The movie was released on streaming platform Netflix on Wednesday. According to the official, the letter mentions “concerns related to the movie’s portrayal of gender bias as an institutional work culture” at the Indian Air Force. The movie is based on the life of IAF officer Gunjan Saxena who became the first woman pilot to take part in the 1999 Kargil war.

Biden picks Harris as his running mate

First woman of colour to get major party ticket

Washington, Aug. 12: Democratic US Presidential candidate Joe Biden has picked Senator Kamala Devi Harris as his running mate to woo the Black voters and the influential Indian diaspora who could play a key role in his bid to defeat Donald Trump in the presidential election.

By naming the 55-year-old lawyer and moderate Democratic politician from California as his vice presidential candidate in the November 3 election, Biden made history by selecting the first Black woman to compete on a major party’s presidential ticket. Harris, whose father is from Jamaica and mother an Indian, is currently the Senator from California. The 77-year-old former vice-president, made the announcement in a text message to his supporters on Tuesday, ending days of suspense. It came about a week ahead of his virtual Democratic National Convention that would formally nominate Biden as the party’s candidate for the presidential election, challenging incumbent President Trump, a Republican. “Joe Biden here. I’ve chosen Kamala Harris as my running mate. Together, with you, we’re going to beat Trump. Add your name to welcome her to the team,” Biden said in his message.

Biden said Harris will be the best partner for him to finally get the country back on track. He described her as “a fearless fighter” and “one of the country’s finest public servants”. Harris later tweeted that Biden “can unify the American people because he’s spent his life fighting for us. And as president, he’ll build an America that lives up to our ideals.” —PTI

50% Covid deaths going unreported in Telangana

KANIZA GARARI | DC HYDERABAD, AUG. 12

Covid-19 deaths are estimated to be 50 per cent more than the numbers being reported in the state’s medical bulletin.

Suspected, non-tested and negative report-based deaths are not being registered by the government as there is no proof of the Covi-19 test results and families are unwilling to have the name of the disease on the death certificate.

Suspected cases are those who come with complaints of severe breathlessness, oxygen levels less than 50 per cent and CT scan reports showing high viral load in the lungs but die suddenly without getting tested.

The second category is of sudden deaths at home or on the way to the hospital of those without symptoms and their samples not taken for testing.

The third category is of people who have tested negative for Covid-19. It has been found that some people are being tested early, that is within three days of developing symptoms, and do not have enough viral load in the body.

However, they develop complications, are hospitalised and die. These are often found positive from the samples are taken after their deaths. Often, due to the death and late

Rat menace hits RIMS Covid block

PILLALAMARRI SRINIVAS | DC ADILABAD, AUG. 12

Some Covid-19 positive patients undergoing treatment at the Rajiv Gandhi institute of medical sciences (RIMS), Adilabad, are less scared of their health and more worried about poor facilities and rats around them and on their beds at the Covid-19 isolation ward at RIMS.

A Covid-19 positive patient had requested the staff to let him to go to home and be in home quarantine instead of being in the ward at RIMS. He cited the poor facilities and tried to leave on Tuesday night. Finally, the medical staff took him in an ambulance to his home in Adilabad on Wednesday. This is not the first incident of a patient leaving, the earlier one went missing.

A lack of coordination between the district medical and health department and RIMS was evident when both sets of officials gave different versions on positive patients missing.

HC chides civic body for outsourcing sanitation

VUJJINI VAMSHIDHARA | DC HYDERABAD, AUG. 12

The Telangana High Court faulted the GHMC for outsourcing workers for posts like sanitary supervisors (SFA), sanitation workers, entomology fieldworkers, entomology superior fieldworkers, supervisors (EFA), superior field assistants through intermediaries, agencies and contractors, abandoning the hiring of regular workers for decades together.

Justice M.S. Ramachandra Rao observed that the “outsourcing basis” method is contrary to the law, violative of Article 14, 16 and 21 of the Constitution of India and also the law declared by the Supreme Court in the State of Karnataka and

● The High Court directed the civic body to consider the regularisation of their services within two months.

Others vs. Uma Devi and Others judgement, mandating periodic regular recruitment to sanctioned posts.

“The outsourcing system adopted by the GHMC is only a sham and a ruse to avoid extending genuine services and entitlements to workers,” Justice Rao opined.

The court observed that outsourcing workers who are working with GHMC in the sanitisation and entomology departments since 2008, after they were selected based on the prescribed norms of notification, are entitled to regularisation.

The High Court directed the civic body to consider the regularisation of their services within two months.

The judge was dealing with a petition by 98 outsourced GHMC workers who have been working for around two decades, requesting it to direct the civic authority to regularise their services and to pay them the minimum scale on par with the regular of employees of the same cadre.

They mentioned that they were engaged with the same work as the regular employees for decades now.

GHMC VIOLATING EQUAL PAY: PETITIONER

Chikkudu Prabhakar, counsel for the petitioners, contended that the GHMC is violating the principle of equal pay for equal work and the law settled by the Supreme Court in the Umadevi judgement, on the regularisation of temporary workers, in which their intake was legally proved correct.

After a two-year long adjudication, the court has pronounced this judgment stating that the 98 workers who approached the High Court seeking regularisation, are directly engaged by the GHMC for decades now and are entitled to regularisation of their services.

It also made it clear that the petitioners are entitled to minimum scale of pay and payments shall be made by the GHMC directly to the petitioners w.e.f the date of filing of this writ petition (after deducting the payments already received by them during this period from the contractor/intermediary).

25-year-old nurse found dead in hospital hostel

JAYENDRA CHAITHANYA T. | DC HYDERABAD, AUG. 12

A 25-year-old nurse working at Yashoda Hospital in Secunderabad was found dead in her hostel room on Tuesday night. Police recovered a syringe and an empty vial of sedative generally used for patients who are on ventilators.

According to the Market police, Soundarya, a native of Nalgonda district, was working as a staff nurse at the hospital for the last four years. Prior to that, she worked in a private clinic in Nalgonda.

Soundarya on Tuesday noon returned to the hostel along with her colleagues. She did not have her lunch and stayed back in the room.

leagues. She did not have her lunch and stayed back in the room. Her colleagues, who went to work, returned in the evening and found Soundarya lying on the bed.

At around 8 pm, when they tried to wake her up, she was in an unconscious condition. They found an injection beside her on the bed. She was taken to the hospital but was declared brought dead, said the police. Market inspector P Shankar Yadav said “Soundarya took anaesthesia medicine through injection to take her life. She took a high dosage.”

Prima facie, it is suspected that a strained relationship could be a reason for her to take the extreme step.

“The last call she made was to a former colleague, from whom we have to take details of the conversation. Necessary legal action will be taken,” he said.

“There are cases of patients undergoing treatment in hospitals, developing complications and being put on ventilator support yet the death is not recorded as caused by Covid-19. These practices are not reflecting the real numbers of those dead. Fatality rate and under-reporting are rampant, so the real picture of the impact of the disease is not being shown,” the senior doctor said.

Experts state that if they take 1,000 negative samples and track those cases there will be 50 per cent Covid-19-based mortality as many of them never made it to hospital and those who made it do not want it registered. This has led to the conclusion that the numbers are not the real-time numbers.

Those operating hearse services for the dead state that people are very sentimental and do not want the name Covid-19 as the cause of death. An NGO operating these services said, “People want their dead to be given due burial or cremation. If Covid-19 is declared, then the guidelines do not allow family members to come forward for rituals. There are municipal workers and police involved and many of them do not want that. With dead bodies sanitised and in plastic bags, family members wearing personal protection equipment want their dead to be respected in their final journey and rituals followed. Due to this, the disease is not declared but all the precautions, limited numbers of near and dear ones and other basic protocols are followed.”

This sentiment has allegedly helped the government too as there is a committee scrutinising the death reports before declaring them as Covid-19 deaths. They are now not considering these cases.

Presently, the medical bulletin has consistently highlighted 54 per cent deaths due to co-morbid conditions of diabetes, hypertension, kidney failure and other multi-organ failures as the prime cause of death other than the infection by the virus.

The fact that the virus triggers havoc in the body is not being understood by common people and that is taken advantage of, allowing for the projecting a low fatality rate of 0.77 per cent in the state and 1.99 per cent in the country.

Display rates or face action, pvt hospitals told

KANIZA GARARI | DC HYDERABAD, AUG. 12

Private hospitals have been warned that if they continue to over-charge patients, action will be taken against them by the state government. All rates must be displayed on the notice board near the billing desk.

The government in a notification stated that maximum fixed rates for treating Covid-19 patients has been clearly chalked out but still there are innumerable complaints that patients are being over-charged.

The ceiling prices for intensive care unit and Covid-19 treatment have been fixed and patients have to be charged accordingly, said government officials.

Patient bills are running into lakhs of rupees and there are innumerable complaints against the private hospitals which are showing no humanitarian concern and using the epidemic as a way to loot people and make money.

The price of high-end drugs and personal protection kits are excluded from the package rates and they have to be charged at a maximum retail price only, stated by the government.

While discharging patients, itemised bills must be provided and if that is not done, it will be taken as an offence. The government has warned private hospitals of action if the rules are not followed. Private hospitals, on the other hand, claim that they are following government guidelines but every complaint on social media is leading to a notice without even getting into the details of the case.

Every private hospital has received at least four notices from district medical and health officers asking them to explain the reasons for charging patients exorbitant amounts for treatment.

of a corporate hospital explained, “The government is not checking their own rules for insurance vs. cash-paying patients. They are sending a notice based on who ever complains to them without verifying the details. For this reason, we have got a medico-legal lawyer to look into these complaints.”

In some corporate hospitals, the billing staff is directly asking patients' relatives if they have the money to pay for bills or being advised to go to a government hospital. In case of insurance, the rules and regulations are explained twice on video so that it can be produced as evidence in case the patient's relatives complain later.

Medicover hospitals executive director and member of the Telangana super speciality hospitals association said, “During the pandemic, it has been a tight rope walk for hospitals. We are trying to comply with the government orders as much as we can but there are some patients who require multiple tests in a week, CT scans and high-end drugs. This leads to escalation of costs. As far as display of rates is concerned, it is a very difficult situation as those in general and intensive care units will have different rates.”

NSUI ACTIVISTS
PROTEST AGAINST
EXAMS, HELD

IREDDY SRINIVAS REDDY | DC
HYDERABAD, AUG. 12

"The decision of the Telangana government to conduct examinations clearly shows how insensitive the government is towards students' health," alleged Balmoor Venkat, Telangana NSUI state president.

Huge numbers of NSUI student activists tried to lay siege to Pragathi Bhavan in protest against the government's decision to go ahead with the CET exams and the final year exams, alleging the state is ignoring the fact that the matter is pending in the High Court of Telangana.

The activists were prevented by the police personnel and were taken into custody. Many activists were seen wearing PPE kits when they came to Pragathi Bhavan to stage the protest. Mr Balmoor said that the TRS government which has failed to arrest the spread of Coronavirus is making every attempt to conduct the examinations only risking the lives of students.

"It is evident from Karnataka's KCET Exam that the students will be easily infected with the virus if exams are conducted in this pandemic. Taking a cue from Karnataka, the Telangana government should abstain from conducting any exam," Balmoor demanded.

CLP leader, Bhatti Vikramarka, MLAs T. Jagga Reddy, Sri-dhar Babu, and other Congress leaders went to Goshahal police grounds to show their solidarity with the detained NSUI activists. However, the police denied them entry, which led to an altercation.

Telangana Pradesh Congress committee president and MP, N. Uttam Kumar Reddy, MP, A Revanth Reddy, and other leaders condemned the detention of the activists and demanded that the state government focus on the pandemic in the state.

■ HUGE NUMBERS OF NSUI student activists tried to lay siege to Pragathi Bhavan in protest against the government's decision to go ahead with the CET exams and the final year exams, alleging the state is ignoring the fact that the matter is pending in the High Court.

His visit came as a surprise to the residents, who followed the commission member as he visited the colonies despite the heavy rain. The residents explained their concerns and appealed to the commission to look into their problems.

Mr Achary said that majority of the dwellers living in Gollapadu belong to the Backward Classes. Due to the lockdown many families lost their source of income. It is not proper

Mr Achary tried to instil confidence among the residents and assured them that the Commission had powers to question the officials under section 338-B of Indian Constitution, if the move was in anyway causing injustice to the people from Backward Classes. He said, "If needed, I will call the concerned officers to Hyderabad and they may even be asked to travel to Delhi. There is no need to get discouraged."

The 102nd Constitution Amendment Act-2018 provides constitutional status to the National Commission for Backward Classes (NCBC). It has the authority to examine complaints and welfare measures regarding socially and educationally backward classes.

KTR: Need to promote food processing industry

S.A. ISHAQUI | DC
HYDERABAD, AUG. 12

IT and Industries Minister K.T. Rama Rao said that though Telangana was witnessing an increase in crop production, the state does not have the capacity to fully process them. He said that against this backdrop there was an urgent need to promote the food processing industry.

The minister was giving a presentation to his Cabinet colleagues on food processing and logistics policies here on Wednesday.

Mr Rao said that there are abundant investment opportunities in the food processing sector as the state registered a quantum leap in agriculture production. He opined that by promoting the food processing sector extensively, farmers will be able to grow economically and help create employment opportunities for the local youth.

He stressed that these policies will help bolster rural economies, attract investments, and increase employment opportunities. Mr Rao pointed out that the completion of irrigation projects and other similar measures have helped in increasing irrigation facilities and agricultural production in the state.

The minister said that due to the implementation of the sheep and fish fingerlings distribution schemes, there has been a significant increase in the number of sheep and production of fish. He said the state was experiencing a water revolution and was in the process of witnessing another Green Revolution (agriculture), followed by Blue Revolution (fisheries), Pink Revolution (meat production), and White Revolution (milk).

He highlighted that the crops being cultivated in every village, mandal and district are being mapped for comprehensive information on agricultural operations.

He said that there will be special incentives for SCs, STs, minorities and women while setting up their food processing unit. He explained that necessary subsidies and incentives to develop the food processing industry have been proposed. Incentives given in other states and countries are being studied, he said. He took inputs from ministers and assured them to take their suggestions while drafting the guidelines.

At 82, she is the grand old lady of Nehru Zoological Park. And being an elephant, she is blessed with a long memory.

For Rani, the oldest of the five elephants in the zoo, Wednesday was special as it marked the World Elephant Day. But despite her age, and legs needing medical care, she just showed how clever an elephant can be.

To celebrate their special day, the zoo staff prepared some special treats for them and set up a buffet, that included sugarcane, fruits, fresh leaves of their choice and cakes made-to-order with ragi and rice and topped off with fruits, vegetables, sprouts and corn among other things, for each of the five pachyderms - Vijay (34), Asha (50), Rajini (50), Seetha (50) and Rani (82).

But Rani, refused to eat the cake made for her and instead dipped into those made for the others in her 'herd'.

"Rani smelt the medicines and multivitamins mixed into her cake and placed inside the fruits. She is very clever and does not like the smell of medicines and so dipped into the clean cakes made for Rajni and Asha," zoo curator N. Kshitija told Deccan Chronicle.

In a video shared by the authorities, Rani was seen avoiding her cake, and eating the ones next to hers.

"Every day we have to find new ways to get her to take medications. And she is always one up on us. Every day, we have to learn a new trick to make her take her medicines and she catches up so we can't repeat," Kshitija said. "Rani," the curator said, "is retired. She has issues related to arthritis that we are treating and getting opinion on her treatment from experts in Karnataka."

It might be recalled that Rani was gifted to the zoo by the Nizam. That's not all, Upasana Kamineni Konidela, the vice-chairperson of the Apollo Foundation and Apollo Life, had adopted Rani for one year by paying ₹5 lakh.

INDIA-BHUTAN BORDER TRADE VIA WB HALTED

Alipurduar (WB), Aug. 12: Trade across the India-Bhutan border through Jaigaon in West Bengal's Alipurduar district was suspended after a lockdown was imposed to curb the rise in Covid-19 cases in the Himalayan kingdom, an official said on Wednesday.

The border gates between India's Jaigaon and Bhutan's Phuentsholing were closed after the total lockdown came into force in the neighbouring country on Tuesday, an Alipurduar district official said.

"Border trade through Jaigaon has stopped completely," he said.

Even though three districts of West Bengal — Alipurduar, Jalpaiguri and Kalimpong — share a border with Bhutan, the major chunk of trade with the Himalayan kingdom takes place through the Jaigaon-Phuentsholing section.

Jaigaon serves as a major gateway for Bhutan to the rest of India through Siliguri that lies around 150 km west of the border town.

Riot-hit areas resemble war zone

Charred vehicles, shards of glass from broken windows, stones lie strewn over deserted roads

Bengaluru, Aug. 12: Areas under Pulakesh-inagar assembly constituency here resembled a war zone on Wednesday, hours after an unruly mob went on a rampage torching vehicles, irked over a 'communally sensitive' social media post allegedly by put up by a relative of a Congress MLA.

Charred vehicles, shards of glass from broken windows, stones and bricks lie strewn over the deserted roads of the violence-affected localities.

Earlier, three people were killed in police firing and scores of others wounded, including at least 50 policemen in the violence and arson that erupted in the city on Tuesday night and continued till the wee hours of Wednesday.

Property of Congress legislator Akhanda Srinivasa Murthy and his family members were targeted after a 'communally sensitive' social media post uploaded online by one of his relatives enraged a section of people.

"We were not at home when all this happened," Jayanthi, the MLA's sister said weeping inconsolably. "The only solace is that my brother and his family are safe," she said.

The violent crowd set on fire police vehicles and barged into DJ Halli police station on the intervening night of Tuesday and Wednesday and damaged the property.

Police have arrested about 110 people on charges of rioting.

Terming the violence in the city as a 'well-planned act,' Karnataka Revenue Minister R. Ashoka on Wednesday said the 'traitors,' who perpetrated the riots would be dealt with an iron hand and steps would be taken to ensure that such incidents do not recur.

Speaking to reporters after meeting Murthy at Vidhana Soudha here, Ashoka said, "The manner in which the riots were perpetrated shows that it was a well-planned act and was intended to spread to other parts of the city. These are traitors and we will subdue them."

"It is clear from the intensity of vandalism that the intention was to attack and finish off Srinivasa Murthy."

It has to be investigated whether any anti-social elements from within the state and outside were involved," Ashoka said.

Claiming that the violence was planned to terrorise the people of Bengaluru, Ashoka said government will send across a strong message so that no one would ever dare to take law into their hands again.

He also said he met the Chief Minister and apprised him of the ground situation.

The Minister added that steps would be taken to rein in anti-social elements as vandalism was carried out in a manner that communities were identified to target them.

"Whether Popular Front or SDPI is behind it, we will not bother. These people must be arrested. We will hunt them wherever they are holed up,"

Sushant's kin sends legal notice to Raut

Patna, Aug. 12: A Bihar MLA and close relative of Sushant Singh Rajput sent a legal notice to Shiv Sena leader Sanjay Raut on Wednesday, threatening action over a piece written by him in the party mouth-piece about the deceased actor's strained relations with his father, his lawyer said.

In his column for Saamana a few days ago, Raut had alleged that the actor, whose death is being probed by the CBI, was not on good terms with his own family and had strained relations with his father after his second marriage.

"Sanjay Raut is an honorable member of Parliament and a responsible spokesman of the party. My client Neeraj Kumar Bablu has contended that he should apologise within 48 hours for his baseless comments. If he does so, we will proceed no further. If he does not, we will seek legal remedy, Anish Jha," the BJP MLA's counsel, said here.

Bablu, who is a cousin of Rajput, had rubbished the allegation that the actor's septuagenarian father, Krishna Kishore Singh, had tied the knot again after the death of his wife in 2002.

Singh had lodged an FIR at a police station in Patna last month, nearly 40 days after his son was found hanging from the ceiling at his Bandra residence.

In the FIR, Singh had accused actress Rhea Chakraborty and her family members of abetting his son's suicide besides cheating him financially. Chakraborty has, since, been slapped with a money laundering case by the Enforcement Directorate.

Her petition, questioning the Bihar police's jurisdiction in the matter and seeking transfer of the case from Patna to Mumbai is pending before the Supreme Court.

The matter was taken over by the CBI following a recommendation by the Nitish Kumar government at the request of Rajput's father.

BJP accuses Congress of not being 'vocal' against rioters in Bengaluru

New Delhi, Aug. 12: The ruling Bharatiya Janata Party in Karnataka on Wednesday accused the Congress of not being "vocal" against rioters who attacked a legislator of the Opposition party in Bengaluru, saying

"appeasement" seemed to be its official policy. The BJP also said Chief Minister B.S. Yediyurappa must make the rioters pay heavily for destruction of properties.

"Shameful n disgusting! Karnataka Congress is silent on yesterday's vandalism in Bengaluru. Pseudos are also not vocal against this riot! Freedom from fear of riots is what B'luru needs now. Sri B.S.

Yediyurappa must make rioters pay heavily for destruction of properties. #SaveBengaluru," BJP general secretary P. Muralidhar Rao tweeted.

Rao is the BJP's in-charge for Karnataka affairs.

BJP general secretary (organisation) B.L. Santhosh alleged that the Congress was maintaining "dead silence".

He noted that rioters had attacked the house of Congress MLA Akhanda Srinivasa Murthy, a Dalit.

"Total support for right to riot. For them appeasement is the only official party policy," he said.

"After 14 hours

Karnataka Congress wakes up to blame Naveen for Facebook post & police for delay in taking action. One straight question. Does your party support riots like this? Why Congress hesitates to condemn riots by minority groups? #CongressSupportsRiots," he said in a tweet. (sic)

Karnataka Congress leader Dinesh Gundu Rao hit back at Santhosh, accusing him of using the incident to gain political mileage.

His statement is a crude attempt to communalise the issue & divide on caste lines, Rao said, calling it "pathetic and deplorable".

"That's what BJP & RSS do best, play politics over/with dead bodies," he alleged.

Responding to his swipe, Santhosh tweeted, "At least acknowledge that your own Dalit MLA's house was ransacked. Police station was destroyed. Why Why Why so much of appeasement, fear when your own MLA is targeted? Be simple & straight Sir."

Opposition Congress and JD(S) in Karnataka have extended complete support to the state government in establishing peace in violence-hit parts of the city and demanded immediate action against culprits.

Ashoka said.

Addressing the media after meeting the minister, Murthy said he wanted the government to provide him protection.

"We were not at home when nearly 3,000 people with petrol bombs, clubs, came and burnt the vehicles, damaged our house. I need protection from the government after this incident," a visibly shaken MLA said.

He said for the past 25 years he has been living with the Muslim brethren but never faced such a problem.

He demanded a CBI or CID inquiry into the matter to bring out the facts. Asked about his relative Naveen, whose alleged social media post sparked violence, Murthy said, "Naveen is not my relative. For the past 10 years we have not been in touch with him."

Sharad Pawar says Parth is 'immature'

DC CORRESPONDENT MUMBAI, AUG. 12

Calling Ajit Pawar's son Parth "immature", NCP president Sharad Pawar on Wednesday said he gives "absolutely no importance to his grand-nephew's recent demand for a CBI probe into the case of actor Sushant Singh Rajput's death."

The NCP chief also said that he has full faith in Maharashtra and Mumbai police. However, he would not oppose if someone still wants the central agencies to probe the case.

Parth Pawar, who lost last year's Lok Sabha election from Maval seat in Maharashtra, demanded that the case be handed over to the CBI.

On July 27, Parth met state home minister Anil Deshmukh demanding that the case of Rajput's death be handed over to the CBI or a Special Investigation Team (SIT) be formed with forensic experts to probe the case.

"We attach absolutely no importance to what my grand-nephew says. He is immature. I have clearly said that I have 100 per cent trust in the Maharashtra police and Mumbai police but if someone still wants a CBI probe into it, then there is no reason to oppose that too," the NCP chief told reporters here after a meeting with Shiv Sena MP Sanjay Raut at YB Chavan Centre in South Mumbai.

He was asked about the demand for a CBI probe in the case being made against some people, including by his grand-nephew Parth.

FORGET AND FORGIVE, GEHLOT TELLS UPSET MLAS

Jaisalmer/Jaipur, Aug. 12: Rajasthan Chief Minister Ashok Gehlot on Wednesday said resentment among the Congress MLAs is natural after the return of dissident legislators to the party-fold but asked them to forgive, forget and move on.

But with just two days to go before the Assembly session, the party is taking no chances, deciding to keep them together at a resort in the state capital.

The MLAs in the Gehlot camp were on Wednesday flown back to Jaipur from Jaisalmer, where they were together at another hotel.

They were taken straight from the airport to the Fairmont hotel on the outskirts of the city, where they had stayed before being moved to Jaisalmer. The MLAs mostly from the Congress and some allies are expected to remain there till the Assembly meets on August 14.

The Congress crisis in Rajasthan appears to have ended with the intervention of the top leadership of Sonia Gandhi, Rahul Gandhi and Priyanka Gandhi Vadra who met rebel leader Sachin Pilot earlier this week.

Pilot had openly rebelled against Gehlot last month along with 18 other Congress MLAs. He was then sacked as deputy chief minister and the party's Rajasthan chief.

IAF protests its negative portrayal in Gunjan Saxena

PAWAN BALI | DC NEW DELHI, AUG. 12

The Indian Air Force (IAF) has protested that the movie Gunjan Saxena: The Kargil Girl starring Janhvi Kapoor portrays the work culture in the Air Force in a "negative light" and being discriminatory towards women officers.

The movie is inspired by Flight Lieutenant Gunjan Saxena, India's first female Air Force officer to fly in a combat zone during the Kargil war. The movie is right now being streamed on Netflix.

The IAF has written to Dharma Productions, Netflix and the Central Board of Film Certification (CBFC). "The IAF as a service has always ensured that the organisation is gender neutral and has always provided an equal opportunity to both male and women personnel," said the IAF in a letter to the CBFC.

Sources said that the letter mentions that as per initial understanding, Dharma Productions had agreed to represent Air Force with authenticity and make all efforts to ensure that the film helps to inspire the next generation of IAF officers.

It said that certain scenes and dialogues in the movie and its trailer, which were forwarded to the IAF for viewing have been found to portray the IAF in an undue negative light. "In the aim to glorify the screen character of Ex-Fit Lt Gunjan Saxena, Dharma Productions presented some situations that are misleading and portray an inappropriate work culture, especially against women in the IAF," said the letter.

It said that the production house was informed about the objectionable portion in the movie and was advised to delete or modify them.

"However, the production house has not deleted the scenes but had proposed a media plan in the run up to the release and inserting a disclaimer in the movie," it said.

The IAF said that it considers that a mere media plan and disclaimer would not be adequate to prevent the presentation of incorrect facts about the IAF.

Last month, the defence ministry had written to the CBFC, Information Technology ministry and ministry of Information and Broadcasting to advise production houses to obtain "no objection" certificate from ministry of defence before the telecast of any film, documentary, web series on the Indian army theme.

Defence ministry in a letter to the CBFC said that producers may also be advised to ensure that any incident which distorts the image of the defence forces or hurts their sentiments may be prevented.

"It has been brought to the notice of this ministry that some production houses making films on Army theme are using content which is distorting the image of the Army," the letter said.

170 perish in Yemen floods

Sanaa: Flash floods triggered by torrential rains have killed at least 172 people across Yemen over the past month, damaging homes and Unesco-listed world heritage sites, officials said. The destruction has dealt a new blow to a country already in the grips of what the United Nations describes as the world's worst humanitarian crisis after years of war between a Saudi-backed government and Iran-allied rebels. In the mainly government-held province of Maarib east of the capital, 19 children were among 30 people killed by the floods, a government official said.

South Sudan clash: 127 die

Juba: Clashes between soldiers and civilians during a disarmament exercise in the South Sudanese town of Tonj left 127 dead, the army spokesman said Wednesday. Major General Lul Ruai Koang said that the fighting erupted on Saturday as security forces carried out an operation to disarm civilians in the area which has seen deadly inter-communal clashes. More than six years after a civil war broke out in the country, and many communities are flush with weapons, which they keep for protection or defence against cattle raids. The violence in Tonj began after armed youths got into a disagreement with soldiers. An initial confrontation was brought under control, but according to Koang the youths mobilised others for an attack on the army position.

Fight on: HK tycoon to staff

Hong Kong: Hong Kong pro-democracy media mogul Jimmy Lai on Wednesday told his reporters to "fight on" after his dramatic arrest, as China widens its crackdown against critics in the semi-autonomous city. The clampdown has gathered pace since Beijing imposed a sweeping security law on the international business hub in June, with opposition politicians disqualified and activists arrested for social media posts. Lai was among 10 people detained under the new law on Monday as around 200 police officers searched the newsroom of his Apple Daily tabloid, which is unapologetically critical of Beijing. The 71-year-old was cheered by staff and handed a bouquet on Wednesday as he returned to the newsroom following a late-night release on bail after 40 hours in custody. "Fight on! Let's fight on," Lai said. "We have the support of the Hong Kong people."

RAJAPAKSAS DOMINATE NEW CABINET

Colombo, Aug. 12: Sri Lanka's new Cabinet, including four members of the powerful Rajapaksa family, took oath on Wednesday with President Gotabaya Rajapaksa retaining the key defence ministry while the finance portfolio went to newly elected Prime Minister Mahinda Rajapaksa after their party won a landslide victory in parliamentary elections last week. President Gotabaya administered the oath of office to the 28-member Cabinet which is two less than the 30 allowed by the Constitution. He also appointed 40 state ministers. The swearing-in ceremony was held in the central town of Kandy.

President Gotabaya retained the ministry of defence while his elder brother PM Mahinda has been assigned finance, urban development and Buddhist affairs ministries.

Mahinda's elder son, Namal Rajapaksa has been named the Minister of Youth Affairs and Sports — a first time Cabinet position since he entered parliament in 2010.

The eldest brother of the president, Chamal Rajapaksa was named irrigation minister in addition to being the state minister of internal security. His son, Shasheendra Rajapaksa has also been given a state ministry. One of the main features in the Cabinet is that while veteran politician Dinesh Gunawardena has been re-named the foreign minister, a new state ministry of regional cooperation affiliated to the foreign ministry has been created.

Significantly, former president Maithripala Sirisena has been overlooked for a Cabinet ministry despite his overwhelming win in the elections. Gotabaya also appointed his lawyer as justice minister. Ali Sabry appeared for Gotabaya when he faced court cases related to corruption.

US health chief sceptical of Russia's virus vaccine claim

Important to provide safe, effective vaccine, not a race to be first: Alex Azar

Taipei, Aug. 12: Washington's health chief on Wednesday expressed scepticism about Russia's claim of developing the world's first safe Coronavirus vaccine, pointing to the lack of data from its initial trials.

Moscow said Tuesday its vaccine offered "sustainable immunity" against the virus, but Western scientists have previously raised concerns about the development speed of Russian treatments, suggesting researchers were cutting corners. US Health Secretary Alex Azar echoed those concerns Wednesday as he wrapped up a three-day visit to Taiwan.

"It's important that we provide safe, effective vaccines and that the data be transparent... This is not a race to be first," he told reporters during a conference call.

"I should note that two of the six US vaccines that we've invested in entered the phase three clinical trials weeks ago that the Russian vaccine is now only beginning," he added.

"The data from the initial trials in Russia have not been disclosed, it's not transparent." Russian President Vladimir Putin said the vaccine was safe, and that one of his daughters had received a dose.

The vaccine has been named "Sputnik", after the world's first artificial satellite that helped the Soviet Union take the lead in the Cold War space race in 1957.

Governments are under huge pressure to find a vaccine against the coronavirus, which has killed more than 700,000 people worldwide and eviscerated the global economy since it first emerged in central China late last year. The United States is the worst-hit country, with nearly 5.1 million infections and more than 174,000 deaths.

President Donald Trump is facing a tough fight to get re-elected in November, trailing rival Joe Biden in the polls as anger mounts over his administration's response to the pandemic. Azar said he was confident a vaccine would be available for Americans. "We believe that it is highly credible that we will have in the high tens of millions of doses of gold-standard, safe and effective vaccine by the end of this year, and many hundreds of millions of doses as we go into the beginning of next year," he said.

So far, Washington has handed out at least $9.4 billion to seven vaccine developers and signed manufacturing contracts with five of them to provide 700 million doses.

Azar's Taiwan trip — the highest-level US visit since Washington switched diplomatic recognition to Beijing in 1979 — was billed as an opportunity to learn from the island's success in containing the virus.

Taiwan has reported fewer than 500 infections and just seven Covid-19 deaths.

Don declares 6th vaccine contract

Washington, Aug. 12: President Donald Trump on Tuesday announced a $1.5 billion contract with US biotech company Moderna for 100 million doses of an eventual Coronavirus vaccine, the sixth such deal reached since May.

"I'm pleased to announce that we have reached an agreement with Moderna to manufacture and deliver 100 million doses of their Coronavirus vaccine candidate," Trump said at a White House news conference. "The federal government will own these vaccine doses, we're buying them." "We're on track to rapidly produce 100 million doses as soon as the vaccine is approved, and up to 500 million shortly thereafter, so we'll have 600 million doses," he added.

Moderna, in partnership with the US National Institutes of Health (NIH), is conducting Phase 3 clinical trials of a vaccine candidate and manufacturing of vaccine doses will take place while the trials are underway.

The vaccine, called mRNA-1273, is being developed by Moderna and the NIH's National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID), which is led by Dr Anthony Fauci.

Fauci has said researchers are unlikely to know the efficacy of the vaccine before the end of the year at the earliest.

MAN DIES OF BUBONIC PLAGUE IN MONGOLIA

Ulaanbaatar, Aug. 12: Bubonic plague has killed a man in western Mongolia, the country's health ministry said Wednesday, the latest in a handful of cases to emerge there and in neighbouring China this year.

At least one person dies of the plague every year in the landlocked Asian country, where the rare bacterial disease is usually spread by fleas clinging to the hair of the marmots native to the region.

The government has responded with campaigns to discourage people from eating the large rodents.

Officials said a man died on Tuesday night in the latest case, which is still to be confirmed by laboratory tests.

More than 70 people in close contact with the 42-year-old, who had bought two dead marmots before he fell ill, will now be tested and undergo quarantine. It comes weeks after a 15-year-old boy also succumbed to the disease in a neighbouring province.

Health officials in China have reported two deaths from its side of the border this month — one from bubonic plague, and another caused by the pharyngeal plague.

Duterte: Will be Russia vaccine 'guinea pig'

Manila, Aug. 12: Philippine President Rodrigo Duterte will be a guinea pig for a controversial Russian Coronavirus vaccine, his spokesman said on Wednesday, as the Southeast Asian nation emerged as a frontrunner for overseas clinical trials.

Moscow says it has developed the world's first vaccine offering "sustainable immunity" against the virus and is in the final stage of tests involving 2,000 people.

However, Western scientists have previously raised concerns about the speed of development of Russian vaccines, suggesting researchers might be cutting corners.

But despite the scepticism, Manila has accepted Russia's offer to participate in clinical trials, vaccine supply and production of the drug, and Philippine health authorities said they are meeting the Russian drug developer Gamaleya on Wednesday.

Russian President Vladimir Putin said the drug was safe and that one of his own daughters had received the inoculation, dubbed "Sputnik V" after the pioneering 1950s Soviet satellite.

Taiwan visit: China warns US against playing with fire

Taipei, Aug. 12: China warned Washington not to "play with fire" on Wednesday as a US delegation wrapped up a historic trip to the self-ruled island of Taiwan. Beijing has been infuriated by the highest-profile visit in decades to Taiwan, which it sees as part of its territory, as US-China relations plunge to a record low over a range of issues from trade to military and the Coronavirus pandemic.

Health chief Alex Azar finished a three-day visit to Taiwan, during which he criticised China's handling of the pandemic and visited the shrine of a former Taiwan president hated by the Communist Party leadership.

Beijing slammed the visit Wednesday and said it "firmly opposes official exchanges between the US and Taiwan under any pretext". "On issues involving China's core interests, some people in the US must not harbour illusions, those who play with fire will get burned," said foreign ministry spokesman Zhao Lijian at a regular press briefing.

Beijing insists that Taiwan is part of "one China".

US arms ban push will fail, hopes Iran

Tehran, Aug. 12: Iran's President has expressed "great hopes" Wednesday that a US bid to extend an arms embargo on his country will fail, warning of consequences if the UN Security Council backs it. Rouhani's remarks came after Iran's ambassador to the United Nations said the US would have to redraft its proposed resolution on the issue after being "rebuffed" by Security Council members.

The ban on selling weapons to Iran is set to be progressively eased from October under the terms of Resolution 2231, which blessed the Iran nuclear deal that world powers agreed in July 2015.

But a UN embargo on materials and technology that Iran could use for its ballistic missile program is to remain in place until 2023. The European Union has said it will continue to enforce its own embargo against Iran after the lifting of the first UN embargo.

Under the accord officially known as the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action, Iran committed to limiting its nuclear programme in exchange for sanctions relief.

The JCPOA has been on life-support since the US withdrew from it and reimposed unilateral sanctions in 2018.

Iran has since taken small but escalatory steps away from compliance with the agreement as it presses for the sanctions relief it was promised.

"We have great hopes that America will fail," Rouhani said.

Oz sailor feted 77 yrs after saving crew

Wellington, Aug. 12: An Australian war hero will be awarded the nation's top military honor more than 77 years after he was killed while saving some of his shipmates.

Britain's Queen Elizabeth II has approved awarding the Victoria Cross to sailor Edward "Teddy" Sheean, Australia's Governor-General David Hurley announced Wednesday.

Prime Minister Scott Morrison said Sheean, who was just 18 when he died, sacrificed his life for his shipmates during World War II.

"After the order was given for the crew of the HMAS Armidale to abandon ship, Japanese aircraft strafed the Australian sailors who were overboard," Morrison said in a statement. "Sheean then turned back, made for the gun, strapped himself in, and returned fire to the Japanese. He fought to the very end."

A week after the ship was sunk near East Timor in December 1942, 49 crew members were rescued, Morrison said. Many of them owed their lives to the actions of Sheean.

Pak passes law to put more curbs on banned outfits

SHAFAQAT ALI | DC ISLAMABAD, AUG. 12

Pakistan's National Assembly passed with a majority vote amendments to the Anti-Terrorism Act, 1997 to put more restrictions on banned outfits as the country continues to take measures to curb terror financing and money laundering.

The new law imposes a restriction on giving loans or financial assistance to people affiliated with banned outfits. Banks have been barred from issuing credit cards to banned people, and their wealth, properties and assets can be seized without notice. Weapon licences issued earlier will be revoked and weapons with old licences will be confiscated. Anyone carrying such arms will be punished and no new licences will be issued to them.

The government has also decided to impose a fine of Rs50 million on people involved in terror activities. Pakistan seeks to get onto the Financial Action Task Force (FATF)'s White List from its Grey List.

The FATF will be deciding Pakistan's fate in October and it depends on whether it can comply with a list of measures it had given to curb terror financing and money laundering in the country.

The global watchdog for illicit financial activities had put Pakistan on its Grey List in June 2018 because of weaknesses in the country's Anti-Money Laundering (AML) and Countering Financing of Terrorism (CFT) laws.

The Grey List refers to countries or jurisdictions under increased monitoring because of strategic AML and CFT deficiencies. After being placed on the Grey List, Pakistan had developed an action plan with the FATF to address those deficiencies, but fell short of the targets.

Law Minister Farogh Naseem said it was a historic day that the Financial Action Task Force (FATF) related legislation is being carried out today with consensus in the larger interest of the country.

He said: "Whitening the economy and checking terror financing is important to take the country forward on the path of development. It is also our aim to simplify the legislation and ensure protection of fundamental rights of the people."

Protests smaller on 3rd night in Belarus

Minsk, Aug. 12: Authorities in Belarus said Wednesday that post-election protests were getting smaller, after police violently put down a third night of demonstrations.

Protesters gathered in Minsk and other cities on Tuesday night to contest strongman President Alexander Lukashenko's disputed victory in Sunday's election, after main challenger Svetlana Tikhonovskaya left the country for Lithuania.

With significant parts of central Minsk blocked off by riot police, they were unable to gather in large crowds as on previous

PAK FM TERMS NAB OFFICE CLASH A DRAMA

Islamabad, Aug. 12: Pakistan Foreign Minister Shah Mehmood Qureshi on Wednesday termed the clash outside National Accountability Bureau (NAB) office on Pakistan Muslim League (Nawaz) vice president Maryam Nawaz's appearance as a drama.

Speaking in the National Assembly, the minister asked about the presence of stones in the car: "I don't want to disturb the assembly decorum by discussing yesterday's scuffle between police and PML-N workers," he added. He said that including name of PML-N lawmaker Rana Tanveer Hussain in FIR without reason was not right as he was in the session and has no hand in the clash.

The reaction came day after a clash erupted between outraged PML-N workers and police as Maryam Nawaz reached the NAB office in a case pertaining to illegal transfer of 180 acres of land in Raiwind.

BRIBE: PUNJAB CM APPEARS BEFORE NAB

Islamabad, Aug. 12: Pakistan Punjab Chief Minister Usman Buzdar appeared before the National Accountability Bureau Lahore on Wednesday to answer questions on illegally awarding a liquor licence to a hotel.

He allegedly received a Rs 50 million bribe to force the Excise and Taxation Department to violate the law. "I will go in and defend myself on my own," Buzdar said before the appearance. "Whatever happens according to the law will happen."

The CM did not want party leaders or provincial cabinet members accompanying him to the NAB office. He chose to travel without government protocol when he left Chief Minister House.

Mr Buzdar's hearing comes a day after PML-N vice-president Maryam Nawaz was set to appear before the NAB to respond to a case of alleged illegal transfer of government land.

nights and smaller protests erupted in various parts of the city.

"The number of protesters was smaller last night, as was the number of cities where protests took place," interior ministry spokeswoman Olga Chemodanova said.

The ministry said more than 1,000 people had been detained after protests Tuesday night.

Protesters and witnesses said riot police used indiscriminate force against those who did gather, firing stun grenades and rubber bullets in Minsk suburbs.

PM ‘mantra’ old hat, should fund state fights

Prime Minister Narendra Modi has given the nation what he called a new mantra to defeat the Coronavirus: testing, tracing, isolation and treatment. The Prime Minister also said if the 10 states that account for 82 per cent of the number of Covid patients are able to contain it, then India will win the war against the pandemic. He has asked the Chief Ministers of West Bengal, Gujarat, Bihar, Uttar Pradesh, Telangana, Andhra Pradesh, Maharashtra, Karnataka, Tamil Nadu and Punjab to step up testing. It is welcome that the Prime Minister is seen to be taking an active interest in the war against the virus but the mantra he has given is by no means new. This formula — to test all the people who could have been in contact with infected people, trace all their contacts and isolate or quarantine them, and treat all those who have been infected — has long been employed successfully across the world. Several Indian states have aggressively pursued this path and have been able to contain the virus. Even Delhi, once considered the Corona capital, and Dharavi, the slum in Mumbai, have employed this mantra successfully. The World Health Organisation has been talking of increased number of tests from the very start of the campaign against the virus. The PM’s advice comes at a time when India’s daily caseload has crossed 60,000; of late, we are ahead of even the United States and Brazil on this count. At present, India with over 23 lakh infections is at the third position in the list of the worst affected nations. With a doubling rate of 22.7 days, India is projected to overtake Brazil in a couple of weeks. The only silver lining is case fatality rate of 2.1 per cent, which is lower than the global average of 3.75 per cent. However, the number of deaths has shown an alarming trend with the figure touching 1,000 on some days. India’s number of tests per million of population is low compared with other severely affected nations: 18,300 per million against 1,99,803 of the US and 62,200 of Brazil. India’s test positivity rate is higher than these two countries, too. An early rollout of the mantra across the country when it was under lockdown would have stopped India from coming to such a pass. However, it is always better late than never.

Apart from the new mantra, what the states who are in the frontline of the “war” want is money. Most states are now exhausted in terms of their financial and human resources. The increasing cost of the Corona fight and the decreasing economic activity stare them in their faces. The suggestion of Tamil Nadu chief minister Edappadi K. Palaniswami that the PM-Cares fund meet at least half of the testing cost merits the Centre’s serious consideration. The government must also drop its reported move to renege on its statutory obligation to offset the shortfall in GST collection. It must open its coffers and help the states instead so that India emerges a winner as Mr Modi suggested.

Educating courts, citizens

All fair-minded Indian citizens have occasion to be grateful to the judiciary today — it has done its job well of reading the law right and settling all ambiguities — whether intentional or wishful — concerning the landmark 2005 amendment to the 1956 Hindu Succession Act. Clearcut in nature, the amendment had nevertheless seen several challenges involving its interpretation — especially with respect to whether the karta or head of the family was alive on the date it had been passed — in the present case, the Court settled seven special leave petitions alongside the main matter involving siblings Vineeta and Rakesh Sharma’s share of family property. The Hindu Succession Act lays down a uniform system of inheritance that applies to persons governed by Hinduism’s Mitakshara (northern India) Dayabhaga (West Bengal, Assam), Murumakkattayam, Aliyasantana and Nambudri (southern India) laws. The amendment expands women’s rights within this law. According to its Section 6, which, the Court pointed out, applies retroactively, rather than retrospectively, daughters are equal coparceners in a Hindu undivided family property irrespective of their date of birth or, alternatively, the date of death of the father, provided there has been no partition or devolution of the property in question before December 20, 2004. This judgment thus ensures that a woman can no longer be denied her share on the ground that she is born prior to the enactment of the law on September 9, 2005, or that her father was not alive on that date. The judgment is a reminder of another progressive judgement in the same context — on December 22, 2015, the Delhi High Court ruled that the eldest female member of a Hindu undivided family can be its karta. However, another critical issue still lies open regarding this very law. It is to do with the daughter’s progeny and lineal descendants. Do they have the same rights as the son’s descendants? Section 15 of the law pertains to the circumstances of a woman dying intestate. It does not give her parental and marital heirs equal rights of inheritance to her property, scrutinising it and returning it to its originator and his heirs, as if she has added no value to it on her part. A reform, thereby, is the need of the hour.

Make India stronger in order to take on China

Sunanda K. Datta-Ray
Reflections

As Australia draws closer to the US in the name of national security and pursues trade diversification, it risks alienating China, its largest trading partner by far with a crucial role in its economic recovery. Australia could be replaced by India in that sentence from a recent article in Hong Kong’s South China Morning Post newspaper by Yuan Jiang, a Chinese Ph.D. student at Australia’s Queensland University of Technology. In neither case is there a lucid articulation of why precisely China is feared.

Some of Prime Minister Narendra Modi’s recent actions might suggest he would like to ban all business with China but lacks the confidence to do so. Restrictions on investment from neighbouring countries — as if Pakistan would put money into India or Nepal has any to do so — are too thinly veiled to fool anyone. Exhorting Indian businessmen to take advantage of the Covid-19 pandemic to lure foreign investors away from China annoys Beijing while ignoring the reasons (weak infrastructure, poor work ethic, bureaucratic stranglehold and all-pervasive corruption) why investors shunned India in the first place.

At the same time, Mr Modi glosses over China’s territorial incursions in Ladakh for reasons that may not be very creditable. Some of his critics suggest that China alone welcomed him when Britain and the United States refused him visas because they disapproved of his attitude to Muslims as the chief minister of Gujarat. As the Congress’ Ahmed Patel remarked,

Mr Modi has paid nine official visits to China whereas no other Indian Prime Minister has gone there more than twice.

Congress leader Rahul Gandhi was even more cutting, and pointing to Mr Modi’s obsession with the gigantic statue of Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel, he added: “It will be the world’s tallest statue but it will be ‘Made in China’, like our shoes and shirts.” It was an unkind cut for two reasons. First, like Shelley’s Ozymandias, Mr Modi hankers to impress future generations with massive creations. Second, much to the embarrassment of all thinking Indians, the fetish has led him straight into China’s embrace. Only China’s Jiangxi Toqine Metal Crafts Corporation, allegedly the world’s largest foundry, could produce the 7,000 or so bronze plates and panels that the $430-million, 600-ft figure needed.

The dependence is evident in other more vital spheres. As China’s Global Times, a daily tabloid published under the Chinese Communist Party’s auspices, noted smugly: “India’s rapid progress in catching up with China when it comes to attracting foreign investment shows its potential to become a global economic powerhouse, but whether India will be the next China in terms of economic growth depends on many factors, and how much help and investment it gets from China may be one of the first and foremost.”

The patronising tone is easily explained: leaving aside the 1962 border war, although both countries have roughly the same population, India’s GDP is only $2.5 trillion, compared with China’s $12.2

trillion. High mobile penetration among 1.3 billion Indians owes much to Chinese Internet platforms, which know from their domestic experience how to translate demographic dividends into consumption power to attract more foreign investment. Among Chinese Internet companies active in India, Alibaba recently invested $45 million in India’s e-commerce platform Paytm.

As the former Prime Minister, Dr Manmohan Singh, has always reiterated, the Asian ecosystem has ample space for India and China both to grow together. There are enough consumers and sources of raw material and investment capital for two burgeoning economies. There are also signs that the Indian tortoise may not be crawling too far behind the Chinese hare.

While foreign corporate launches, mergers and acquisitions in China amounted to nearly $41.6 billion last year, India did not do too badly, with $40.6 billion in foreign direct investment. Walmart’s $16 billion stake in Flipkart meant a 64 per cent year-on-year jump. Moreover, India’s $79 billion remittances from abroad exceeded the $67 billion that the overseas Chinese sent back. As a result, while India’s GDP grew 8.2 per cent in the second quarter, China’s economy grew 6.7 per cent.

However, one of the most important of the several factors that stand in the way of India’s robust growth is the obsession with spectacle instead of development. Mr Modi squanders money on architectural extravaganzas like the Ayodhya temple to Ram that is now being built, reinventing Delhi and gigantic statuary instead of investing in liveable housing, potable water and a creaky healthcare system that is incapable of coping with Covid-19. China, meanwhile, never ceases to advertise itself as the only one among the world’s top five healthcare markets with double digit growth. Another yardstick is that while India is inordinately proud of its nine Nobel laureates, their success is really happenstance. China’s eight prize-winners are the products of the solid primary and secondary school system that has been built up throughout the country.

Standing up to China sounds undeniably patriotic. But we must know the threat in order to repulse it. If the goal had been conquest, China would not have walked away after Bomdila in 1962. If it was economic domination, the Chinese would not have wanted to invest in infrastructure (highways, railways, ports and airports) as well as manufacturing to reduce India’s trade deficit and realise Mr Modi’s “Make in India” dream.

Of course, the Chinese have a strategy and the purpose is to help China, not India. But the way to counter that is not empty bombast and blowing hot and cold, but to build up India’s own economic strength, bargain hard over trade terms to increase India’s exports, and to cooperate in economic and development projects that help both countries. Like Australia, India too cannot contain China in the South China Sea. It would only diminish itself by becoming another Tibet, Xinjiang or now Hong Kong in America’s anti-China armoury.

Sino-Pak attack on India not ruled out

NEW DELHI, Aug. 12

The possibility of Pakistan attacking India with the help of China “cannot be ruled out” Defence Minister Jagjivan Ram said in a written answer in the Lok Sabha today.

We will lose Turkey, if Istanbul is lost.” This statement by President Recep Tayyip Erdogan returned to plague him when his Justice and Development Party lost Ankara, Istanbul and five major cities in 2019’s local elections. This may be one reason why he swiftly transformed the Hagia Sophia museum into a mosque on July 24.

From the Bosphorus, the Istanbul skyline is exactly like picture postcards, a skillful contrast of domes and minarets, slim as thermometers. The brooding Ayasofya Museum stands apart. The greatest Byzantine cathedral, built at the edge of Europe in 537, was designed to dominate the panorama of the Marmara Sea and the Asian mainland beyond.

The first Arab probe of Sindh by Mohammad bin Qasim was in 711 AD, exactly the date when Tariq Ibne Ziad crossed over from Morocco to set up station at what he called Jabal al Tariq, or the Rock of Tariq, which the British renamed Gibraltar in 1704 after the famous Spanish-British naval engagements, including the “Spanish Armada”.

Before the Iberian Peninsula turned into a cauldron of intra-European conflict, 800 years of Muslim rule was somewhat unevenly spread across Spain. To flavour this phase of history, one has to read Maria Rosa Menocal’s masterly Ornament of the World: How Muslims, Jews and Christians created a Culture of Tolerance in Medieval Spain. The title itself tells the story. It is astonishing that in the past three decades of gruelling Islamophobia, not one of our liberals has referred to phases in history when robust multiculturalism thrived under Muslim rule. After Reconquista in 1492 by Christians, the Inquisition was much harsher on the Jews who found refuge in Morocco and later in the Ottoman Empire.

The glory of the greatest Eastern Orthodox Cathedral came under partial eclipse when the Roman Catholic Church occupied it for six decades. But it was Sultan Mehmet’s establishment of the Ottoman Empire in 1453 that caused the cathedral to face a predictable total eclipse. It was then transformed into a mosque.

From the debris of the Ottoman Empire after World War I, Mustafa Kemal Pasha “Ataturk” resurrected what is modern Turkey. He was determined to take his country from “backwardness” into “modernism”.

In other words, he turned his back on “Muslim traditionalism” and dreamt of a secular Turkey, custom made for Europe. He replaced the Arabian alphabet with the Roman script in the Turkish language. He banned the “fez” cap, brought the practice of Islam under a department of religious affairs under the Prime Minister, and so on. Little wonder the texture of life in Istanbul and Ankara was more European than Islamic, rather like North Tehran under the Shah of Iran. But what was the ingredient that made Turkey’s secularism comparatively more durable? It was the Turkish Army, which became the guarantor of the republic’s secularism. Ataturk divined, and quite rightly too, that Hagia Sophia mosque would be an eyesore for Europe, in perpetuity. With one executive order in 1934, it was reinvented as a museum of Byzantine history.

It was Western callousness that, in the ultimate analyses, made Turkey’s secular edifice vulnerable. Western, mostly American, and Israeli hostility to Arab socialism (Egypt), Ba’athism (Iraq, Syria) and Libya’s cradle-to-grave welfare system (details of the Afghan tumult are only slightly different) promoted Islamism on an unspeakable scale.

The details of Turkey’s upheaval must be explained. With the breakup of the former Yugoslavia, Serbian and Croatian nationalisms turned upon Bosnian Muslims with vicious brutality. Srebrenica is only one chapter in that shoddy history. Briefings by Gen Sir Michael Rose, the UN military commander, were laden with more gruesome detail by the day, particularly in the four-year siege of Sarajevo. The Balkans, the turf for continuous conflict throughout history between the Ottoman and the Austro-Hungarian Empires, became an open killing field when Belgrade couldn’t hold Yugoslavia together. The helplessness of Bosnian Muslims was unbelievable. Europe’s reason for not intervening rang hollow. Its intervention, it was said, would cause individual countries to take sides in a conflict where World War II adversaries Serbia and Croatia were fighting each other over the Bosnian spoils.

A Europe sucked into the Bosnian war carried the risk of undermining the very purpose for which the EU was forged: to avoid conflict between member states. This was sophistry, said Salman Rushdie. Reverse the religious affiliations of the combatants, and European troops would be in Bosnia within a day.

Mornings, evenings and afternoons, Turks watched the brutalisation of Bosnia and Sarajevo, both an evocative part of Turkish historical memory. A powerful anti-West Islamist party, Refah, or Welfare, took shape and spread like prairie fire. Necmettin Erbakan, founder of Refah, became Prime Minister. Citing the secular Constitution, the Army swiftly dethroned the “Islamist” Prime Minister.

Erbakan’s protégés Abdullah Gul and Recep Tayyip Erdogan dismantled “Refah” and reappeared in a secular garb as leaders of AK, or Justice and Development Party. As evidence of their secular credentials, they kept alive their EU membership application, despite European callousness. In fact, French President Giscard d’Estaing virtually slapped Turkey across its face, saying: “European civilisation is Christian civilisation.” After his mishandling of Syria, misreading of Europe, the US and Russia, his popularity in serious question, Mr Erdogan has fallen back on the oldest trick in the politician’s book: religious extremism. “Look”, he will address Islamists, “like Mehmet, the conqueror, I have restored for your supplications a great mosque.”

Fuel demand declines by 11.7% in July

India's fuel demand is beginning to flatline after showing signs of returning to life, as consumption dipped 11.7 per cent in July, official data showed. Fuel consumption, a barometer of economic activity, had slumped by over 45 per cent in April as the nationwide lockdown halted most vehicular traffic and shut industries. However, with easing of lockdown restrictions, the demand picked up in May and June.

■ Say imports will hit viability of gardens Tea growers oppose move to reduce duty

SANGEETHA G CHENNAI, AUG. 12

Amidst reports of traders seeking duty-free import of tea, growers across the country have opposed it and warned the government that any such move will destabilise the sector. The Consultative Committee of Plantation Associations (CCPA), the apex body of tea associations in India, urged the government not to reduce import duty on tea "as any move in that direction will disturb the equilibrium of the industry".

"A duty reduction will lead to erosion of domestic prices and subsequently affect the economic viability of the tea gardens and livelihood of lakhs of people," CCPA chairman Vivek Goenka said in a letter to commerce minister Piyush Goyal. The United Planters Association of South India (Upasi) too has maintained that it will be counter-productive for the tea growing sector. According to Upasi president A. R. Nagappan, the industry employs 2.12 lakh growers and 11.65 lakh workers, of which more than 70 per cent are women.

The tea growers have made such requests following reports that tea traders and packing companies had asked the government to allow duty-free imports after tea prices touched new highs in the recent auctions.

After eight years of price stagnation, average tea prices in the country's auctions have risen by 40-60 per cent during the April-June period due to strong buyer demand and a huge shortfall.

According to the Indian Tea Association, the country has already registered a 120-140 million kg shortfall in production. Heavy rains and the absence of tea pickers due to the lockdowns had hammered production and sent tea prices spiraling to records.

In contrast, tea prices in Kenya and Vietnam have fallen due to increased production and traders are planning to import from these countries. Tea imports currently attract duty of 100 per cent. However, under the Free Trade Agreement, tea can be imported from Nepal without duty and from Sri Lanka at a concessional duty of 7.5 per cent.

CCPA says reduction in import duty will see cheap tea flooding the market and it will have disastrous effects on prices. It also wanted tea imported into the country to be checked for the prescribed FSSAI quality norms and compliances.

According to Nagappan, the price increase in the last few auctions does not substantiate the duty reduction argument as the price increase for the period January to June in South India was lower by 9.4 per cent.

Further, India produces tea in surplus and exports around 18-20 per cent of its production. A disruption in the tea industry will also deprive export revenues to the country.

UK plunges into deep recession, 'hard times'

ADITI KHANNA LONDON, AUG. 12

The UK economy plunged into a deep recession as it shrank 20.4 per cent between April and June at the height of the coronavirus lockdown, according to new figures released on Wednesday.

Reacting to the Office for National Statistics (ONS) data, UK chancellor Rishi Sunak admitted that it indicated that the hard times he had warned about are here and that many more jobs will be lost.

"I've said before that hard times were ahead, and today's figures confirm that hard times are here," Sunak told 'Sky News'.

"Hundreds of thousands of people have already lost their jobs, and sadly in the coming months many more will. But while there are difficult choices to be made ahead, we will get through this, and I can assure people that nobody will be left without hope or opportunity," he said.

It marks the first time in 11 years that the UK has tipped into a recession, which is defined by two consecutive three-month periods of falling GDP. The latest GDP figures showed that it fell by 20.4 per cent between April to June, following a drop of 2.2 per cent between January to March. —PTI

ICICI Bank: Stock favoured by world's analysts lags behind

NUPUR ACHARYA AUG. 12

ICICI Bank Ltd is the world's highest rated banking stock, but its performance hasn't exactly been stellar.

The $32-billion lender has 56 buy recommendations, and its consensus rating of 4.95 on a scale of 5 is the highest among the 50 largest banks globally, data compiled by Bloomberg show. But its share price is down 32 per cent this year, ranking it in the bottom four of that same group.

Coronavirus lockdowns and low interest rates have taken a toll on global financial stocks, and Indian banks are still reeling from a crisis among the nation's smaller shadow lenders. Even so, attractive valuations... should stand ICICI Bank's shares in good stead, said Sanjiv Bhasin, executive vice president at IIFL Securities Ltd. "The valuation of ICICI Bank gives a lot of comfort as it has been an underperformer," Bhasin said.

The second-largest public lender is trading at about 1.9 times book value, cheaper than the NSE Nifty Bank Index's 2.7 times. Its earnings have held up, with a 36 per cent rise in net income for the June quarter, helped by the sale of stakes in its insurance subsidiaries.

While the bank reported higher provisions against bad loans due to the pandemic, it plans to raise as much as Rs 15,000 crore through a share sale to institutions to boost its balance sheet. A number of peers have undertaken such financial buffer building this year, and passive flow is seen helping to support ICICI Bank's stock.

"Funds that track the MSCI, FTSE, Nifty 50 and Sensex indexes will need to buy around 40.8 million shares (10 per cent of the share issued in the qualified institutional placement) over the next couple of weeks and the stock could be supported," Brian Freitas, an analyst for Smartkarma, wrote in a note. —Bloomberg

DGFT amends policy on Advance Authorisation

SANGEETHA G CHENNAI, AUG. 12

After the Delhi High Court ruled against DGFT issuing public notice last year withdrawing Advance Authorisation for export of gold jewellery, medallions and coins, the foreign trade authority has amended the Foreign Trade Policy and re-issued the notification. The DGFT on August 10 issued a notification disallowing advance authorisation scheme where the export item is gold medallions and coins, gold jewellery and articles manufactured by fully mechanised process.

The DGFT had issued a public notice on the same matter on September 26, 2019. However, M. D. Overseas, an exporter of gold jewellery and medallions, had filed a petition with the Delhi High Court challenging the withdrawal of the scheme.

As per DGFT rules, Advance Authorisation is issued to allow duty-free import of inputs which are physically incorporated in the export product. The rules allow DGFT to exclude any product.

The Delhi High Court in May 2020 ruled that the public notice issued was beyond DGFT's power jurisdiction and authority.

HC notice to Guj. over factories ordinance

Ahmedabad, Aug. 12: The Gujarat High Court on Tuesday issued a notice to the state government on a petition challenging the Factories (Gujarat Amendment) Ordinance, 2020, calling it "violative" of the basic human rights of factory workers.

The ordinance, promulgated last month, seeks to withdraw protections given to factory workers with regards to their health, safety, hygienic working conditions and working hours, said the petition filed by the Gujarat Mazdoor Sabha (GMS).

A division bench of Justices R. M. Chhaya and L.J. Vora issued notice to the state government returnable on September 3.

The GMS said the amendment (through the ordinance) to the Factories Act, 1948, by the state government seeks to "withdraw all sorts of protections given to the workers employed to the extent of 40 in the power-aided factories, and 20 in the factories running without the aid of power."

As per the ordinance, such industrial units stand excluded from the definition of factory under the Act and safeguards provided to workers under the legislation shall not be applicable to them, the petition said. There are a large number of such factories in Gujarat, it said.

Section 106B of the ordinance authorises the government to make any or all offences under the Act "compoundable," making it "toothless," and making employer "immune to penal actions for violating provisions in respect of workers' health and hygiene, safety, hazardous processes, welfare, working hours," it said.

"Ultimately, workmen employed in the factory would be forced labour which is prohibited under Article 23 of the Constitution," it said. —PTI

Foxconn: China's days as world's factory are over

DEB WU AUG. 12

A key supplier to Apple Inc and a dozen other tech giants plans to split its supply chain between the Chinese market and the US, declaring that China's time as factory to the world is finished because of the trade war.

Hon Hai Precision Industry Co chairman Young Liu said it's gradually adding more capacity outside of China, the main base of production for gadgets from iPhones to Dell desktops and Nintendo Switches. The proportion outside the country is now at 30 per cent, up from 25 per cent last June.

That ratio will rise as the company—known also as Foxconn—moves more manufacturing to Southeast Asia and other regions to avoid escalating tariffs on Chinese-made goods headed to US markets. "No matter if it's India, Southeast Asia or the Americas, there will be a manufacturing ecosystem in each," Liu said, adding that while China will still play a key role in Foxconn's manufacturing empire, the country's "days as the world's factory are done."

The Taiwanese company reported better-than-expected net income of NT$22.9 billion ($778 million) for the quarter ended in June, boosted by increased demand for iPads and MacBooks.

Foxconn has been shaking up its traditionally China-focused operations. Hon Hai is among Apple assembly partners that plan to expand operations in India, potentially helping the iPhone maker grow its presence in the country of 1.3 billion and shift some of the US company's supply chain outside of China as ties between Washington and Beijing fray.

Chinese rivals are also posing a growing challenge. Local electronics titan Luxshare Precision Industry Co is poised to become the first Chinese homegrown iPhone assembler after sealing a deal in July to buy an Apple handset production plant from Wistron Corp. While Hon Hai will keep assembly orders for premium iPhones, Luxshare will eat into the business for mid-to-entry-level Apple handsets, Fubon Securities analyst Arthur Liao wrote in a July 23 note.

Foxconn will work on its component business to maintain tech leadership and it also benefits from its long-term relationship with Apple, Liu said in response to analysts' questions about Foxconn's competitive strategy. —Bloomberg

Things you're doing wrong when buying stocks on your own

EDWARD ROBINSON AUG. 12

Lena Birse is a stay-at-home mom who loves buying tech stocks during market crashes. Jay Smith is a former pro gamer who switched from cryptocurrencies to blue chips. Heloise Greeff is a data scientist who uses machine learning to analyse trading patterns. And Mik Mullins is a retired hotel executive who's betting the market is about to plunge.

These four amateur traders use different approaches but have one thing in common: They're killing it in one of the wildest markets in memory, with returns ranging from 20 to 60 per cent this year.

While many institutional investors bailed out of the market in the early stages of the pandemic, retail investors have piled in and pocketed big gains, especially in surging tech stocks. The US digital brokerage Robinhood signed up 3 million new users in the first five months of the year, giving it 13 million total customers.

But playing the market is fraught with risks. To learn how to avoid pitfalls, Bloomberg News picked the brains of these four top performers on eToro, a digital trading platform regulated by the UK's Financial Conduct Authority. E*Trade lets people copy the trades of investors with proven track records, like this quartet.

They all believe newcomers make mistakes by not investing for the long term and by not diversifying their portfolios with at least 30 well-researched names. Here are the other mistakes they spotted.

Jumping In Without Testing Out Trading Strategies: When Heloise Greeff decided to plunge into the stock market in 2016, she did what any good scientist does—she experimented. Greeff used a "demo account" on eToro to execute simulated trades with $100,000 of fake money. She discovered straight away that trying to time the market and trade in and out of positions everyday was a bad idea.

Greeff loves looking for patterns in oceans of market data. When the S&P 500 Index and other benchmarks were hitting all-time highs late last year, the data was sending her a powerful signal: It was time to retreat. "I am a conservative trader so I liquidated 60 per cent of the positions in my portfolio, and while I missed the highs of January, I had peace of mind," she says. Since then, Greeff has waded back in. She's up around 20 per cent this year.

Chasing Hyped Stocks Instead of Doing Research: After dropping out of school at age 14, Jay Smith sought glory on the virtual playing fields of eSports. He became smitten with Bitcoin and other cryptocurrencies, as well as solar energy stocks. When the digital coin bubble popped in 2018, Smith's portfolio fell almost 54 per cent and he learned a painful lesson in the dangers of hype.

These days, the 32-year-old's bets are a far less racy mix: Chipmaker AMD and Microsoft, and this year he started buying shares in Home Depot and Lowe's, the home improvement giants. He does his homework on companies. "I spend a large amount of time reading product user manuals and watching launch events on YouTube. A solar company I followed recently held a training day online, so I watched to see how they install their equipment." He's up about 50 per cent this year.

Making Big Bets Instead of Starting Small: A few years ago, after Lena Birse and her husband sold their heating business in Bristol, they decided to invest the windfall in stocks. Birse balked at paying fees to a money manager. She started small, buying modest stakes in household names, such as the UK retailer Tesco. Eventually, she grew confident enough to switch to high-octane stocks.

The mother of two teenagers splurged on a beachfront dream house on the Mediterranean and a London flat.

Investing Money You Need in Five Years: Mik Mullins says he felt like a blind, drunk monkey stumbling in the dark when he started investing in the early 2000s. Eventually, Mullins, a British expat in Singapore, found his footing by getting in early on companies that were disrupting global industries, like Facebook and Zillow. In 2012, he retired at the age of 42 from his profession as a hotel marketing consultant to tend his portfolio. And he advised friends to follow one primary rule: Never invest money that you're going to need for big-ticket items such as a house or college tuition. Mullins is a true believer in investing for the long term. He doesn't even like to look at his portfolio more than once a week.

Obsessively Checking Your Portfolio: It can be tempting to keep looking at the daily swings in your stocks' prices, but if you do this every day, it spurs panicky trades and losses.

Over time, Birse said she built a tolerance for risk. After the pandemic hit, she resisted the urge to panic. Instead, she bided her time and prepared to add to her positions in longtime "winners" like Shopify, the Canadian e-commerce firm that's skyrocketed 148 per cent this year.

"I used to turn off the computer during selloffs," says Birse, 50. "But then I wanted to be more active, more aggressive, so in March I stole my nerves, waited three weeks, and then it was time to go shopping. It felt like the sale of the century."

Russia pays fine to escape ban

Moscow: Russia paid $6.3 million to World Athletics on Wednesday to escape expulsion from track and field's world governing body.

The federation, known as RusAF had a Saturday deadline to pay a $5 million fine and $1.3 million in costs to World Athletics. That followed the alleged use of forged medical documents to give an athlete an alibi for being unavailable for drug testing. RusAF was threatened with expulsion after it missed an initial July 1 deadline to pay.

"World Athletics can confirm it has today received the funds to settle RusAF's two outstanding payments," World Athletics said in a statement.

The Russian Sports Ministry put up the funds after RusAF said it couldn't pay. The ministry said on Wednesday that it gave RusAF "a one-time subsidy for developing the sport, including clearing the debt to World Athletics," but didn't specify how much money has been transferred to the Russian sporting organisation.

Serena, Simona are stretched

Los Angeles: A rusty Serena Williams made a winning return from her six-month coronavirus hiatus on Tuesday, defeating lowly ranked Bernarda Pera in three sets to advance to the second round of the WTA Top Seed Open tournament in Kentucky.

Williams, who before Tuesday had not played a competitive game since a Fed Cup appearance in February, was forced to come from behind to defeat world number 60 Pera 4-6, 6-4, 6-1 in two hours and 15 minutes at the Top Seed Tennis Club in Lexington.

Meanwhile, top-seeded Simona Halep had to fight hard to advance to the second round of the Prague Open in beating unseeded Polana Herczeg 6-1, 1-6, 7-6 (3) on Tuesday.

It was the first competitive match for Halep since she won the Dubai Championships in February for her 20th career WTA title. Before the Wimbledon champion recovered from a foot injury she sustained in Dubai, the coronavirus pandemic forced a five-month break. — Agencies

CWG Village to be a multi-site affair

Birmingham: The Covid-19 pandemic has forced the organisers of the 2022 Commonwealth Games to opt for a multi-site athletes village instead of building single accommodation facility for players and officials.

According to the Games organisers, the athletes and team officials will now be housed in three campus villages at The University of Birmingham, The University of Warwick, and The NEC Hotel Campus. The 500 million pound village was being constructed on the former Birmingham City University site in Perry Barr and was set to provide accommodation to 6,500 athletes and team officials.

However, the organisers scrapped the idea after sensing that it could not be delivered on time. The new campus model will see 1,600 athletes and officials housed at the NEC Hotel Campus, 1,900 at The University of Warwick, and the principal village with 2,800 at The University of Birmingham.

RIDERS BRACE FOR AUSTRIAN GP IN RAIN

Spielberg, Austria: Forecasts are predicting a wet and wild Austrian Grand Prix at the Red Bull Ring as Alex Marquez and Stefan Bradl look to launch a rejuvenated challenge.

The MotoGP World Championship arrives in Austria for the first of two races at the Red Bull Ring hot off the back of the Czech GP. It proved to be a trying weekend for the Repsol Honda Team, but both riders are ready to put the weekend behind them and focus on adapting their respective Repsol Honda RC213V machines to the Austrian circuit.

Rajasthan Royals fielding coach tests positive

New Delhi, Aug. 12: Rajasthan Royals' fielding coach Dishant Yagnik has tested positive for Covid-19, the IPL team announced on Wednesday, making it the first such case among the league franchises ahead of their departure next week to this year's tournament venue, the UAE.

The 13th edition of Indian Premier League is set to take place in the UAE from September 19 to November 10. The event was moved out of India due to Covid-19 cases.

"Rajasthan Royals would like to inform that their fielding coach Dishant Yagnik has tested positive for Covid-19," the franchise said in a statement.

"The test was undertaken keeping in mind that the team members need to assemble in Mumbai next week for their flight to the UAE. The franchise implemented an extra test for all players, support staff and management travelling to the UAE in addition to the two tests recommended by BCCI," the statement added.

This is the first case among the IPL contingent. Yagnik is currently in his hometown Udaipur and has been advised to get admitted to a hospital for the mandatory 14-day quarantine.

After the completion of the two-week quarantine, Yagnik will be undergoing two tests as per the BCCI's Covid protocols and will be allowed back into the team only after his reports return negative.

After his arrival in UAE, Yagnik will have to stay in self-isolation for the next six days and will also undergo three more Covid-19 tests.

FRESH BID FOR SPONSORS

New Delhi, Aug. 12: Education technology company Unacademy, which is already one of IPL's sponsors, is eyeing the league's title sponsorship rights now and is set to submit its bid to replace Chinese mobile phone company Vivo this season.

A BCCI official confirmed that Unacademy has picked up the bid papers but refrained from making any comments beyond that. "I can confirm that Unacademy has shown interest and picked the bid papers. I have heard they will be submitting a bid and are pretty serious. So Patanjali if they bid, will have competition," the senior official said.

The BCCI is now looking at a lesser value — between ₹300 to ₹350 crore — for a period of four months and 13 days.

CSK want MSD to play till 2022

New Delhi, Aug. 12: Chennai Super Kings CEO Kasi Vishwanathan feels their talisman Mahendra Singh Dhoni, who has not played any competitive cricket since last year's World Cup semifinal, will be part of the franchise in 2021 and 2022 IPLs.

The 39-year-old Dhoni is set for a return to competitive cricket in the upcoming IPL, to be played in the UAE from September 19 to November 10.

"We can expect MS Dhoni to be part of both (IPL 2020 and 2021) and probably for even the next year 2022," Vishwanathan was quoted as saying by an Indian news media outlet.

"I am getting updates through the media only, saying he has been training in Jharkhand in indoor nets. But we don't have to worry about the skipper, boss. We don't worry about him at all."

"He knows his responsibilities and he will take care of himself and the team," he added.

N. Srinivasan, the vice-chairman and managing director of India Cements, owners of the CSK franchise, in January said that Dhoni would be retained by the team for the 2021 IPL mega-auction.

Speculations were rife about Dhoni's future since the 2019 World Cup as he failed to get a central BCCI contract.

DADDY'S ARMY READY FOR IPL, SAYS BALAJI

Chennai, Aug. 12: The presence of many players who are deep into their 30s is a boon and not bane for Chennai Super Kings as they head into the 13th IPL after the long Coronavirus-forced break, the team's bowling coach L Balaji said on Wednesday.

Mahendra Singh Dhoni, 39, is getting ready to lead the three-time winners in the upcoming edition of IPL, scheduled to be held in the UAE from September 19 to November 10.

Asked if the senior players would find it difficult to get back into the groove, Balaji responded in the negative.

"I don't think it's going to be that difficult, because all your life you have played this sport. So many years of understanding will come in handy to get back to your best," Balaji said.

"Experience will definitely be important. It has been proven in big tournaments like IPL."

Besides the skipper, the franchise, among others, has in its ranks veterans such as Shane Watson and Dwayne Bravo.

Shakhtar bump Basel, in semis

Gelsenkirchen (Germany), Aug. 12: Shakhtar Donetsk routed Basel 4-1 to set up a Europa League semifinal against Inter Milan.

Four Brazilians scored for the Ukrainian side before Ricky van Wolfswinkel netted a consolation goal for the Swiss side.

Junior Moraes put Shakhtar ahead in the second minute by steering in a header from Marlos' corner. It was the Brazilian-born Ukraine forward's 25th goal across all competitions, coming after he scored two against Wolfsburg in the second leg of their rescheduled Round-of-16 tie last week.

Taison grabbed Shakhtar's second with a deflected shot after a fine flowing team move in the 22nd.

Raoul Petretta produced a clearance to deny Moraes from the rebound.

Alan Patrick's penalty in the 75th effectively sealed the Ukrainian side's place in the semifinals.

Shakhtar will play Inter in Dsseldorf on August 17. The final takes place in Cologne four days later.

SEVILLA HUNT DOWN WOLVES TO MAKE LAST-4

A late header from Lucas Ocampos gave Sevilla a 1-0 win over Wolverhampton and a place in the Europa League semifinals.

After Raul Jimenez missed an early penalty for Wolves, Sevilla increasingly took control of the game. The five-time Europa League champion had seemingly endless set pieces around the Wolves penalty area and finally broke through when Ocampos headed in Eder Banega's cross following a corner in the 88th minute.

Wolves forward Adama Traore earlier showed extraordinary pace in his 53rd club game of the season to sprint in behind the Sevilla defense, only for Diego Carlos to cut him down with a tackle from behind for the penalty.

Jimenez's spot-kick was barely off-center and pushed away by Yassine Bounou.

England out of Stokes for second Test vs Pak

Southampton, Aug. 12: England may have won the series opener against Pakistan but the absence of Ben Stokes leaves them with arguably the bigger selection headache going into Thursday's second Test at Southampton.

Pakistan were much the better side for much of last week's first Test at Old Trafford and, despite a second-innings collapse, were still favourites to win when they reduced England to 117-5 in pursuit of a target of 277.

But a sixth-wicket partnership of 139 between Chris Woakes (84 not out) and Jos Buttler (75) turned the tide as England went 1-0 up in a three-match series on Saturday.

Since England won with more than a day to spare in Manchester, it has been announced that star allrounder Stokes will miss the rest of the series as a result of travelling to New Zealand to be with his ill father.

Stokes, however, still took two important wickets on the third evening against Pakistan.

The obvious move for England would be to recall batsman Zak Crawley, who has missed out on the last two matches while an extra bowler has been deployed because of Stokes' injury problems.

Buttler underlined his skill in a run-chase last week but the wicketkeeper, by his own admission, had a poor match with the gloves. England do have the option to recall Ben Foakes, widely regarded as a better keeper, and play Buttler as a specialist batsman.

England are in the middle of a sequence of six Tests in seven weeks, a gruelling schedule that has seen them adopt a policy of rotating their quicks.

ATM hope to be on the money

Madrid, Aug. 12: Atletico Madrid's triumph over Liverpool in March was a throwback to a more celebrated past under Diego Simeone but five months on and the Champions League offers them a very real opportunity in the present.

Knocking out the holders at Anfield may prove to be the first glimpse of a new era under Simeone, where the likes of Joao Felix, Marcos Llorente, Jose Gimenez and Jan Oblak push Atletico to challenge for major honours again.

Or it could be a last hurrah for the Simeone project, which some believe will never again scale the heights of their incredible Spanish league title win in 2014 or their runs to the Champions League finals in 2014 and 2016.

Either way, few believed Llorente's two goals in extra-time would be the start of something even more surprising, namely Simeone lifting the cup in May.

Certainly nobody anticipated football shutting down completely the following week, as nervousness turned to indignation about Atletico fans travelling to Anfield, before matches behind closed doors became matches postponed indefinitely.

And yet when football returned in June, Atletico were transformed. They went unbeaten in the 11 games after the resumption, to dispel concerns they could miss out on La Liga's four.

They won seven matches and drew four; one of them against Barcelona at Camp Nou, which helped Real Madrid clinch the title.

Portland edge past Mavericks

Orlando, Aug. 12: Damian Lillard exploded for 61 points on Tuesday as the Portland Trail Blazers roared towards a place in the NBA playoffs with a thrilling 134-131 win over the Dallas Mavericks.

Lillard — who had scored 51 points in a victory against the Philadelphia 76ers on Sunday — once again led from the front for Portland, who are now within touching distance of a postseason berth.

The Blazers talisman nailed a clutch three-pointer in the closing stages to level the score at 130-130 and then provided the assist that saw Portland take a 132-130 lead with just under a minute remaining.

The win vaulted Portland above the Memphis Grizzlies into the eighth and final playoff spot in the Western Conference standings with 34 wins and 39 defeats.

The eighth — and ninth — placed teams in the West will advance to an elimination game this weekend to determine who claims the final postseason berth from the conference.

Lillard's 61-point effort made him only the second player in NBA history to score 60 points or more in three games during a single season, putting him alongside Wilt Chamberlain.
