies had happened based on that particular word. "I have not done anything against the country. All these have happened over a word I uttered. So, it is my responsibility to prove that I have not done anything wrong. I will continue my fight till my land and people get justice," she added.

ODISHA STUDENTS SHINE AT NASA COMPETITION

AKSHAYA KUMAR SAHOO | DC BHUBANESWAR, JUNE 19

Seven students from Odisha have excelled in the National Aeronautical Space Agency (NASA) competition by developing fasteners or nuts and bolts which will be part of NASA's space launch on June 24.

The nuts and bolts have been developed by using four different metals by the seven-member team of Young Tinker Academy from the state.

This experiment of the team has been selected for the next space mission of NASA.

Hundreds of participants from 73 countries had taken part in the 'Cubes in Space' competition.

As per reports, the fasteners developed by the students will be part of NASA's SR-7 rocket mission scheduled for June 24. The nuts and bolts will be sent in the rocket to check whether they could stand out in space.

"It was very difficult to develop the fasteners. We worked for 24 hours- researching and searching for the proper materials. We learned many new things during the entire process and it was a great experience," said Sriya Sahoo, a young scientist who is part of the seven-member team.

NEARLY 2L COVID WARRIORS YET TO TAKE JAB

DC CORRESPONDENT BHUBANESWAR, JUNE 19

Nearly two lakh registered health care workers (HCWs) and Frontline Workers (FLWs) in Odisha have not taken vaccine shots against Covid-19.

A letter issued by the state health department to district collectors, commissioners of municipal corporations, chief district medical and public health officers revealed this on Saturday.

As per the document, a total of 1,97,217 registered health care and frontline workers have not taken vaccines so far. It includes 1,36,170 health care workers and 61,047 frontline workers. The HCWs and FLWs who are honoured with the status of Covid warriors for leading the fight against the pandemic were the first priority group in the vaccination drive.

The health department shared a district-wise list of HCWs and FLWs who have registered in the government's CoWIN app but have not taken the jabs yet.

As per the list, the highest numbers of 17,407 health care and frontline workers have not taken the jabs in Bhubaneswar followed by Sundergarh (14,856), Ganjam (13,613), Bhadrak (11,892) and Khordha (11,858). Three other districts which have more than 10,000 such unvaccinated health and frontline workers are Mayurbhanj (10,519), Cuttack (10,347) and Balasore (10,316). The additional chief secretary (health) Pradipta Mohapatra has directed the district administration and municipal authorities to vaccinate all HCWs and FLWs, who were registered but not vaccinated, within June 20.

PUNJAB CM DEFENDS GIVING JOBS TO SONS OF CONG. MLAs

CHANDIGARH, Jun 19:

Under fire from the opposition over giving jobs to sons of two Congress MLAs, Punjab CM Amarinder Singh defended the decision, saying it was a recognition of the sacrifices made by their grandfathers, who laid down their lives for the country. The Punjab cabinet on Friday decided to appoint Arjun Pratap Singh Bajwa as an inspector in the Punjab Police and Bisham Pandey as a naib tehsildar in the Revenue Department as a special case on compassionate ground.

Arjun Pratap Singh Bajwa is the son of Qadian MLA Fateh Jung Singh Bajwa while Ludhiana MLA Rakesh Pandey is the father of Bisham Pandey.

Arjun Bajwa is the grandson of former Punjab Minister Satnam Singh Bajwa, who laid his life in 1987 for the sake of peace and harmony in the state while Bisham Pandey is the grandson of Joginder Pal Pandey who was gunned down by terrorists in 1987, the government had said on Friday.

The chief minister on Saturday said those who make a sacrifice for the nation can, and should, never be forgotten.

Their families deserve to be compensated for the loss, he further said while informally interacting with media persons outside the residence of Milkha Singh, where he had gone to pay his last respects to the legendary athlete.

Taking a swipe at the SAD and AAP, which have criticised the government's move, the CM said if these parties provide names of any youth whose father/grandfather has made similar sacrifices for the nation, they will also be provided jobs in the government.

AIIMS chief: Third wave is inevitable

Guleria says it could hit the country in six to eight weeks

DC CORRESPONDENT NEW DELHI, JUNE 19

A third Covid wave in India is "inevitable", and it could hit the country in the next six to eight weeks, AIIMS chief Dr Randeep Guleria said on Saturday amid unlocking in many parts of the country after weeks of strict restrictions. The country's main challenge is vaccinating a huge population, he said.

"As we have started unlocking, there is again a lack of Covid-appropriate behaviour: We don't seem to have learnt from what happened between the first and the second wave. Again crowds are building up... people are gathering. It will take some time for the number of cases to start rising at the national level. Third wave is inevitable and it could hit the country within the next six to eight weeks... maybe a little longer. It all depends on how we go ahead in terms of Covid-appropriate behaviour and preventing crowds," Dr Guleria told a news channel.

India reported 60,753 new cases of Covid-19 and 1,647 deaths in the last 24 hours. The active caseload has declined to 7.60 lakh, which is lowest after 74 days, and daily recoveries continue to outnumber daily new cases for the 37th consecutive day. India's Recovery Rate has reached 96.16 per cent and daily Positivity Rate stands at 2.98 per cent.

With the pace of vaccination still slow, health experts feel that vaccination is the only way to prevent vulnerability to infection. Union health secretary Ajay Bhalla has written to states to vaccinate as many people as possible in an expeditious manner.

Pawar says take warning of third wave seriously

SONU SHRIVASTAVA | DC MUMBAI, JUNE 19

Maharashtra deputy chief minister Ajit Pawar on Saturday asked people not to lower their guard against Covid in view of the possible third wave of the pandemic.

He warned people against visiting tourist attractions just because restrictions have been eased.

Mr Pawar said that the warning of a third wave needs to be taken seriously. Mr Pawar held a review meeting with officials over the coronavirus situation in Pune district.

Later speaking with reporters, he said that if people go out for tourism purposes, the administration would not be left with any option except imposing a 15-day quarantine regime on such people after their return to home.

As per the state's weekly review of the five level unlock categories, Pune city is under level-II, which means most of the establishments can be allowed to open with time restrictions.

Mr Pawar said that the coronavirus numbers are coming down, but as a precautionary measure, it has been decided that all the shops under the non-essential category, malls, hotels, and restaurants in Pune will remain closed on weekends.

PUNJAB CANCELS CLASS 12 EXAMS

Chandigarh, Jun 19: The Punjab government on Saturday cancelled Class 12 exams because of the Covid-19 pandemic.

State Education Minister Vijay Inder Singla said the Punjab School Education Board (PSEB) will declare the results as per the pattern of the Central Board of Secondary Education (CBSE).

It was the need of hour to take a decision on examinations as students and parents were worried about admissions to the higher classes, said Singla in a statement here.

Singla said 3,08,000 students enrolled in Class 12 in government, aided and private schools under the Punjab School Education Board in the 2020-21 academic session.

He said it was not possible for the education board to conduct the examinations due to the challenges posed by coronavirus.

The Punjab School Education Board will prepare the result according to a 30:30:40 formula based on the student's performance in Classes 10, 11 and 12, respectively.

MP ALL SET TO VACCINATE 10L PEOPLE TODAY

RABINDRA NATH CHOUDHURY | DC BHOPAL, JUNE 19

Madhya Pradesh government is set to launch a 10-day special vaccination drive on Sunday. The government has set a target to vaccinate 10 lakh people on the opening day of the drive.

This was announced by chief minister Shivraj Singh Chouhan here on Saturday.

Addressing eminent citizens of the state, Mr Chouhan said elected representatives of local civic bodies, social activists and eminent citizens in the localities would be roped in to join the campaign for mass vaccination of the people during the period.

Eminent citizens of the locality along with the health workers would visit people in their houses to extend an invitation to them with 'rice mixed with turmeric' (a traditional way of inviting guests) to get vaccinated, he added.

The slogan of the campaign would be 'get vaccinated, save life', he said.

Mr Chouhan said his government has set a target to vaccinate maximum people in the state by October to stop the third wave. He, however, said the government would not slow down the ongoing 'corona kill' drive focusing on testing and treating of people, despite the dip in new cases in the state.

"We will ensure that testing of 75,000-80,000 people is done every day", he added.

Kerala Cong. chief denies CM's charge of child kidnap plot

Kochi, June 19: Kerala PCC chief K. Sudhakaran on Saturday denied Chief Minister Pinarayi Vijayan's allegation of having plotted to kidnap his two children decades ago and asked why a police complaint had not been registered then.

Hitting out at Vijayan a day after he levelled the allegation during his press meet to give details of Covid-19, Sudhakaran wanted to know why no complaint had been filed.

"Vijayan raised so many allegations. It was the press conference of the Chief Minister. We saw the real Pinarayi Vijayan yesterday (Friday), who came out of the PR agency's cover. His stance was that of a political criminal. I cannot reply like him. My post and stature does not allow me to stoop to his level," Sudhakaran said.

"Vijayan alleged that a late friend of mine had told him that I had planned to kidnap Vijayan's children. Why has he not revealed the details, why has he not complained to the police? He said he had not revealed it to anyone. Not even to his wife. Usually, if there is any threat against kids, one will inform the mother as they are always there to protect the kids. Is that how a father reacts?," Sudhakaran asked.

him by Sudhakaran in an interview, had raised the serious allegation that a person close to the current KPCC president had years ago revealed to him that Sudhakaran had plans to kidnap Vijayan's son and daughter who were school students then.

Sudhakaran, however, refuted the charge and said the Chief Minister had not revealed the details on the matter.

The newly appointed State Congress president, who met reporters here, rejected all the allegations raised by the Chief Minister.

Vijayan had raised allegations against the new KPCC chief after an interview of Sudhakaran was published in a vernacular magazine in which he said he had kicked Vijayan down during an incident that happened around 50 years ago at Brenan College, their alma mater, at Thalassery in Kannur district.

J&K parties yet to take call on talks

YUSUF JAMEEL | DC SRINAGAR, JUNE 19

Jammu and Kashmir's mainstream political leaders are being invited for talks by the Centre next week. The move is seen by political watchers here as the first post-August 2019 major attempt by the Narendra Modi government to end the political stalemate in the erstwhile state.

Former chief minister and People's Democratic Party (PDP), Mehbooba Mufti, confirmed that she has received an invitation for the talks slated to be held in New Delhi on June 24. "Yes, I got a phone call from Delhi, and I have been invited for a meeting on June 24. The meeting will be chaired by Prime Minister Narendra Modi," she told a local news agency KNO.

She, however, added, "I haven't decided yet whether to attend the meet or not."

The PDP's Political Affairs Committee (PAC) headed by Ms. Mufti is meeting here on Sunday to discuss the invitation for the meet which, she said, has no clear-cut agenda but convened to "review the general situation and how to take the political process forward."

PAGD president and former chief minister Farooq Abdullah said that his National Conference party's core group will first sit to discuss how to respond if a formal invitation from the Centre comes and evolve a 'strategy' for such an engagement 'keeping the interests of the J&K people above everything else.'

The PAGD is also likely to hold a meeting soon to work out a joint strategy vis-à-vis the Centre's latest move seeking to break the ground in J&K.

Rising cement prices causes concern

G BABU JAYAKUMAR & D SEKAR | DC CHENNAI, JUNE 19

The unprecedented rise in the prices of cement is turning out to be a major embarrassment for the State government with the construction industry going up in arms at one side and cement manufacturers unrelenting at the other end amidst politicians pointing fingers at the new regime.

The cement cartel in the State had increased the price with a view to earning a bad name to the government, which is otherwise doing a remarkable job on other fronts, Construction and Real Estate Industry Coalition (CRIC) secretary S Yuvaraj alleged.

Pointing out that a bag of cement cost Rs 520 in the State while it was sold for Rs 370 in neighbouring Andhra Pradesh and for Rs 350 in Delhi, Yuvaraj said the price hike has paralysed the construction industry on the whole. However, justifying the price hike, South India Cement Manufacturers Association said that companies had been heavily hit by the lockdown as they were operating with only 30 to 50 per cent of capacity utilization.

The association claimed that there was an increase in the all-round costs that made the increase in prices inevitable but assured that they would work with the State government to provide cement at concessional rates for weaker sections of the society.

Cement industry would remain supportive of every single development initiative of the Tamil Nadu government, the association assured and pointed out that they had protected the interest of their employees during the lockdown period.

With the cement price hike also lending an opportunity to leaders to attack the new government, most opposition leaders have started accusing the government of a nexus with the cement cartel.

On Saturday, PMK leader Anbumani Ramadoss alleged that the price of a bag of cement had gone up by 41 per cent after the total lockdown was imposed. He said the price was Rs 370 earlier and it was now Rs 520. He said that he had drawn the government's attention to the prices shooting through the roof but no action was taken to curb it. Government contractors, too, raised the bogey of the cement price hike, among other things at a meeting called by PWD Minister E V Velu on Saturday.

More than 100 government contractors attended the meeting, along with top government officials. Though they had a plethora of complaints, cement price was also raised by them. They pointed out that the market rates of cement and other construction materials, including steel, were much higher than the rates quoted by PWD.

Prominent Vidarbha leader quits BJP to return to Congress

Chavan indicates 'ghar wapsi' of netas

BHAGWAN PARAB | DC MUMBAI, JUNE 19

Maharashtra may witness 'ghar wapsi' scenes like those in West Bengal as senior Congress leader Ashok Chavan has indicated that many people who had switched their loyalties to the BJP are upset and want to return to their parent party. A decision on their home coming should be taken by the Congress at the earliest, he said.

To celebrate the birth-day of senior Congress leader Rahul Gandhi, the Maharashtra Congress on Saturday had organised an event in Mumbai, where Sunil Deshmukh, a prominent leader from Vidarbha joined the Congress after quitting the BJP.

He was welcomed into the party by former chief ministers Ashok Chavan and Prithviraj Chavan.

Speaking at the event, Ashok Chavan, who is also a state public works department minister, appealed to the state party leadership to expedite efforts to bring back former partymen.

● ASHOK CHAVAN appealed to the state party leadership to expedite efforts to bring back former partymen.

"Those who left the Congress and joined the BJP are upset with their decision. The party should immediately take a call on their return. These leaders should be asked to work vigorously for strengthening the Congress in the state," he said.

Later Ashok Chavan tweeted, "I congratulate Sunil Deshmukh on his home-coming. Several Congress leaders had earlier joined the BJP against their wish. But they have not settled there. Hence, a decision about their ghar wapsi should be taken at the earliest and they should be used for the party's growth."

Prithviraj Chavan also said that many former Congress leaders are regretting their decision to join the BJP. They want to come back to the party, he added.

Mr Deshmukh was elected from Amravati on a Congress ticket in 2004 elections. However, he was denied a ticket in 2009 elections by the party, which instead fielded Raosaheb Shekhawat, son of the then President Pratibha Patil.

Irked by the decision, Mr Deshmukh rebelled against the party, but lost the keenly contested fight to Mr Shekhawat.

In 2014 polls, he joined the BJP and defeated Mr Shekhawat, but five years later he lost to the Congress' nominee, Sulabha Khodke.

SHORT TAKES

PLANE CRASHES
IN SIBERIA, KILLS FOUR

Moscow, June 19: Four people were killed and four others seriously injured on Saturday after a plane carrying parachutists crashed in Siberia, Russian authorities said.

The L-410 plane carrying 19 people crashed around 10:00 am local time (0300 GMT) during a training flight at the Tanay airfield in the Siberian region of Kemerovo — also known as Kuzbass — authorities said. The TASS news agency cited the local prosecutor's office as saying that the failure of one of the plane's engines caused the crash.

GEORGIA TO
PURGE 1L VOTERS
FROM THE ROLLS

Atlanta, June 19: Georgia's secretary of state is making public a list of nearly 102,000 voters who will be removed from the rolls unless they act to preserve their registration.

Republican Brad Raffensperger announced the list, part of an every-other-year bid to remove voters who may have died or moved away. The state has about 7.8 million voters and his office said the removals include 67,000 voters who submitted a change of address form to the US Postal Service, and 34,000 voters who had election mail returned. Voter purges in Georgia became a hot-button issue during the 2018 governor's race between Democrat Stacey Abrams and Republican Brian Kemp. Secretary of state before being elected governor, Kemp oversaw aggressive voter purges during his tenure.

ONTARIO CABINET
GETS TWO MORE
INDO-CANADIANS

Toronto, June 19: Two more Indo-Canadian politicians have been appointed as ministers in a Cabinet reshuffle in Canada's Ontario province, taking the representation of the community members in the Executive Council to three.

Ontario Premier Doug Ford on Friday reshuffled his Cabinet, with former finance minister Rod Phillips — who resigned from his post following a Caribbean vacation during the Covid-19 pandemic — returning as the new minister of long-term care.

Indo-Canadian Prabhmeet Sarkariya, 30, has now been promoted to take over as president of the Treasury Board.

Parm Gill, 47, took on the new portfolio of citizenship and multiculturalism.

Nina Tangri was appointed associate minister of small business and red tape.

POLARISED BY WAR, ARMENIA
VOTES TODAY

Yerevan, June 19: Armenia's leader is facing a tough challenge at the polls after a humiliating defeat for Armenian forces in last year's fighting with Azerbaijan over the separatist region of Nagorno-Karabakh.

Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan called the early election for Sunday, seeking to assuage public anger over the peace deal he signed in November that triggered months of protests demanding his resignation.

The Moscow-brokered agreement ended six weeks of fighting between Armenian and Azerbaijani forces, but saw Azerbaijan reclaim control over large parts of Nagorno-Karabakh and surrounding areas that had been held by Armenian forces for more than a quarter-century.

The deal was celebrated as a major triumph in the Azerbaijani capital of Baku.

STORM BRINGS
RAIN, FLOODS TO
GULF COAST

New Orleans, June 19: Tropical Storm Claudette forced Saturday morning along the US Gulf Coast, bringing heavy rains and flooding to coastal states including Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama.

The National Hurricane Center in Miami said in a 4 am CDT advisory that the storm was located 45 miles (75 kilometres) southwest of New Orleans with maximum sustained winds of 45 mph (75 kph).

Flooding had already begun overnight Friday into Saturday, with local reports of high water over roads and stranded vehicles. Flash flood warnings dotted the coast while flood watches were in effect. With virus restrictions loosened, business owners had been anticipating an influx of tourist cash after a year of lost revenue. But those hopes have been dimmed by the storm.

No bail for Apple
Daily editor, CEO

Hong Kong, June 19: A Hong Kong court ordered the top editor of pro-democracy newspaper Apple Daily and the head of its parent company held without bail Saturday in the first hearing since their arrest two days ago under the city's national security law.

Ryan Law, the chief editor, and Cheung Kim-hung, the CEO of Next Digital, have been charged with collusion with a foreign country to endanger national security in a case widely seen as an attack on press freedom in the semi-autonomous Chinese territory.

Chief Magistrate Victor

So said there was not sufficient grounds to believe they would not violate the security law again, and ordered them held at the Lai Chi Kok detention center. He set the next hearing for August 13.

Law and Cheung arrived at the court in an unmarked white van with covered windows. A handful of activists held up a banner and copies of the Apple Daily outside before the hearing began.

Three others also arrested Thursday two Apple Daily senior editors and another executive have not been charged yet and were released on bail late Friday. — AP

Raisi declared new Iran Prez

Ultraconservative's win expected as many heavyweights barred from running

Ebrahim Raisi

Tehran, June 19: Ultraconservative cleric Ebrahim Raisi was declared the winner Saturday of Iran's presidential election, a widely anticipated result after many political heavyweights were barred from running.

Raisi won 62 percent of the vote with about 90 percent of ballots counted from Friday's election, poll officials said, without releasing turnout figures, after the three other candidates had conceded defeat.

"I congratulate the people on their choice," said outgoing moderate President Hassan Rouhani, who has served the maximum of two consecutive four-year terms and leaves office in August.

Raisi, 60, is set to take over at a critical time, as Iran seeks to salvage its tattered nuclear deal with major powers and free itself from punishing US sanctions that have driven a sharp economic downturn. The head of the Iranian judiciary, whose black turban signifies direct descent from Islam's Prophet Mohammed, Raisi is seen as close to the 81-year-old supreme leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, who has ultimate political power in Iran.

Friday's voting was extended by two hours past the original midnight deadline amid fears of a low turnout of 50 percent or less. Many voters chose to stay away after the field of some 600 hopefuls, including 40 women had been winnowed down to seven candidates, all men, excluding an ex-president and a former parliament speaker. Three of the vetted candidates dropped out of the race two days before Friday's election.

Populist former president Mahmoud Ahmadi-najad, one of those barred from running by the Guardian Council of clerics and jurists, said he would not vote, declaring in a video message that "I do not want to have a part in this sin". Raisi's victory was confirmed Saturday when he received the congratulations of the incumbent and the three other candidates — ultraconservatives Mohsen Rezaei and Amirhossein Qazizadeh Hashemi and reformist Abdolnasser Hemmati.

On election day, pictures of often flag-waving voters dominated state TV coverage, but away from the polling stations some voiced anger at what they saw as a stage-managed election aiming to cement ultraconservative control.

"Whether I vote or not, someone has already been elected," scoffed Tehran shopkeeper Saeed Zareie. "They organise the elections for the media." — AFP

Partygoers, police injured at curfew-busting French rave

Paris, June 19: A 22-year-old man lost his hand and several others were also injured amid clashes as police tried to break up an unauthorised rave party in western France, authorities said Saturday.

The tensions erupted in a field near the Brittany town of Redon on Friday night, just two days before France lifts an overnight virus curfew that's been in place for more than eight months — and has prompted growing frustration among young people. Police repeatedly fired tear gas and charged clusters of violent partygoers who hurled metal balls, gasoline bombs and other projectiles at security forces, according to images of the clashes shared online and the top government 22-year-old lost his hand, according to police who said they believed he had picked up an object that exploded without elaborating.

08 months of overnight virus curfew that has prompted growing frustration among young people, is to be lifted in France but two days prior to that, the unauthorised rave party was held in Redon.

07 hours taken by the police to disperse the crowd. Authorities were still evacuating people from the field even on Saturday morning.

official in the region, prefect Emmanuel Berthier.

Local authorities estimated about 1,500 people took part. Berthier accused the attendees of "extreme me" and "inexcusable" violence. It took police more than seven hours to disperse the crowd, and authorities were still evacuating people from the field Saturday morning, Berthier told reporters. He said an investigation is under way into the overnight events, including how the 22-year-old lost his hand.

Regional gendarme chief Pierre Sauvegrain told France-Info radio that the man was believed to have picked up an object that exploded, without elaborating. An underground New Year's Eve rave party in the same area drew at least 2,500 people and led to multiple arrests.

France has been gradually lifting restrictions in recent weeks as infections wane and vaccinations rise. France's curfew, among the strictest and longest in Europe, is set to expire Sunday.

UN condemns Myanmar coup, calls for arms ban

United Nations, June 19: In a rare move, the UN General Assembly condemned Myanmar's military coup and called for an arms embargo against the country in a resolution demonstrating widespread global opposition to the junta and demanding the restoration of the country's democratic transition.

Supporters had hoped the 193-member world body would approve the resolution unanimously by consensus, but Belarus called for a vote. The measure was approved with 119 countries voting "yes," Belarus voting "no," and 36 countries abstaining.

The resolution was the result of lengthy negotiations by a so-called Core Group, including the European Union and many Western nations and the 10-member Association of Southeast Asian Nations known as Asean, which includes Myanmar. A UN diplomat said there was an agreement with Asean to seek consensus, but in the vote its members were divided with some, including Indonesia and Vietnam, voting yes and others, including Thailand and Laos, abstaining.

The resolution didn't get the overwhelming support its backers wanted. But the action by the General Assembly, while not legally binding, reflects international condemnation of the February 1 coup that ousted Aung San Suu Kyi's party from power and put her under arrest along with many government leaders and politicians.

NYT article in 2020 accused adult giant of posting illegal content online

Pressure on Pornhub grows after 34 women sue

Montreal, June 19: Pornhub has been increasingly under the gun as the adult video site was sued this week by 34 women who say they appeared without consent in footage showing rape, sexual abuse, revenge porn or images of them when they were minors.

"This is a case about rape, not pornography," the plaintiffs said in the statement of claim, describing the website as "likely the largest non-regulatory repository of child pornography in North America and well beyond." Their lawyers accuse MindGeek, the controversial adult entertainment empire that runs Pornhub, of being a "classic criminal enterprise" with a business model based on exploiting non-consensual sexual content.

According to the suit, which was filed in California, MindGeek owns more than 100 pornographic sites, including Pornhub, RedTube, Tube8 and YouPorn, and sees some 3.5 billion visits each month.

"I'm hoping (the lawsuit) will motivate Pornhub, and then also the other companies in this industry, to put in safety measures so that this doesn't happen to anybody else," one of the plaintiffs, who identified herself as Rachel, said on Friday.

The 38-year-old Canadian, who spoke on condition that her real name not be used, recently recounted her years-long struggle to have removed from the internet a video of her being sexually assaulted by her own husband as she lay unconscious, and later posted to Pornhub without her consent.

Although Pornhub took the video down, it had already spread to countless other sites.

"Today is a monumental day," commented Laila Mickelwait of the Traffickinghub campaign to shut down Pornhub and hold its executive accountable, backed by 2.2 million people who signed an online petition. "This lawsuit makes it clear that Pornhub and its parent company Mindgeek are not just a tech company that makes a (content) moderation mistakes," the sex trafficking expert said in a video message on Twitter.

The porn giant has faced a growing backlash since the New York Times published an article in December 2020 in which Pornhub was accused of posting illegal content online, including child pornography and rape videos — which it has denied. — AFP

Harris also spoke at a Covid-19 vaccination mobilisation event at Clark Atlanta University, a historically PoC school. The Biden administration insists that even if the 70 per cent vaccination goal is unmet, it will have little effect on the overall US recovery, which is already ahead of where Biden said it would be months ago. Beijing, June 19: The airport in China's southern city of Shenzhen cancelled hundreds of flights and tightened entry controls Saturday after a restaurant employee tested positive for the Delta Coronavirus variant.

Anyone entering the facility must show a negative virus test from the last 48 hours, Shenzhen Airport Group said in a statement on its official WeChat social media account. City health officials said a 21-year-old waitress at Shenzhen Baoan International Airport had been infected with the Delta variant of the virus.

The woman tested positive during a routine test for airport staff conducted Thursday, she said. Shenzhen, a mainland Chinese city neighbouring Hong Kong, is home to some of Asia's biggest tech companies, including telecoms equipment maker Huawei and gaming giant Tencent. — AFP

UK HOLDS FIRST FESTIVAL SINCE PANDEMIC START

London, June 19: Thousands of heavy metal fans are camping, singing — and even moshing — in the rain at Britain's first full music festival since the start of the Coronavirus pandemic.

The three-day Download Festival, taking place at Donington Park in central England, is one of a series of test events to see whether mass gatherings can resume without triggering outbreaks of Covid-19. About 10,000 fans, a tenth of the festival's pre-pandemic attendance, have tickets to watch more than 40 bands including Frank Carter & The Rattlesnakes and Bullet for My Valentine. Attendees all took Covid-19 tests before the event, and don't have to wear masks. — AP

Ranjona Banerji

Off the beaten track

Man, they don't write songs like that anymore

When I was about 11, my parents bought the album of Andrew Lloyd Weber-Tim Rice's rock opera, Jesus Christ Superstar. It was a family favourite and to this day, we all know the lyrics and music by heart.

There was a special something for me there too. It was Ian Gillan's voice, as Jesus Christ (although every performer on that original album was superb). His rendition of "Gethsemane" (I only want to say) can still move me to tears, over 55 years later.

From there it was a bang, clash, crash straight into rock music. In 1974, Alyque Padamsee put up a fabulous version of Jesus Christ Superstar in Bombay. The performers were Bombay's best from Nandu Bhende as Judas, Madhukar Chandra Dhas as Jesus, Poornima Bhende as Mary Magdalene and Keith Stevenson as Herod, to name just a few of that stupendously talented cast. It was a glorious masterpiece and one which Padamsee recreated. I watched it again in 2015, recovering from surgery and wanting to get out of myself. The electrifying performance of Tirthankar Poddar as Judas was the standout.

But over and over, as I was allowed to operate the family record player myself (careful with the needle, don't scratch the records, put them back carefully), it was Ian Gillan's voice and from there a quickstep to Deep Purple and their Machine Head album. There was no looking back after that.

But maybe I've started all wrong. Maybe I should start at the beginning, with my parents and how their taste in music set the foundation for whatever followed. I belong to an in-between generation. Born in 1962, we were on the edge of change and rebellion but never part of it. Philip Larkin said something or the other about this too. So too were my parents — young enough to twist and shout but too old to be hippies!

The luxury of owning a record player meant that you spent delightful hours at Bombay's Rhythm House or Melody Corner (and much later in Calcutta), going into those curtained booths to listen to records and choose. My parents' best friends had an Osibisa album they all loved, with the Afro-rock band's signature psychedelic flying elephants on the cover. Which is why I refused to go to their concert when they performed in Calcutta, a few years later. Eeee, music my parents listened to!

And what appalling snobbery that was! Our house was filled with Carole King, Joan Baez, Judy Collins, Joni Mitchell, Don McLean, Elton John. Yehudi Menuhin and Ravi Shankar's East Meets West concert conducted by Andrew Previn was a big favourite. As was Offenbach's Gaite Parisienne as my sister and me pretended to be ballet dancers.

At some point though, you make a break. Cassette players meant that you could have your own music and your own mixes. Somebody's somebody's cousin might bring down a latest album which hadn't hit the Indian market yet, and it would be painstakingly shared.

I remember clearly the first two major breaks I made with family listening time — Pink Floyd's Dark Side of the Moon and then eponymous Dire Straits debut album. This meant a big fight with my grandparents — both sides — who had commanded the family music system for Nazia Hassan's Disco Deewane. Don't ask.

But while I was choosing between bands and fandoms, we went to the Jazz Yatra, 1977, at Kala Mandir, Calcutta. And a giant parallel movement was born in my head. This was mighty competition to rock and so many decades later, I still don't know who won.

In between of course, there was Rabindrasangeet and that proverbial master-moshai who never missed a single afternoon lesson in the sapping Calcutta heat. We resented a bit then but now find ourselves in family singongs. Age can be a really nasty experience, the way it proves your parents right!

And all those old Hindi film songs that my Mother hummed and sang and listened to, the movies we saw together in the 1960s and 70s, and the music that wafted up from Tardeo to our flat on the top of Altamont Road in Bombay. About 90 per cent were songs from Rajesh Khanna films, because that's the time frame. Those never go away. Nor do the voices of Begum Akhtar and Bhimsen Joshi.

Of course, if you listened to music in 1970s India as a teenage girl, you could not escape the horror of teenage boys. Full of know-it-all swagger, they were ready to lecture you on the nitty-gritty of the lives of every rock, pop and disco star. I mean, come on. Being female didn't mean that you could not read a magazine or the back of an album cover! Just for the fun of it I would invent rubbish about musicians, just forcefully enough to sow confusion into their minds. If any of you are reading this, no, Giorgio Moroder was not Donna Summers in disguise.

I also invented names of sports cars to annoy big talkers because I found the topic interminably boring: "You mean you've never heard of a Lamorghini Aubergine Orecchiette? And you call yourself a fan?" But that's another story. Sorry.

The upshot is that from this century to that, I haven't moved. I'm stuck somewhere between 1964 and 1990s. All right, maybe a few forays into the early years of the 21st century. Where would you place Guns & Roses? Somewhere there. And of course, whatever music they played at Totos and Ghetto. That would do.

I should be embarrassed, shouldn't I? I had to look up Dua Lipa the other day. Nothing that I read about the Grammys makes sense to me any more. And since I stopped travelling by Mumbai autos and going to the gym, I know nothing about what's happening now music-wise.

But I do remember those goosebumps the first time I heard Roberta Flack singing "Killing Me Softly". Who cares about the rest?

Modi pause on Chumar set the tone for Galwan

Manish Tewari

State of the Union

On June 15, 2020, 20 Indian soldiers were martyred in a barbaric clash with the People's Liberation Army (PLA) in the Galwan Valley. It was the most grave confrontation after the October 20 1975 ambush by the Chinese at Tulung La in which four Assam Rifles personnel lost their lives.

On June 20, the Prime Minister gave a rather bizarre twist to the entire tragedy when he told an all-party meeting that "neither have they intruded into our border, nor has any post been taken over by them (China)". Then why did we lose 20 brave? Did India then intrude into Chinese territory?

Herein lies the nub of the problem qua China. The NDA/BJP government by repeatedly underplaying both the aggressiveness of Chinese intent and blatant intrusions into areas that lie within the Indian perception of what is the Line of Actual Control (LAC). This has exposed a serious chink in their armour that the Chinese have now exploited to the very hilt. That fissure is the government's desperation to protect its narrative of muscular nationalism at any cost. It makes them both muddle and mask the truth.

The problem started way back in 2014 when Modi decided to swing with Xi Jinping in Ahmedabad deliberately playing down the Chinese transgression into Indian territory in Chumar. It is inconceivable that the PLA would embark on this adventurism on the LAC without explicit political clearance from the standing committee of the politburo especially when Xi was visiting India.

The Chinese had tried this stunt a year earlier too in Depsang plain's area. The 19-kilometres deep incursion by an armed patrol of China's People's Liberation Army (PLA) into the strategically delicate Daulat Beg Oldie sector in the Aksai Chin region was noticed on April 16, 2013, and immediately interdicted by the Indo-Tibetan Border Police (ITBP). It came just weeks before Chinese premier Li Keqiang's visit to India between May 19 and 21 and Prime Minister Dr Manmohan Singh's visit to Japan later that month between May 27 and 30.

The Depsang incursion was designed to send twin messages. First, Chinese were experimenting their new found assertiveness after Xi's triple anointment as general secretary of the Chinese Communist Party (CCP), president of the People's Republic of China (PRC) and the chairperson of the Central Military Commission (CMC). Second, it was also a caution to India against expressing overt support to Japan against the background of steadily worsening tensions between China and Japan over the Senkaku (Diaoyu) Islands.

The Chinese were as worried then as they are today about the Quad then. The Standing Committee of the Politburo China's top decision making forum apprehended that the US was again engaged in putting together a broader alliance in the Asia Pacific comprising India, Japan, Vietnam, the Philippines and Australia to contain China's rise.

The Depsang intrusions were handled firmly but with élan by the then UPA government. It was acknowledged upfront that the Chinese had indeed come across India's perception line. A firm message therefore was sent to Beijing that Premier Li Keqiang who was undertaking his first foreign trip would not be very welcome in Delhi if status quo ante was not restored. On May 5, 2013, the Chinese fell back to their default position on the LAC.

As B.G. Verghese pointed out in a signed column on May 28, 2013, "that the government can stand its ground and take farsighted decisions was proven by the way it handled the Chinese intrusion into the Depsang plain without getting rattled or pushed by chauvinistic clamour. At the end of the day, the Chinese blinked and pulled back. That the joint statement issued later did not mention the word 'intrusion' — the PM used the phrase 'incident' — signified a welcome restraint and desire to avoid teasing statements".

However, a year later when Chumar happened on the cusp of Xi Jinping's visit from September 17 to September 20, 2014, an over-sanguine Prime Minister Narendra Modi had the political capital to do that but he blinked. This set the tone for the future.

In Doklam, in the June of 2017, the NDA/BJP government was more interested in a propaganda triumph rather than a substantive outcome. Not only was the withdrawal sequential rather than simultaneous with India withdrawing first, but the Indian government took its eye off the ball and allowed the Chinese to occupy substantial parts of the Doklam plateau within one year of the standoff.

This was followed by the opaque summits in Wuhan in 2018 and Mamallapuram in 2019. A subservient media and a deferential strategic community did

When Chumar happened, an over-sanguine PM desperate to flaunt his newfound importance in his backyard of Gujarat did not send word to Xi Jinping that he would not be very comfy in India if the Chinese did not withdraw before the visit commenced not ask the hard questions as to what really was achieved at these informal tête-a-tête's. By that time the Chinese had sussed out the Indian leadership and had concluded that they were to launch an intrusion across a broad front along the LAC the NDA/BJP government would cover it up rather than deal with it candidly.

This is precisely what happened in April 2020. When the Chinese decided to saunter across the LAC first the government tried to palm it off to differing perceptions of the LAC.

In fact, they had already started running this narrative from December 2019 onwards. Speaking in the Lok Sabha on December 4, 2019, defence minister Rajnath Singh said, "Due to different perceptions of the LAC, sometimes incidents of incursion occur. I accept it. Sometimes the Chinese Army enters here and sometimes our people go over there."

The government stuck to this chicanery from April to the June of 2020 as a mortified country bristling under a harsh lockdown was trying to keep body and soul together. Only after the Galwan tragedy when the body bags could not be kept under the wraps did the nation wake up to the enormity of the challenge. There again the Prime Minister unleashed the mendacities that he has perfected to an art form much to the delight of the Chinese as it endorsed their position that they have never intruded into Indian territory.

One year later this sad saga continues unchecked. After vacating significant territorial positions on the South Bank of Pangong Lake under a yet-to-be-microscopically-evaluated disengagement plan the government tries to escape the antiseptic glare of sunlight by not even allowing Parliament to have a full-fledged debate on perhaps the most portentous national security challenge that India faces today.

VACCINATION DRIVE

The K. Chandrashekar Rao government is doing well by getting people get vaccinated with free vaccine drives. It can also initiate a door-to-door drive by employing health workers, when majority of people are at home, for people who have no access to such initiatives. This will be ensure more people are vaccinated.

FLYING SIKH

Covid-19 has claimed another celebrity ('Flying Sikh' Milkha Singh dies of Covid, DC, June 19). Though his death is a national loss, for the people of Secunderabad Cantonment it is a personal loss. It was in the EME and the AOC areas that he, with due permission from his unit head Major George Abraham, started his running career. People living in the Cantonment would have come across the Flying Sikh practising on the EME and AOC roads. Residents of Secunderabad were elated when he went on to bring laurels for the country.

MUSLIMS AND YOGA

I would like to highlight some rudimentary gaps in Mohan Guruswamy's understanding of Islam (India's culture & how it evolved... Yoga is exercise, it's not Hinduism, DC, June 18). Any poet eulogising of quality of creations like the Sun doesn't make it a worship-worthy element like God. Accession to Kashmir is complete: PM

NEW DELHI, JUNE 19.

Addressing a mammoth public meeting in Handwara about 70 kilometres from here, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi said the accession decision was taken by the people of Kashmir themselves and that could not be reversed now.

Mrs. Gandhi also addressed two public meetings in Gurez and Tangdhar earlier in the day.

Mrs. Gandhi today declared that "we are fully equipped to meet any aggression and will not be cowed down by any threat from any quarters" as reports of unprovoked firing by Pakistani troops came in from Maysampur on the eastern borders tonight.

Lessons in summitry: Meet 'em halfway

A.G. Noorani

Summits, as meetings between heads of state and government are called, are as old as mankind itself. The recent summits which President Joe Biden undertook hold lessons in summitry which has provoked a mass of literature of uneven quality. On his visit to the UK, he was treated to all the pageantry for which the British are famous. Of his 'summit' with Prime Minister Boris Johnson, the less said the better.

The entire objective of Biden's excursion was to repair the damage which Donald Trump had inflicted on America's ties with Western Europe and with Nato. "I want all Europe to know that the United States is there." He amplified "Nato is critically important to us" and that Article 5 is a "sacred obligation".

This provision of the North Atlantic Treaty of 1949 embodies the pledge that a military attack on a member of the alliance will be regarded as an attack on each and all. This was not evident after 9/11. The allies rushed to declare their responsibility. President G.W. Bush decided to go it alone while asking for the allies to contribute their troops.

On June 16, Biden went to Geneva to meet Russia's President Vladimir Putin but not before he had let loose a volley of epithets on Putin. He had referred to him as a "killer".

It was Winston Churchill who first used the word 'summit' in 1953 soon after Stalin's death. He proposed that "a conference on the highest level should take place between the leading powers without long delay". He added that "if there is not at the summits of the nations the will to win the greatest prize... doom-laden responsibility will fall upon those who now possess the power to decide". After this speech the word became part of political vocabulary. However, Churchill's own foreign office balked at the idea. The US secretary of state was cool to it. Accordingly, only a foreign ministers' conference took place that year. The only postwar Big Four Summit to meet was the Geneva Conference from July 18 to 23, 1955.

On the one side are those who regard summitry as a panacea for all international ills. On the other stand the critics who condemn it as worse than useless, as in fact positively dangerous.

There are examples of successful summits held not after some improvement in relations but while the countries were tottering on the brink. The Nehru-Liaquat meeting in 1950, for instance. What distinguished them was that, although the objective situation was bad, there was on both sides such an overwhelming desire to mend matters as to make the summit worthwhile. There must be at least the will to listen, to confer and to compromise. Without these, the best prepared summit will fail.

However, such is the complexity of most modern problems that even where the will to meet does exist, the summit would be futile if the diplomatic groundwork is not done well and in advance.

Lack of prior preparation is the principal ground of expert criticism of summits. George F. Kennan has explained the necessity for such preparation: "The multitude of ulterior problems that press upon a Prime Minister or a head of state is so great that no single subject, especially one not regarded as of primary importance, is apt to receive detailed and exhaustive attention. Nor can the senior statesmen stay with a problem for any great length of time. Their time is precious, other responsibilities take them away."

There has, however, recently come into being a new variant of the old summit. It is a summit at which you just get to know and to understand without professedly negotiating. Winston Churchill himself wanted a conference which "should not be overhanging by a ponderous or rigid agenda, or led into mazes and jungles of technical details, zealously contested by hordes of experts and officials drawn up in vast, cumbersome array. ... It should meet with a measure of informality and a still greater measure of privacy and seclusion". There is little question that where there exists some misunderstanding as to each other's intentions such talks could be useful. President Kennedy wanted to size up his man and warn him of the dangers of miscalculation at Vienna in 1961.

But such is the charm of the summit that these hazards are often lost sight of. The summit becomes an end in itself. The instrument of policy becomes its master.

The result is a complete absence of policy and a corruption of diplomacy. This then is the balance sheet. There are advantages and disadvantages. Whether a summit should be held or not is a purely practical question which should be answered without any sentimentality. Heads of state can resolve impasses better than officials. But preparation and a spirit of compromise are a must especially if problems are complex.

Fantasy beats auto-fiction, but 'magic realism' trounced by fact

review

This book could — and perhaps should — have been called “A Defence of Fantasy”. It's an eloquent, erudite and, in parts, startlingly informative defence of all forms of imaginative, or rather imagined fantasy.

Through essays, lectures, addresses and tributes to dead friends, these themes of the imagination in writing and art emerge, the dominant one being a defence of his own favourite fictional genre of “magic realism”. I don't think Salman likes the term and insists that the magic, the inheritance that contemporary writers, or at least those of a slightly previous generation, have been bequeathed by the legends and epics of all the nations of the planet, is the rabbit hole to reality.

Salman contends that publishing today favours the revealing, racially, sexually and culturally situated autobiography and names several black American writers (none of whom, I apologetically admit, I've read) who draw on or portray their own lives in their novels without the inventions of fantasy that the school of “magic realism” has in the past brought alive. His assessment, though he gives us no summaries or descriptions of the themes or stories of these writers, is fulsome — granting perhaps that there are many fictional vehicles which tell the truth.

There is enough evidence in Salman's career, with all the glittering prizes and accolades, with the “fatwa” which V.S. Naipaul cruelly alluded to as “the severest form of literary criticism”, and the sometimes nasty reviews of his work (even of this very book in, say, UK's Observer newspaper) to contend that his work is “Marmitic”. You either love it or you hate it.

(I have taken the liberty of inventing the term in imitation of the word games that Salman says he used to play with his friend and supporter Christopher Hitchens).

The “haters” will be forced to admit that deriving inspiration from the epics, fables and parables from the Arabian Nights, from the Panchatantra, from Beowulf from Götterdämmerung is perfectly legitimate, but they may ask if the resulting constructs live up to the tasks of fiction — to what fiction owes to the “languages of truth”.

Consider the essay in which Salman, writing about the “hijras” of India, begins with a scene from John Irving's book A Son of the Circus in which a surgeon who is not a surgeon cuts off, without administering an anaesthetic, the penis and testicles of a voluntary male to turn him into a “hermaphrodite” or initiate him into being part of “another sex”. Irving's fiction is appallingly graphic and may have been the recreation of some researched piece. My own queries to a renowned consultant urethra-genital doctor, about the hijra clans I saw in my childhood wandering around India's streets, resulted in a different account. Hijras, according to this medical scientist, are not “hermaphrodites” — whatever that is. They are “cryptorchids” — born male with penises, but as they grow the deviant bone structures in their crotches, crush their testicles and prevent them from dropping and developing. Hence, they, through early adolescence, manifest both male and female secondary features triggered by the body producing both male and female hormones — beards and breasts and altered skeletal development. In the West, this deviance in bone structure can be and is easily detected and rectified by nurses and doctors who check on boy babies and release their testicles, as a consequence of which there aren't any hijras stalking the weddings and traffic light crossings of London,

New York and the rest. Go figure!

These poor cryptorchids, handed over to the hijra clans by in all cases poor and even peasant parents in early adolescence, lead miserable lives as beggars and prostitutes. Turning this phenomenon of the tragic degradation of a society, which should but doesn't afford adequate medical care to children, into “magic realism” is, to some (me too, yaar!) unacceptable.

Salman's essay is not unsympathetic to the hijras and charts the structure of their social existence and pleads for some attention to the risks they face through HIV and AIDS. It's John Irving who sacrifices truth to fictional sensationalism — and some readers mistake it for the truth.

Salman deals at length in one essay about the adaptations of books into films. He finds the adaptation by David Lean of E.M. Forster's A Passage to India absurd and clumsy, as do I, but he forgives him for having given the world Lawrence of Arabia and, for my money, Doctor Zhivago. He ventures no illuminating theory of adaptation from one form to another and, while telling us about the adaptation of his own Midnight's Children to the stage, says nothing about Deepa Mehta's film of the same novel. Since he wrote that film adaptation and it wasn't a successful film, to say the least, some consideration from his insightful mind as to what went wrong would have been illuminating.

It's not the function of a reviewer to carp about what he wanted to read. The essays and speeches are peppered with insights into Salman's life as a child in Bombay (which is how he insists on remembering it — he doesn't approve of “Mumbai”) and his experience of racism in public school in Rugby. There are insights into, or confessions about, his progress into becoming the writer he always wanted to be. And then, after the recollections and paens to dead friends such as Hitchens and Harold Pinter and a panegyric approval of writers such as Philip Roth and notes of his acquaintance with him, there are the outspoken pieces about writers subject to tyrannical, censorious silencing, jailing and death in China, Russia, Turkey and now in previously liberal India.

In an essay entitled “Osama bin Laden (Fish be Upon Him!)”, Salman attacks the hypocrisy of Pakistani policy which supports terrorism while taking billions of dollars from the United States to purportedly fight it.

Salman professes in several of these pieces to be not simply an advocate against but an activist fighter for freedom of speech. He is clearly, in all his attitudes and accomplishments, against the denial of free speech and in support of the voices that have suffered neglect and suppression. It's a brave and commendable stance, but he doesn't go on to say what he thinks of the outcry against, for instance, J.K. Rowling's opinion that transgender women are not really women. Germaine Greer also has similar controversial opinions. Should they, in the interests of the free speech Salman so ardently argues for, be heard and challenged through argument rather than censored? A regrettable silence on that one. I would have liked to know.

In his words: “I am just a professional writer, which means I don't do blogs and try and get money for whatever I write.”

review

Yasser Usman's book on Guru Dutt is a labour of love but submerged in adulation, although there is a show of criticality. This is a work unlike that of Nasser Munni Kabir's whose book stuck closely to Guru Dutt's films while touching upon his life.

Usman's book is on the problematic though gifted director's life; a detailed record of it while being adulatory about the films.

Guru Dutt was only 39 when he died in 1964 of an overdose of sleeping pills, torn between two women; the first his wife Geeta Dutt (nee Roy), a gifted singer, the second, Waheeda Rehman, his very talented actress who featured in all his important films, whom he had discovered. In his short, intense, sad but artistically fruitful life (in retrospect) he managed to communicate with a large audience who paid to see his films and sustained his production company; an absolute necessity in commercial Hindi cinema.

Guru Dutt had the rare ability of being loved and commanding the loyalty of those who came in contact with him. Dev Anand and he remained dear friends through the years of struggle to their superstardom in subsequent years. His unit members S. Guruswami, who ran Guru Dutt Films, Abrar Alvi, scriptwriter, V.K. Murthy who became an excellent cameraman, working with him, actors Rehman and Johnny Walker, who gave their best work in Guru Dutt's films remained staunchly loyal to him.

His training as a dancer under maestro Uday Shankar at his cultural centre in Almora and his inborn sense of rhythm gave his song picturisation a fluency and glow. Even almost 60 years later they hold our attention and evoke admiration. He was the first in Hindi an earlier New Theatres hit, President. All these characters were played onscreen by Guru Dutt. He was the first one to create sensitive individuals who did not belong in a society where herd mentality was the norm.

A word about Kaagaz Ke Phool. It did not fail because it was badly scripted but because it was about the short-lived fulfilling love between a really fine filmmaker; (unhappily married) and his talented protege whom he leads to stardom but is forced to leave because of emotional blackmail by his underage daughter pressured by her snobbish, upper-class mother. In other words, legally a story about adultery to be condemned in public by people who love to be in love but have not the guts or heart to go through with it. The situation has not changed all that much. It is Guru Dutt's most moving film and most modern, also very expressively shot.

Partha Chatterjee writes on cinema, music, literature and related cultural matters. He is also a filmmaker.

FAST FACT: One of the most underrated writers of the last century? That would be the novelist Elizabeth Taylor. English critic Philip Hensher called her The Soul of Kindness a novel “so expert that it seems effortless”. Her nuanced yet trenchant A Wreath of Roses has been adapted into a film that never ceases to haunt the viewer. Taylor died of cancer at 63. She was briefly a member of the British Communist Party, then a Labour supporter.

A handshake across Himalayas, amid Terai rumblings

Anand K Sahay

review

Nepal's Turn to China”, the subtitle of this book, may be thought of as only an approximate summation of the 10 journalistic essays, replete with conversations and site reflections, that make up this work. The real thrust, captured in the last chapter, is far more unambiguous. Says the writer, “On that cold, wind-swept plain, 16,000 feet high, there was little imagination required to understand why Nepalis held a dramatic view of China as a superpower, a stark contrast to the view of India as an interfering, unsympathetic neighbour.”

Mulmi's writing has exciting fluency for the better part. This is especially evident in the first section entitled “Borderlands” in which the Nepali-Tibetan social, commercial, and power encounters commencing in mid-19th century are discussed. Some elements of the reportage, covering precarious journeys in the middle Himalayas where icy winds blow, are really quite thrilling. There are also charming vignettes here of letters, diary excerpts, even telegrams, sent home by Newari Buddhist traders from settlements on the Tibetan side of the line or messages received by them from loved ones back home.

The remainder of the book is less feature writing, more matter-of-fact stuff, sometimes impressionistic. There is frequent recital even of the recent record, which can get tedious. Mundane details such as trade statistics and of tourist arrivals in particular periods, to flag the deemed inevitability of China's occupation of the Nepali mind-space, fill many pages. The author's presentation may have been more textured if the political imagination of the “terai” region had also been sought to be examined.

ALL ROADS LEAD NORTH
By AMISH RAJ MULMI
Westland, pp. 290, ₹799

The Epilogue resembles more a set of newspaper clippings on domestic politics, rather less an extrapolation through reasoned discussion into Nepal's future relationships with major foreign powers. Was this required even to irrevocably etch a particular viewpoint, one wonders, when that thinking is reflected across the volume.

To wit, “Throughout history, China had been part of Nepal's imagination, an amorphous idea more than a reality, a ‘card’ against India than an actual hand. It was only in the 21st century that China became ‘real’ for Nepal... (It) is a superpower, a beneficent aid-giver, a friend in need, an essential provider... and a vision of a developed future... As China declares itself on the world stage, Nepal wants to tag along for the ride... Relations need to be sustained. It is in Nepal's interest to do so, and imperative to do it in a way that acknowledges its own aspirations.” The endorsement is pretty steamy.

However, an unquestionable lacuna is the absence of an attempt to engage with any suggestion that may indicate what that “aspiration” is or ought to be. We learn that republican Nepal backs China's “sovereignty project” in Tibet, that it stands against the anti-police state protests in Hong Kong, and that it backs Beijing's policies that trample on human rights in Xinjiang. There aren't many countries that do all of these.

In addition, Nepali officials are taken to task by Kathmandu for publicising flagrant Chinese violations of the Tibet border with Nepal, and Nepal does not outright reject China's implied claims to Mount Everest. If this trend line in policy is sustained, who knows the PLA could be at the Indian boundary at Birgunj — scraping Bihar — before long, just as it crossed the LAC in Eastern Ladakh — and Kathmandu may be less than horrified even if it demonstrably wrings its hands, or some of its politicians do.

This is not a book on international relations or regional politics. It is not a history of Nepal-China or Nepal-India relations either, though prominent markers (not all) get a look-in. A decided strength of the book is that it fills crucial gaps for Indian readers on the rapidity with which China has captured the political, economic and strategic terrain in Nepal. (This is a reminder, if one were needed, of the failure of Indian journalism to inform its readers.)

The author's first book is well worth a read to better understand Beijing's ways.

Odia literary star's fine vignettes, wicked wit, social insights

Rupa Gulab

review

Times change but human nature doesn't, which is why Six and a Third Acres is a hardy survivor. It was first serialised as Chha Mana Atha Guntha in Utkal Sahitya (a literary monthly) between 1897 and 1899, when India was under colonial rule.

A scripture-quoting narrator with tongue firmly in cheek relates the story of a devious zamindar and moneylender in a village in Odisha. He sees through all of Ramachandra Mangaraj's pretensions, including the religious fasts he strictly observes. Mangaraj's suffering and largely ignored wife is not his soul-mate—that honour is reserved for Champa, one of his large household's many maids. But perhaps the worst thing about Mangaraj is his covetousness. When he wants something, he will stop at nothing to get it.

Which brings us to the six and a third acres that Mangaraj has had his beady eyes on for years. It belongs to a childless couple from a weaver family, Bhagia and Saria. While Bhagia is not one of the world's greatest thinkers, he is perfectly content with his lot in life. Saria, however, is not in a happy place — her desire for a child drives her to distraction. This weakness is what the wily old zamindar and his cohort play on.

While the book deals with dark subjects, the hand that writes it is beautifully light, and gives you many occasions to smirk or even laugh out loud. The narrator with his wicked wit introduces you to almost every inhabitant of the village across the caste spectrum—what they do, where and how they live, and tops it off with some delicious gossip about them. As he says, “There can be a pond without fish, but no village without backbiters”, so be prepared for delightful incidents of subterfuge and counter-subterfuge!

There are marvellous descriptions of village life as well. Jackals with their hourly howling at night were like clocks to the villagers. They were useful in other ways too: “In the countryside, where there are no municipal commissioners, these agents see to the disposal of dead dogs, rats, cats, and assorted dirt and filth.”

Enjoyable digs are occasionally made at the British. There's a sessions judge who delayed court proceedings because he was “in the middle of scribbling a letter to his ‘My Dear Lady’”, anxious not to miss the weekly Wednesday mail to England. India's “gentlemen babus” are not spared either: “Flounder they might when asked to recite the names of their own grandfathers, but the names of 15 generations of the ancestors of British King Charles the Third roll off the tips of their tongues.”

Apart from the riveting story, it's the style—the dark humour in particular — that makes it one of the shining stars of Odia literature. Humour often gets lost in translation, but the translators of Six and a Third Acres Leelawati Mohapatra, Paul St-Pierre and K.K. Mohapatra — have done a wonderful job.

PENGUIN TO PUBLISH TWO TITLES BY ANEES SALIM

New Delhi: Penguin Random House India on Friday announced the acquisition of two new titles by award-winning contemporary writer Anees Salim.

The two new titles, The Odd Book of Baby Names and The Bellboy, will be published under the Penguin's Hamish Hamilton imprint in 2021 and 2022, respectively. While The Odd Book of Baby Names is a historical fiction tracing the last days of one of the last kings in India who is rumoured to have fathered more than 100 children, The Bellboy is a story about a 17-year-old bellboy from an island that's slowly disappearing off the face of earth. “These two books are entirely different in terms of craft and characterisation. Salim's published works include Vanity Bagh, The Blind Lady's Descendants and The Small-Town Sea. “As in my previous works, I find a bit of myself in both these books,” said the author.

SHORT TAKES

Kohli props up India on Day One

Southampton: Virat Kohli's watchful effort in challenging conditions helped India reach 120 for three at tea on day two of the World Test Championship final here on Saturday. India, who had reached 69 for two at lunch, was only able to add 51 runs in the afternoon with the loss of Cheteshwar Pujara (8 off 54). Kohli (35 not out off 94) had the company of his deputy Ajinkya Rahane (13 off 54) when early tea was taken due to bad light. Compared to the morning session, New Zealand's all pace attack showed much more discipline to not allow the batsmen any easy runs. Earlier, Rohit Sharma (34 off 68) and Shubman Gill (28 off 64) staved off the initial swing threat posed by the opposition pace attack with disciplined batting before New Zealand fought back to leave India at 69/two at lunch. — PTI

Brief Scores: India 120/3 (Virat Kohli 35 batting, Ajinkya Rahane 13 batting, Rohit Sharma 34; Kyle Jamieson 1/14, Neil Wager 1/19) vs New Zealand.

Indian women reach 243/8 at tea

Bristol: Indian women reached 243/8 in their second innings at tea on the fourth and final day of the one-off Test against England here on Saturday. Five wickets fell in the eventful second session with the captain Mithali Raj (4) and Harmanpreet Kaur (8) getting out cheaply. Set batter Punam Raut also fell for 39 off 104 deliveries. Sneha Rana (27 not out) and Tanviya Bhatia (3 not out) were batting at the tea break as India toiled hard to save the match. Earlier, Deepti Sharma (54) and Punam Raut (39) shared a 72-run stand for the third wicket in the second session as India wiped off the deficit after being forced to follow on by England on Friday. Overnight batter Shafali Verma was dismissed in the 30th over by left-arm spinner Sophie Ecclestone for 63. — PTI

Brief Scores (at tea): England Women 396/9 decl. vs India Women 231 & 243/8 (Shafali Verma 63, Deepti Sharma 54; Sophie Ecclestone 4/83).

Croatia held by Czech Republic

London: Patrik Schick moved top of the Euro 2020 goalscoring charts with his third of the tournament as the Czech Republic held Croatia 1-1 in Glasgow to edge towards the Last 16. Schick broke Scottish hearts on Monday with two goals to beat the hosts at Hampden Park 2-0. He had a much simpler task from the penalty spot to open the scoring, but Ivan Perisic's stunning strike early in the second half maintained Croatia's chances of reaching the knockout stage. The World Cup finalists will have to beat Scotland on Tuesday to either pip the Czechs to second place in Group 'D' or most likely head through as one of the four best third-placed sides. Meanwhile, England missed a chance to book their place in the Last 16 at Euro 2020 as Scotland kept their own hopes alive with a well deserved 0-0 draw. — AFP

Argentina boss over Uruguay

Brasilia: Guido Rodriguez scored the only goal of the game as Argentina edged past fierce local rivals Uruguay in a disappointing Copa America clash on Friday. The victory sent Argentina joint top of Group 'A' with Chile on four points while Uruguay remain without a point. These two sides have played each other more times than any other local rivals and played the first ever international match to be held outside the United Kingdom. Earlier, English-born Ben Brereton was the unlikely hero as Chile beat Bolivia 1-0. The 22-year-old Blackburn forward was born in Stoke-on-Trent to an English father and Chilean mother, and only made his national team debut on Monday when he came off the bench in Chile's 1-1 draw with Argentina. But Brereton was in the right place at the right time to hand Chile victory. — AFP

MILKHA FLIES AWAY

New Delhi, June 19: The track, to him, was like an open book in which Milkha Singh found the "meaning and purpose of life". And what a life he made for himself.

Before his 91-year-old body lost to Covid-19 on Friday after fighting it for a month, Milkha won the kind of battles that not many would have survived, forget about living long enough to tell the world about them.

"Don't worry, I am in good spirits...I am surprised. How could I get this infection?...I hope to get over it soon," Milkha had said before being hospitalised, sounding his usual jovial self, supremely confident of his legendary fitness.

One of independent India's biggest sporting icons was a tormented man but refused to let that come in the way of accomplishments which were unheard of in his era.

He saw his parents being butchered during partition, indulged in petty crimes to survive in refugee camps of Delhi, went to jail for those and failed three attempts at joining the Army.

Who could have thought a man like that would get the sobriquet of "The Flying Sikh"? But Milkha earned it and earned it with a master-class on how to be bigger and better than one's circumstances.

He "revered" the track like "the sanctum sanctorum in a temple where the deity resided."

To him running was both his God and beloved as he created his own little fairytale out of what what could have easily been a tale of horrors.

To talk of medals, the legendary athlete was a four-time Asian Games gold-medallist and the 1958 Commonwealth Games champion but his greatest performance was a near miss, the fourth place finish in the 400m final of the 1960 Rome Olympics.

His timing at the Italian capital remained the national record for 38 years and he was bestowed the Padma Shri in 1959.

But more than anything else, Milkha was the one who put Indian athletics on the world map by winning the gold in the then 440 yards race of the 1958 British and Commonwealth Games.

He became the first Indian athlete to win an individual gold in a Commonwealth Games, which led to then Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru declaring a national holiday on his request.

Milkha put his career record at 77 wins out of 80 races. He also claimed to have bettered the "Olympics record" of that time in a race in France, but with sketchy records available, it is difficult to confirm just like his actual date of birth which is officially November 20, 1929.

He lost the race of his life in the Rome Olympics, finishing the 400m final in 45.6 seconds, 0.1 second short of the bronze medal mark. Hard to believe but he had slowed down in a colossal error of judgement as he wanted to preserve himself for the final 150m.

He remained tormented by that miss, one of the only two incidents in his life, which he described as unforgettable — the other being the killing of his parents in Pakistan.

"The one medal I had yearned for throughout my career had just slipped through my fingers because of one small error of judgement," Milkha wrote in his autobiography. — PTI

Legend, positive right till the end

New Delhi, June 19: Even after testing positive to Covid-19, sprint legend Milkha Singh exuded optimism, a trait that he carried all his life, through triumphs and defeats.

"Yes Bachcha, I tested positive for Covid-19 yesterday (May 19). But I am fine, I have no problem, no fever, no cough. It will go away. My doctor told me I will be alright in three-four days," he said after tested positive for the virus.

The 91-year-old died at Chandigarh's PGIMER hospital on Friday night after battling the infection for a month.

Milkha was first hospitalised at Mohali's Fortis hospital on May 23 as a precautionary measure. While there, he was joined by his former national volleyball captain wife Nirmal Kaur, who died six days ago on Sunday because of Covid complications.

The couple shared a room before Milkha was discharged on the family's request. Milkha was subsequently hospitalised again on June 3 after his oxygen saturation levels dipped, this time at the PGIMER where he battled it out till Friday night.

"Our cook had fever but he concealed it from us. We sent him to his home (native village). After that we thought it's better that all the family members should get Covid-19 tests done," Milkha had said during the May 20 conversation detailing what exactly led to the positive tests.

"I am surprised. How could I get this infection?" he wondered.

At that point Milkha did not feel any symptoms and said that he had even been jogging and exercising.

"I have been keeping indoors except for morning jogging and exercise. I did jogging just yesterday. Don't worry, I am in good spirits," he asserted.

And it was this lifestyle that he was banking on to recover.

"Though I am surprised to have tested positive, I hope to get over it soon," he said. — PTI

INDIAN CRICKETERS PAY HOMAGE, WEAR BLACK ARMBANDS

Southampton, June 19: The Indian cricket team on Saturday wore black armbands on the second day of the World Test Championship final against New Zealand here as a mark of respect to 'Flying Sikh' Milkha Singh.

Top Indian players, including skipper Virat Kohli and coach Ravi Shastri, had already posted their condolence messages on Twitter and the entire Indian team on the day wore the arm band as a mark of respect for the departed soul.

This is one of the rare occasions when Indian cricket team wore black armbands for a legend of Olympic sports.

"The Indian Cricket Team is wearing black armbands in remembrance of Milkha Singhji, who passed away due to Covid-19," the BCCI media cell posted a message. — PTI

SPORTS UNIVERSITY TO HAVE A CHAIR AFTER FLYING SIKH

Chandigarh, June 19: A chair will be established after Milkha Singh's name at the Sports University, Patiala, Punjab Chief Minister Amarinder Singh announced here on Saturday.

"We are going to have a Milkha Singh Chair in Sports University, Patiala," the Chief Minister told reporters outside Milkha's Sector 8 residence.

Singh, accompanied by state Sports Minister Rana Gurmit Singh Sodhi, had gone to meet Milkha's son Jeev and other family members to offer his condolences. — PTI

Sprint king cremated with state honours

Chandigarh, June 19: Iconic sprinter Milkha Singh was on Saturday cremated with full state honours here, marking the end of an era in which his pioneering accomplishments on the track galvanised a newly-independent India.

Milkha, who was 91, was bid a tearful adieu in the presence of his family members and several dignitaries, including sports minister Kiren Rijiju.

His son and ace golfer Jeev Milkha Singh lit the funeral pyre.

Punjab Governor and Chandigarh Administrator V. P. Singh Badnore, Punjab Finance Minister Manpreet Singh Badal, Haryana's Sports Minister Sandeep Singh were among the other dignitaries who attended the last rites.

Director of PGIMER where Milkha was admitted, was also present.

A police contingent reversed arms and sounded the last post in the sprinter's honour. Milkha was also given a gun salute. The Punjab government had declared a one-day state mourning and a holiday as a mark of respect to the legend.

Chief Minister Amarinder Singh had earlier in the day said the Punjab government will accord state funeral to Milkha Singh.

Earlier, the funeral procession started from Milkha's Sector 8 residence. His body was carried in a bedecked vehicle, with common people turning up along the short route to the Sector 25 cremation ground to pay their last respects to the legend. — PTI

'RECORD-BREAKER' PARAM PAYS TRIBUTE TO HIS IDOL

New Delhi, June 19: Inspired by Milkha Singh, he broke the very record that the iconic sprinter had against his name for 38 years and as Paramjit Singh mourned his idol's demise, he said he would forever cherish the time spent in awe of and with the "pioneering legend".

Singh broke Milkha's 400m national record in 1998, 38 years after the Milkha set it in the Rome Olympics for a fourth place finish. The 91-year-old ran that memorable race in 45.6 seconds. "Milkha Singh Ji was so kind and generous that I was invited for a dinner at his place in Chandigarh after I broke his national record. He told me I should work harder to achieve success at the global level," Paramjit said on Saturday.

"Milkha Singh Ji said he wants to see an Indian win an Olympic medal before he dies," said the 49-year-old, who broke the national record during the National Championships in Kolkata. Milkha was officially hand-timed at 45.6 seconds during his fourth-place finish in the Olympics, though an unofficial electronic timer at the Games clocked him at 45.73 seconds.

"It is a huge loss for the country that Milkha Singh Ji is no more. He was the pioneering legend of Indian athletics." — PTI

Compete abroad: P.T. Usha remembers Singh's advice

Chennai, June 19: "You must compete in international meets abroad to improve," was the piece of advice P.T. Usha received from Milkha Singh when she met him way back in 1982 as she remembers the iconic athlete, who died on Friday.

Herself a track and field legend, Usha said she met Milkha Singh during an international competition in Korea. "I met Milkha Ji for the first time in 1982 and it was a memorable one. He advised me to focus on participating in international meets to improve my level," Usha said.

"Go and run outside the country, only then you can improve and compete with the foreigners, he would insist," she added.

The 'Payyoli Express' said

it was her coach O.M. Nambiar, who introduced her to Milkha and she never missed an opportunity to learn the tricks of the trade from him. "Ever since I got introduced to Milkha Ji through my coach, I always used to ask him a lot of questions. And, he was always ready to answer them. He offered suggestions and spoke in an inspiring manner."

Usha said Milkha Singh would remain in the hearts of millions of Indians.

"I was shocked after hearing the news of Milkha Singh's death. He was a great athlete... An inspiring personality. He will continue to inspire many and will remain in the hearts of millions of Indian people," the 56-year said.

"He used to call me PT. He was a very nice person and whenever I met him he used to enquire about my son, husband. He used to ask about my academy and the trainees," she added. — PTI
