India reports record day of 4,329 virus deaths

■ Number of new cases falls to around 2.60 lakh in a day

VINEETA PANDEY | DC
NEW DELHI, MAY 18

There appears to be some light at the end of the dark tunnel of the Covid-19 second wave, as for the second consecutive day India recorded less than 3 lakh daily new cases while daily recoveries crossed more than 4.22 lakh for the first time. A decline of 1.63 lakh in the active caseload in the last 24 hours was registered, and 2,63,533 new cases. However, the death figures continue to be very high. A total of 4,329 fresh fatalities were recorded in 24 hours on Tuesday.

Several states that were earlier reporting very high cases are now showing a decline in daily trends while some others continue to show an upward trajectory. However, a Union health ministry official said only two per cent of India's total population has been affected by the disease so far and 98 per cent are still susceptible.

PM MODI CALLS FOR GREATER AWARENESS OF MUCORMYCOSIS

New Delhi, May 18: Prime Minister Narendra Modi on Tuesday interacted with leading doctors and deliberated on the recent challenge of Mucormycosis. He urged doctors to make extra effort in spreading awareness about it and underlined the need to strengthen the reach of telemedicine in tehsils and districts of the country by training students and interns.

"You understand the challenges of your district much better. So when your district wins, the country wins. When your district beats Corona, the country defeats Corona," he said and commended officials who were working without taking any leave in spite of contracting Covid-19. He added that they are an inspiration to many and he understands the sacrifices made by them.

Mr Modi also said that work is being done rapidly to install oxygen plants in hospitals in every district of the country through the PMCCares Fund and these plants have already started functioning in many hospitals.

said. Nitiaayog member (health) Dr V.K. Paul said efforts at containment and testing are resulting in stabilization but still a few states continue to be "cause of concern". "There is a mixed picture but overall there is stabilisation and what we know from scientific analysis is that the reproduction number is below 1 now, which means the pandemic is shrinking. We are hoping and keeping the case fatality rate reasonably under control. We have to be very mindful that when we are achieving a declining positivity rate it is a result of what we are doing and that doing cannot be slackened. We cannot again let this go out of hand," Dr Paul said. He added it has been seen that children were affected and that they are largely asymptomatic.

"Severe disease in children is uncommon but we have a protocol for that too. Children can have asymptomatic infection and they can also spread it. We have reasonable clarity on it," he said, adding Covaxin is beginning trials on children in 10-12 days.

Delhi chief minister Arvind Kejriwal on Tuesday urged the Centre to stop flights from Singapore where a variant of Covid has been detected in children. Singapore has shut all schools at the moment.

CONG WANTS TO TARNISH IMAGE OF INDIA, PM: BJP

DC CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI, MAY 18

The Congress on Tuesday attacked the BJP for allegedly circulating a fake document and terming it as a Congress "toolkit". Congress leader Rajeev Gowda said the saffron party was propagating a fake toolkit on Covid-19 mismanagement and attributing it to the AICC research department. The party has written to the Delhi police and demanded that an FIR be lodged against BJP president J.P. Nadda, Union minister Smriti Irani and party leaders Sambit Patra and B.L. Santosh for sharing a "forged document". Congress leader and lawyer Aman Pawar said: "We have submitted our complaint to the police and demanded arrests. If the police doesn't register an FIR, we will move court."

Claiming to have accessed a "toolkit" sent by the Congress to its leaders and workers on how to "defame" Prime Minister Narendra Modi and the Centre over Covid management, the BJP shared the document on the social media Tuesday with the hashtag "#Congress Toolkit Exposed", and accused the Congress of maligning India's image, "commercialising" the global pandemic for political opportunity, and whipping up communal frenzy during the crisis.

Leading the attack, Mr Nadda said: "Dividing society and spewing venom against others... The Congress is a master at this. India is seeing Congress' antics, while the nation is fighting Covid-19. I would urge the Congress to go beyond toolkits and do something constructive."

Ms Irani said: "My country, our country is at war with a virus. I can understand the Opposition would want to attack the government. But to singularly commercialise it as a political opportunity and deal in death... I never imagined the Congress was capable of such a low."

KOLKATA, MAY 18

A day after getting arrested and chargsheeted by the CBI in the Narada sting operation case, three of the four accused TMC leaders, who are now in judicial custody, were admitted to SSKM Hospital one after another since early Tuesday complaining of respiratory distress at the Presidency Central Jail.

At around 3.45 am, state panchayat minister Subrata Mukherjee, Kamarhati MLA Madan Mitra and former Kolkata mayor Sovan Chatterjee were rushed to the state government-run hospital from the prison. Mr Mitra and Mr Chatterjee were admitted to the Woodburn Block immediately. They were given oxygen support, and their condition is now stable.

Mr Mukherjee returned to the jail after feeling slightly better, but in the morning, he again felt discomfort and was brought to the hospital, where he was admitted in the same ward where Mr Mitra and Mr Chatterjee are being treated.

The fourth accused, Firhad Hakim, also felt discomfort at the prison, and doctors checked his health at the prison hospital.

On Tuesday afternoon, the TMC fielded Congress leader and veteran lawyer Abhishek "Manu" Singhvi to move the Calcutta high court seeking reconsideration of Monday night stay order by a division bench of acting Chief Justice Rajesh Bindal and Justice Arijit Banerjee on the special CBI court's interim bail to the four accused as the CBI plans to file a caveat in the Supreme Court on the case.

Along with TMC MP Kalyan Banerjee and Siddharth Luthra, Mr Singhvi argued that the accused's representatives could not take part in the high court hearing. They also urged the high court to hear their appeal along with the CBI's plea for transfer of the Narada sting operation case. Both matters will come up for hearing Wednesday when the judicial custody of the four is due to end.

Shaba Hakim, one of the daughters of the minister, who met him at the prison, said: "My father is sad because he cannot work for the people now amid the pandemic despite being the administrator of the Kolkata Municipal Corporation."

Chaos reigns on Chennai roads

CHENNAI, MAY 18

As chaos and confusion reigned on Chennai roads with police suddenly cracking down on motorists on Tuesday, preventing even frontline workers from going to work in vehicles while insisting on e-registration - the system was brought into force out of the blue - public anger turned against the government.

At many of 388 check points, erected overnight on the roads in Chennai, motorists heading for work were seen arguing with the police showing them identity cards and other documents to prove that they were part of essential services.

But in many places police were firm on rejecting all such claims and demanding e-registration, which vehicles must have if they had to go from one police district to another. In the case of Chennai, there are 12 police districts and some people had to get the e-registration done to even go to their work place a few streets away.

When policemen refused to accept the regular passes that motorists had with them till Monday and asked them to return or pay a fine or have their vehicles seized, people started criticising the new government. People pointed out that the police who had been very gentle in the initial stages of the lockdown had suddenly turned very aggressive and foulmouthed and blamed it on the new government, saying that it had let loose the police on common people. ■ P2

Motorists were in for a rude shock on Tuesday as police insisted on e-registration for moving even beyond police station limits. There were huge bottlenecks at each checkpoint in the city leading to riled road users.

HBL may get a fillip in vaccine production

CHENNAI, MAY 18

With Chief Minister M.K. Stalin on Tuesday declaring that his government will initiate immediate steps to manufacture Covid-19 vaccines in the state, the defunct HLL Biotech Limited (HBL), a state-run health infrastructure under the Union ministry of health and family welfare at Chengalpet, is expected to get a fillip.

The Chief Minister has directed that necessary infrastructure should be established in Tamil Nadu to find a permanent solution to the shortage of oxygen, oxygen concentrators, Covid-19 vaccines, hi-tech equipment and other Corona-related medicines. be examined and steps will be taken to establish the infrastructure for producing life-saving drugs, oxygen and vaccines soon. The Tamil Nadu Industrial Development Corporation will establish production units on a joint venture basis with companies which are ready to invest at least Rs 50 crore, Stalin said.

Dr Rex Sargunam, president, Tamil Nadu Health

Development Association, said the revival of health infrastructure like HBL was a need of the hour as the country is fighting a pandemic. The decision of the government to invite expressions of interest is a step in the right direction. Now the state government in consultation with the Centre should find out interested parties to utilise vaccine-producing infrastructure that has been lying defunct for years. If the HBL is made able to produce vaccines, the state can be self-sufficient in inoculating its population. The HBL has already built an Integrated Vaccine Complex (IVC) to develop, manufacture and supply affordable life-saving vaccines to the Government of India for its Universal Immunisation Programme. If the government ties up with private players, the IVC can be made use of to ensure mass production of Covid-19 vaccine', he added.

HBL, which was commissioned in 2018, was expected to make the country self-sufficient in manufacturing vaccines for Japanese Encephalitis, Rabies, Measles and Hepatitis B apart from BCG and pentavalent combination vaccines under India's Universal Immunisation Programme. But even after two years, the ambitious unit failed to produce even a single dose of vaccine, reducing to the production of sanitisers and alcohol-based disinfectants.

It may be recalled that Union health minister Harsh Vardhan, during a visit to HBL in January, had said that the facility would soon be optimally utilised to produce Covid-19 vaccines.

Quarantine violators to be fined ₹2,000

DC CORRESPONDENT
CHENNAI, MAY 18

At a time when the authorities push for home quarantine for the asymptomatic cases to tackle hospital bed shortage, implementing the quarantine norms in the Covid-infected families remains a challenge as the family contacts move around violating the norms.

Greater Chennai Corporation (GCC) commissioner Gagandeep Singh Bedi said they would fine ₹2,000 those who violate the home quarantine norms.

Many of the asymptomatic Covid-19 patients and their family members are roaming free in the streets. Such irresponsible behaviour will spread the virus to a large number of people. If anybody in the Covid19-affected families violates the quarantine norms, the local residents or neighbours can tip off the GCC officials on the number 044-2538450. Apart from fine, the violators will also be sent to government-run Covid-19 care centres. As many as 2,000 focus volunteers have been deployed across the 15 zones to keep a vigil on the patients and their family members', he said. As part of the quarantine norms for Covid-infected families, the households should mandatorily keep themselves indoors wearing a mask and maintain social distancing till the isolation period of the patient ends. Earlier this month, the GCC had issued a notice saying that if a Covid-19 patient is advised home quarantine, all household contacts need to mandatorily quarantine themselves.

Revathi Balan allowed them to serve the patients.

Divided into two groups, the first batch of 20 students serve in the morning shift from 8 am to 4 pm. They are replaced by the rest of seven in the night shift, according to Dr Revathi Balan, who added that the SFI volunteers also help the hospital administration in digitally uploading the data of the people coming for RT-PCR tests.

The students also help the hospital administration in collecting the bed occupancy data from all the 13 Covid blocks and make the admission process easy.

The problems faced by TMCH during the first wave of pandemic last year in providing food to the patients did not arise in the second wave, mainly because of the student volunteers, who judiciously distributed the food at every patient's bed. Earlier, it was an exhausting task for the patients to collect their food packets kept at the ground floor. "Many did not get food as some of the patients, who came first, took additional packets," said a staff nurse.

Though their parents are scared about their children serving the Covid patients as volunteers, the students are satisfied. Joison, a volunteer, who is the Thoothukudi district secretary of the SFI, said that during the first wave they provided free food for the destitutes on the streets. Now they chose to work in the hospital as the situation warranted it.

The students who are working in the hospital for around a week now, however, take all precautionary measures including quarantining themselves from their family members after every day's service.

Exempted industries must ensure safety of employees: HC

DC CORRESPONDENT
CHENNAI, MAY 18

The Madras high court has expressed its hope that the industries that have been exempted from the rigours of the lockdown take independent measures to ensure the well-being and safety of the employees required to attend the office or manufacturing units.

The first bench comprising Chief Justice Sanjib Banerjee and Justice

Senthil Kumar Ramamoorthy was passing interim orders on the petitions filed by Workmen of Renault-Nissan and another.

The bench said the petitioners' grievances were manifold, including the government's decision to allow the automobile industry to function during the lockdown. The petitioners say that just because there may be pending export orders would not mean that the safety or health of the workmen may be compromised to keep the manufacturing units running. The petitioners say that there was no justifiable basis for the automobile industry to be exempted from the strict lockdown conditions otherwise imposed all over the state in the wake of the second surge of the pandemic, the bench added.

The bench said the state, doubtless, was monitoring the situation at the various manufacturing units and should take immediate appropriate steps as deemed fit in the larger public interest and to maintain public health. In the event the state finds Covid protocol not being maintained at the exempted manufacturing units, immediate appropriate steps should be taken. The state should also monitor the working at various places and advise or restrict the functioning to the extent that may be necessary so as not to compromise public health, the bench added and posted to May 24, 2021, for the state's affidavit to be received.

Orders passed for basic infra

Also, a slew of public interest petitions demanding basic amenities were also looked into and necessary orders passed. Among them were M Munusamy's demand for an anganwadi centre at a cost of ₹10.1 lakh and Murugan's demand for a check dam across Sitheri canal at a cost of ₹4.6 lakh. Both the petitioners are from Thiruvallur district.

Ranipet district's Gunasekaran had wanted concrete road in Asanallikuppam, which was sanctioned at a cost of ₹1.89 lakh, and Bhuvnesh Kumar had asked for a public tap that was allowed to be set up at a cost of ₹1.1 lakh, an official press release said.

About 4 lakh petitions received during Stalin's election campaign were brought to Chennai from all the districts in 72 wooden containers and 275 cardboard boxes and handed over on May 9 to the department, which sorted them out district wise, categorised them and uploaded them in the website manned by TNeGA.

So far 70,000 petitions had been uploaded with each of them getting a unique identification number, which had been sent to the petitioner through SMS, the release said, adding that, based on the details furnished, action was being taken by the district officials.

Among the individual beneficiaries, to whom Stalin handed over the relief, some are from Chennai. They are: Adambakkam Rani (old age pension), St Thomas Mount Nithya (widow pension), T Nagar U Sathyanarayanan (disabled persons' pension), Choolaimedu Thayaramma (Unmarried women's pension) Tondaiarpet Sumathi (sewing machine), Villivakkam Udhayakumar (hereditary certificate) and Thousand Lights Nandini (hearing aid).

Other beneficiaries are from Ranipet district. They are: Jayanthi (patta for housing plot), Muthuraman (assistance to build house) and Subash (aid for drip irrigation).

JOURNALIST, ACTIVIST BOOKED UNDER NSA

Imphal, May 18: The Manipur Police has booked journalist Kishorchandra Wangkhem and activist Erendro Leichombam under the National Security Act (NSA) for their allegedly derivative social media posts involving state BJP chief S. Tikendra Singh, following his demise due to Covid-19 last week, police sources said.

The duo, both in their 40s, was arrested on Thursday after they took to Facebook to extend their condolences, while also writing that cow dung or cow urine was no cure for Covid-19, in two separate posts.

The saffron party's state vice-president Usham Deban Singh and general secretary P. Premananda Meetei filed a complaint against Wangkhem and Leichombam, and shortly after the police picked them up from their residences here.

They were granted bail on Monday, but the government subsequently invoked the NSA.

Supreme Court judge Justice B.R.Gavai on Tuesday recused from hearing former Mumbai police commissioner Param Bir Singh's petition seeking transfer of all the departmental inquiries initiated against him by the Maharashtra government either to another state or to an independent agency like the CBI as he has no confidence in the probe by the state government.

NEW DELHI, MAY 18

The Supreme Court on Tuesday issued notice to the West Bengal Government over the killing of two BJP workers on May 2 in the post-poll violence on a plea by the brother of one of the deceased and wife of the other deceased.

A vacation bench comprising Justice Vineet Saran and Justice B.R.Gavai issued notice to the West Bengal government on a petition by one Biswajit Sarkar - brother of BJP leader Avijit Sarkar and another by the widow of BJP worker Haran Adhikari. The court directed further hearing in the matter on May 25.

Appearing for the petitioner Biswajit Sarkar, senior advocate Mahesh Jethmalani told the court that there was total inaction by the state machinery to control the violence.

"The activists murdered belonged to the BJP. It was encouraged by the state administration and police stood idly. It requires action and court monitoring," Jethmalani told the court (sic).

Jathmalani sought the post-mortem of Sarkar's body, which has not been cremated so far. Violence had erupted in parts of West Bengal after the election results were declared on May 2 giving a thumping majority to Mamata Banerjee's Trinamul Congress. The BJP alleged that its activists were targeted by the Trinamul Congress workers

MP woman threatens to commit suicide

Demands injection to treat husband suffering from black fungus in Indore hosp

Indore, May 18: The video of a woman threatening to jump off the roof of a hospital in Indore in Madhya Pradesh if her husband suffering from Mucormycosis or black fungus infection does not get an injection required for its treatment went viral on Tuesday. A hospital official said the woman's 40-year-old husband had been administered Amphotericin-B injections but he would need more shots and this had left her disturbed. "I am speaking from Bombay Hospital. My husband is admitted in this hospital with black fungus infection and has pain in his eyes and jaws. The injection (Amphotericin-B) is not available in this hospital. Where should I take him in this condition," the woman said in the video. "If I don't get the injection today, then I will jump off the roof of the hospital and commit suicide. I have no other option left," she says further in the video message addressed to Chief Minister Shivraj Singh Chouhan, state health minister Prabhu Ram Choudhary and Indore collector Manish Singh. Meanwhile, Bombay Hospital general manager Rahul Parasher said the woman was counselled but she is in a disturbed state of mind at present. "Her husband has been administered 59 Amphotericin-B injections but his requirement is more. These injections are not available in the hospital at present and patients are being treated for Mucormycosis with other anti-fungal drugs," Parasher explained. On Monday, a minister had said 122 patients were admitted in Indore with Mucormycosis. The shortage of Amphotericin-B injections is being highlighted by patients as well as political leaders over the past few days, including Congress Rajya Sabha MP Digvijaya Singh who has written a letter on this issue to the CM. Mucormycosis, a rare and dangerous fungal infection, is being seen in some COVID-19 patients as well as those who have recovered from the infection. —PTI

EFFORTS MADE TO RAMP UP VACCINE SUPPLY, SAYS MODI

New Delhi, May 18: Prime Minister Narendra Modi said on Tuesday that continuous efforts are being made to ramp up COVID-19 vaccine supply in a big way, asserting that attempts are on to provide states 15-day advance schedule of the inoculation programme as it will allow them to prepare accordingly.

Interacting with state and district officials at a virtual meeting, he described them as "field commanders" in the fight against COVID-19 and said localised containment zones, aggressive testing and sharing correct and complete information with people are weapons to defeat it.

The meeting was attended by district magistrates from 46 districts across nine states.

People's convenience increases when information like bed availability for the sick or the vaccine availability are easily available, Modi said and also asked officials to curb black-marketing and take strict action should be taken against those who do so.

Noting that coronavirus infections are decreasing in some states and increasing in some others, he emphasised the need to be more vigilant in the face of decreasing tally and underlined that he has always stressed that the fight is about saving every single life.

Asserting that vaccination is a strong way to fight COVID, Modi said myths about it have to be collectively rooted out.

The health ministry is streamlining the system and process of vaccination, he said, stressing the need to stop vaccine wastage.

Noting that every district has its own unique challenges, he told officials that they had a free hand to innovate to suit their local needs and asked them to share their feedback about any change in policy they may want without any inhibition.

Hailing officials, the prime minister said many of them worked despite being COVID positive while some lost their family members but they gave duty their foremost priority. "You understand the challenges of your district much better. So when your district wins, the country wins. When your district beats Corona, the country defeats Corona," a PMO statement said quoting Modi.

SHAILAJA NOT PART OF PINARAYI VIJAYAN'S NEW CABINET

Thiruvananthapuram, May 18: CPI (M) veteran Pinarayi Vijayan was on Tuesday elected its Parliamentary Party Leader for a second term as Kerala Chief Minister but the omission of health minister KK Shailaja, who played a leading role in the state's fight against Covid-19, from the new cabinet created a flutter.

Vijayan's coalition government will have a fresh look with 11 new CPI (M) members, including his son-in-law P A Mohammed Riyas, national president of DYFI, in a reflection of the party's attempt to infuse fresh blood in the ministry. CPI(M) will have 12 members including Vijayan. CPI and Kerala Congress (M), who are among the other constituents of the Left Democratic Front (LDF), also named new faces— four and one, respectively, to represent their parties in the cabinet. The 77-year-old Vijayan's election comes days after he led the ruling LDF to a stupendous victory in the April 6 Assembly polls, where the alliance won 99 of the 140 seats. However, Shailaja's non-inclusion led to a debate and many eyebrows were raised over the matter.

Shailaja's surprise omission drew instant comparisons with the late KR Gowri Amma, the firebrand Marxist once tipped to head Kerala but never did. —PTI

270 docs have died of Covid in second wave of pandemic: IMA

New Delhi, May 18: The Indian Medical Association (IMA) on Tuesday said 270 doctors across the country have succumbed to the coronavirus infection in the second wave of the pandemic so far.

The list of the deceased doctors includes former IMA president Dr K.K. Aggarwal, who succumbed to the deadly virus on Monday.

Bihar saw the maximum number of 78 deaths of medical practitioners, followed by Uttar Pradesh (37), Delhi (29) and Andhra Pradesh (22).

According to the IMA Covid-19 registry, 748 doctors succumbed to the disease in the first wave of the pandemic.

"Last year, 748 doctors across India succumbed to Covid-19, while in the current wave, in a short period, we have lost 270 doctors."

"The second wave of the pandemic is turning out to be extremely fatal for all and especially for the healthcare workers who are at the forefront," IMA president Dr JA Jayalal said. Padma Shri awardee and eminent cardiologist Dr K.K. Aggarwal has died of Covid-19, a statement posted on his Twitter handle said.

Association (IMA), was admitted to the All India Institute of Medical Sciences (AIIMS) here and was on ventilator support since last week.

Delhi Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal described his death as a "setback for the whole nation".

"Passing away of Dr. KK Aggarwal is a setback for the whole nation. He acted all his life for the health rights of common people especially poor, deprived or marginalized. A great human being. RIP! (sic)," he wrote on Twitter.

According to the statement posted on Twitter, Aggarwal passed away at 11.30 pm on Monday after a "lengthy battle with Covid-19".

"Even during the pandemic, he made constant efforts to educate the masses and was able to reach out to 100 million people through numerous videos and educational programmes and saved countless lives. He wanted his life to be celebrated and not mourned," the statement said.

Aggarwal posted videos raising awareness about the deadly virus on his Twitter handle. Even while he was hospitalised, his team at the Heart Care Foundation of India kept uploading videos about Covid-19.

In January, Aggarwal's banter with his wife during a live session on a social media platform had left netizens in splits. In the video, Aggarwal's wife was heard scolding him for going to take the anti-Covid vaccine shot alone and not taking her along.

The former IMA president is survived by wife Dr Veena Agarwal, son Nilesh and daughter Naina. He had received the Padma Shri, the country's fourth-highest civilian honour, in 2010. He was also honoured with the Dr B.C. Roy Award.

Aggarwal's name was mentioned in the Limca Book of Records for training the maximum number of people in the lifesaving technique of hands-only CPR at one go.

Odisha extends lockdown in state by 2 more weeks

AKSHAYA KUMAR SAHOO | DC
BHUBANESWAR, MAY 18

The Odisha government on Tuesday extended the lockdown restrictions in the state till June 1 to arrest the steady surge in cases of Covid-19.

The first two-week long lockdown that came into force in the state on May 5 is set to end on Wednesday.

According to chief secretary Suresh Kumar Mohapatra, after thorough consultation with health experts, the government decided to extend the lockdown for two more weeks.

Sources said the State had exhibited a Test Positivity Rate (TPR) of 20 per cent but after nearly two weeks of lockdown, the TPR has now dipped to 18.2 per cent.

This apart, in another major development, the government revised the period of relaxation for availing of essential commodities from 6 am to 12 pm daily to 7 am to 11 am.

"The weekend shutdown will however continue as usual. Tighter restrictions will be clamped during the weekends and violators will be strictly dealt with," chief secretary Mr Mohapatra informed through a virtual press briefing.

Over 1,000 children, parents reach out to govt helpline to tackle Covid woes

Kids, parents open up about Covid stress

New Delhi, May 18: From facing loneliness in Covid-19 isolation ward to exhibiting aggressive behaviour after parents contracted the virus, over 1,000 children and parents have reached out to government helpline seeking help.

With an objective of providing psychological first-aid and emotional support to children affected during the pandemic, the National Commission for Protection of Child Rights (NCPCR) is providing tele-counselling to children through Samvedna (Sensitising Action on Mental Health Vulnerability through Emotional Development and Necessary Acceptance) - a toll-free helpline launched to provide psycho-social mental support for affected children.

According to Women and Child Development Ministry officials, redressal of 1,009 complaints have been done between September, 2020 to May 7, 2021.

In a case from a Covid-19 isolation centre in Aurangabad, a 15-year-old child expressed frustration over not getting enough love from parents due to more number of siblings and called up to talk about her parents' pressure of getting her married early.

The counsellor spoke to the child and her parents and suggested to encourage her to focus on academics.

In another case, parent of a six-year-old child in Kanpur called to discuss the aggressive behaviour of their child who was lodged in an isolation centre after contracting the virus.

The counsellor suggested that the child engage in different activities like narrating stories or playing with toys. It was found that as the parents were keeping to themselves after the family tested positive, the child was feeling lonely and exhibiting aggressive behaviour.

A 17-year-old boy from Madhya Pradesh's Singrauli isolation centre called up and talked about being scared of loneliness. The counsellor advised him to spend time engaging in activities he is interested in and making a regular routine to get away from boredom.

This tele-counselling service is available on a toll-free number 1800-121-2830 from Monday to Saturday from 10 am to 1 pm and 3 pm to 8 pm and is exclusively for children who are willing to talk and are in need of counselling.

When a child/caretaker/parent dials Samvedna, they get to speak to a professional counsellor in a safe environment. Tele-counselling is provided to children under three categories: children who are in quarantine/isolation/Covid care centres, children who have Covid positive parents or family members, and children who have lost their parents due to the pandemic.

This service caters to children from all over India in various regional languages like Tamil, Telugu, Kannada, Oriya, Marathi, Gujarati, Bengali, the Women and Child Development Ministry said.

This service was launched in September 2020 and aims to support children in the difficult times of pandemic. —PTI

23 RESCUED FROM SUSPECTED SMUGGLING BOAT

San Diego, May 18: Twenty-three people were rescued Monday from a suspected smuggling boat off the San Diego coast not far from where another vessel broke up a few weeks ago, killing three people, authorities said.

The small boat, known as a panga, was spotted shortly before 3 am by a US Border Patrol video system as it drifted near rocks off the coast of Point Loma. The Coast Guard responded but the craft refused commands to stop, authorities said. The boat got stuck in the surf line. San Diego lifeguards and harbour police were called and the Coast Guard pulled the vessel out of the surf and unloaded the people, authorities said.

MALAYSIAN COPS KILL PHILIPPINE MILITANTS

Kuala Lumpur, May 18: Five suspected members of Philippine militant group Abu Sayyaf have been shot dead in a fire-fight with police on the Malaysian part of Borneo island, authorities said Tuesday.

Police were attacked by men armed with guns and machetes Monday when they raided a settlement near the town of Beaufort in Sabah state, and returned fire.

"Five male suspects were successfully defeated," said Sabah police commissioner Hazani Ghazali in a statement.

They were believed to be from the Abu Sayyaf group, police said, self-proclaimed Islamic militants whose stronghold is in the Muslim-majority southern Philippines, not far from Sabah.

One of them has been identified as Mabab Binda, a militant leader on the Philippine police's wanted list, Malaysian newspaper The Star reported.

Abu Sayyaf, which has distant links to the Islamic State group, has been responsible for some of the Philippines' worst terror attacks in recent years.

MORE THAN 50 DROWN OFF TUNISIA

Tunis, May 18: Tunisian authorities say more than 50 migrants have drowned off the coast of the North African country, while 33 others were rescued by workers from an oil platform.

Defence Ministry spokesman Mohamed Zekri said Tuesday that a boat carrying the migrants sank Monday off Sfax, on Tunisia's southeast coast. He said navy units were sent to search the water for missing passengers.

Flavio Di Giacomo, a spokesperson for the Mediterranean coordination office of the International Organisation for Migration, said on Twitter that the 33 survivors were all from Bangladesh.

The boat departed from Zwara, Libya, on Sunday, he said. The nationalities of the people who died were not immediately clear.

An International Organisation for Migration spokesman in Tunisia, Riadh Kadhi, said the survivors reported that the boat carried about 90 passengers when it left Libya.

PIO PLEADS GUILTY TO WIRE FRAUD IN U.S.

Washington, May 18: An Indian-American in Maryland has pleaded guilty to wire fraud and identity theft in connection with a fraudulent investment scheme worth approximately $1.26 million, according to the Department of Justice.

Manish Singh, 48, faces a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison when sentenced on July 30.

"In the midst of a jury trial, the defendant admitted that he deceived victims into believing they were investing more than $1.2 million in a high-end fabric design business, when in reality, he fraudulently used their money to fund personal expenses," said Raj Parekh.

Acting US Attorney for the Eastern District of Virginia. According to court records and evidence presented at trial, Singh entered into an agreement in 2016 with a married couple to create a business that would design and sell high-end fabrics.

The couple was to provide the capital for the business, and Singh was to contribute his expertise and contacts in the fabric industry.

Singh represented to the victim investors that their money was being used for numerous expenses related to the business, such as the manufacture of fabric in India.

EU hits 200-million vaccine jab milestone

Hike vax access, urges Red Cross

Geneva, May 18: The Red Cross on Tuesday stressed the need for "extraordinary steps" to increase access to Covid-19 vaccines around the world, including speeding up negotiations towards patent waivers.

The International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement called for states and pharmaceutical companies to move much faster towards evening out glaring inequities in access to the jabs around the world.

Among other things, countries should accelerate thorny negotiations at the World Trade Organisation (WTO) towards removing intellectual property protections for the Covid vaccines, and other barriers blocking a rapid scale-up of production of the jabs around the world, it said.

"In the middle of the worst pandemic in 100 years, the intellectual property waiver for Covid-19 vaccines is a necessary political commitment to address inequities in access at the scale and speed we need," Francesco Rocca, president of the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies (IFRC), said.

"Millions of lives depend on it and on the equally important transfer of technology and knowledge to increase manufacturing capacity worldwide," he added.

The WTO has since October faced calls led by India and South Africa for the temporary removal of intellectual property protections on Covid-19 vaccines, in what proponents say will boost production in developing countries and address the dramatic inequity in access. But that notion has long met with fierce opposition from pharmaceutical giants and their host countries.

Shuttered Oz becoming hermit nation, say experts

Sydney, May 18: Prime Minister Scott Morrison defended his "Fortress Australia" Covid-19 restrictions Tuesday, as experts warned that plans to keep the borders closed for another year will create a "hermit nation".

"Everyone is keen to get back to a time that we once knew," the conservative leader said in the face of growing calls for international borders to reopen.

"The reality is we're living this year in a pandemic that's worse than last year." Last March, Australia took the unprecedented step of closing its borders to foreign visitors and banning its globetrotting citizens from leaving. That prompted the first population decline since World War I, stranded tens of thousands of Australian citizens overseas and separated hundreds of thousands of residents from family members.

But the country now has almost no community transmission and life for most is relatively normal.

And the government's recent suggestion that borders could remain closed for another year has sparked fierce debate.

Australian Medical Association president Omar Khorshid on Tuesday warned:

"Australia cannot keep its international borders closed indefinitely." He called for improved quarantine facilities and vaccination efforts to permit borders to slowly open. "At some point, it will not be possible to justify the maintenance of border closures given their impact on lives and livelihoods," he said.

A University of Sydney task force examining how Australia can safely reopen this week went further, warning the country "cannot continue to lock itself off from the world as a hermit nation indefinitely".

ALL GERMANS IN TWO HIGH-RISES QUARANTINED

Berlin, May 18: Health officials say they have quarantined the residents of two high-rise buildings in the western German town of Velbert after several people tested positive with the Coronavirus variant first detected to India.

Officials from the county of Mettmann said "there are currently several infections with the Indian virus variant in Velbert." They said several families who were in close touch with each other were affected and that everyone was being tested.

Local broadcaster WDR reported about 200 people in the two buildings were affected. They have been quarantined, are getting tested and the Red Cross is providing food and other help. So far, the Covid-19 variant that was first detected in India has not been found a lot in Germany, but is said to be more contagious than other variants currently more prevalent.

Myanmar arms ban meet put off

United Nations, May 18: A UN General Assembly meeting set for Tuesday to discuss a non-binding resolution on halting arms transfers to Myanmar was postponed indefinitely because there was not enough support to pass the text, diplomatic sources said Monday.

The authors "did not have the support they expected" in order to pass the motion with a large majority of the Assembly's 193 member countries, one diplomat said on condition of anonymity.

And they "wanted more time for negotiations," especially with the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, another source said. The text was drafted at the request of Liechtenstein, with the support of 48 countries, including Britain, the European Union and the United States — but with South Korea as the only Asian country signed on.

South Korea's support came after several weeks of negotiations in an effort to gain the backing of at least one Asean country.

The resolution, which would have been non-binding but politically powerful, called for the "immediate suspension of the direct and indirect supply, sale, or transfer of all weapons, munitions, and other military-related equipment to Myanmar." It asked for military authorities in Myanmar — which took control of government operations in a coup February 1 — to "end the state of emergency" and to "immediately stop all violence against peaceful demonstrators."

Belarus raids independent news site

Minsk, May 18: Authorities in Belarus raided the offices of the country's largest independent news outlet and took down its website on Tuesday, management said, signalling a widening crackdown after historic opposition protests last year.

Journalists in the ex-Soviet nation are facing mounting pressure in the wake of the protests against contested elections won by strongman President Alexander Lukashenko. The long-serving authoritarian leader has drawn scorn from the West, and the United States and EU have slapped sanctions on him and his allies.

The Tut.by news portal on Tuesday became the latest media targeted by authorities in Belarus, with security agents searching the offices and homes of journalists working for the site, its editor-in-chief said.

The outlet was then taken offline entirely.

"Tut.by co-founder Kirill Voloshin reports that the website's domain has been blocked," the news organisation reported on its Telegram channel.

AFP journalists said the site was unavailable in Belarus, Russia and France. Editor-in-chief Marina Zolotova earlier said

Japan drops immigration bill reform

Tokyo, May 18: Japan's ruling lawmakers on Tuesday dropped a controversial push to change rules on handling asylum seekers and deportations over opposition pressure after the death of a Sri Lankan woman.

The proposed legislation included changes making it easier to deport unsuccessful asylum seekers, something that was heavily criticised by rights groups. Opposition mounted after the death in March of a Sri Lankan woman — identified by supporters as 33-year-old Wishma Sandamali — in immigration detention.

She was detained for overstaying her visa after seeking police protection, reportedly to escape an abusive relationship.

Sandamali reportedly complained repeatedly of stomach pain and other symptoms, starting in January, and campaigners allege she was given inadequate medical care. The cause of her death has not been officially disclosed.

Human rights campaigners have long criticised conditions at Japanese detention centres, including how guards respond to medical emergencies.

Opposition parties had pressed the government to release video footage of the woman's condition in the facility, which the government declined, citing security reasons.

In response, the opposition refused to debate the immigration bill.

GERMANY: FIFTH ARREST OVER JEWELLERY THEFT

Berlin, May 18: German investigators have arrested a fifth suspect in connection with the spectacular theft of 18th-century jewels from a Dresden museum in 2019. Prosecutors in Dresden said Tuesday the 22-year-old, the twin brother of one of the men already in custody, was arrested at an apartment in Berlin on Monday evening, the DPA news agency reported. Four suspects were arrested in the German capital in November and December over the Nov. 25, 2019, theft of a large diamond brooch, a diamond epaulette and other treasures from Dresden's Green Vault Museum, but the man now arrested had twice managed to avoid capture.

The suspects are accused of organised robbery and arson. Searches at more than a dozen locations so far have not yielded the missing treasures. The Green Vault is one of the world's oldest museums. It was established in 1723 and contains the treasury of Augustus the Strong of Saxony.

Songs and oral sources are used to fill gaps where no records exist

Dutch slavery exhibition confronts brutal past

Amsterdam, May 18: A set of leg irons that once chained slaves by the ankles for punishment. A pair of Rembrandt portraits of a rich Dutch couple dressed in slavery-funded finery.

Dozens of objects like these go on show on Tuesday at the Dutch national Rijksmuseum as it opens a landmark exhibition on slavery highlighting the Netherlands' dark colonial past.

Focusing on the stories of 10 people ranging from enslaved people to slave owners, the show covers 250 years of Dutch involvement in slavery in Suriname, Brazil, the Caribbean, Asia and South Africa.

Curators at the museum in Amsterdam say they want to start a "better conversation" in a country still reckoning with its role in colonialism, and with questions raised by the Black Lives Matter movement last year.

"This is national history, not just for a small group but for every one of us," Valika Smeulders, head of the Rijksmuseum history department, said during a preview.

"The colonial past is an important element in our national history. So it was timely, as it was not done before, to present an exhibition on slavery." In a sign of the changing times, Dutch King Willem-Alexander will formally open the exhibition Tuesday. It will open to the public as soon as Coronavirus measures are lifted for museums, but be viewable immediately online and for school parties.

Called simply "Slavery", the exhibit traces the 10 individual stories using both objects from the Rijksmuseum's collection — some never seen before — and from other museums.

But it also uses songs and oral sources, which visitors listen to on an audio tour, to fill the gaps where no records exist.

"They tell about people who had to leave their children behind, or they feel they're treated as tools and not human beings," said Eveline Sint Nicolaas, senior curator in the history department. One story is that of Wally, a slave on the Palmeneribo plantation in Suriname, who took part in a slave revolt in 1707 and escaped but was then recaptured and burned to death.

Paintings of slaves on the plantation sit alongside a manuscript detailing Wally's interrogation by slave owners.

Like the other stories in the exhibition, his tale is told in the audiotour by someone with a connection — in his case Dutch former world champion kickboxer Remy Bonjasky, whose ancestors are believed to have fled the same plantation.

Elsewhere sit the austere portraits of affluent Amsterdammer Oopjen Coppit and her husband Marten Soolmans, which they commissioned legendary artist Rembrandt to paint in 1634.

Soolmans' family made a fortune from a sugar refinery supplied by slave plantations in Brazil. After he died, Oopjen remarried to a man who had once kept slaves in Brazil.

"We know Oopjen had several links with slavery and that's also very interesting," said Sint Nicolaas. "It really affected Dutch society in many ways, it wasn't history that just happened far away in the colonies." The exhibition features jarring contrasts of art and atrocity, brushstrokes and branding irons.

CBI's partisanship mars its actions over Narada

Those who are found to have broken the law must face the full force of the law. In a democracy no one is too high to be placed above this principle, which cannot but apply in the case of the West Bengal ministers and MLAs arrested in the Narada sting case that came to light in 2016 though the sting had been carried out two years earlier.

Where public servants are concerned — and the expression includes legislators — there is a moral dimension as well. They are keepers of public trust and exercise authority, including over public finances, in the name of the people. When they misuse their position for their private gain, the faith of the people in the system as a whole is shaken, and that is why they must not be permitted to get away when they do that.

However, in order that public servants are not harassed through motivated or frivolous complaints, or for vexatious ends, procedures are laid down for their investigation or arrest. The first step here is grant of sanction for their prosecution by appropriate authority.

In the case of chief minister Mamata Banerjee's ministers — Firhad Hakim and Subrata Mukherjee — and MLA and former minister Madan Mitra — ordinarily the Speaker of the Assembly should have been the proper authority to accord sanction for their prosecution. This is pretty much standard procedure.

Instead, state governor Jagdeep Dhankar, who appears to be fast acquiring a reputation for political partisanship losing over his status as high constitutional authority, was approached by the CBI and the arrests followed in five days flat.

The Assembly had just been constituted after the recent state election and the Speaker would have been place in a matter of days. Yet, the CBI chose to approach the governor for sanction although it could just easily have waited a few days more in such an old case. This cannot but re-confirm its status as the Centre's "caged parrot". Sadly, the governor did not send the file back either. This is so much the pity and does no good to India's claim to be a constitutional democracy.

Is it not a little curious that the CBI did not seek permission for the prosecution of Mukul Roy, who defected to BJP some years ago, and Suvendu Adhikari, who defected to the saffron party weeks before the recent election and is now the leader of the Opposition in the Assembly? This episode re-asserts the widely held impression that the BJP has become a dry-cleaner and acquiring its membership permits allegedly tainted politicians to come out smelling of roses.

This is a time when a responsible Centre should be working in partnership with states to fight the dreaded Covid-19 pandemic. But the Modi government's priority evidently lies elsewhere.

It is signalling that after BJP's emphatic defeat at the hands of the Trinamul Congress in the recent state polls, the Centre would take the fight against the legitimate victors to the extremes through the blatant manipulation of procedures even at the cost of hurting the spirit of democracy. Centre-state relations become collateral damage in such a scenario. Development and people's welfare will be on the backburner as political fights escalate, probably in the end leading to street battles. Truly, all this means the willful negation of the mandate of the people.

Taxes & FDI: Change attitude

It is one of life's simplest aphorisms that you can't have the cake and eat it too. If the Government of India's approach to getting foreign investment is akin to having the cake, its attitude towards trade disputes in which foreign investors emerge victorious as in international arbitration is the equivalent of wanting to eat the cake. The Scottish oil exploration company Cairn Energy has exposed this contradiction in official India's approach even as it has escalated the process by moving to attach Air India's properties abroad on the legal premise that the national carrier is India's alter ego.

A law on retrospective taxation that the previous UPA government passed in 2012 had proved extremely damaging to the country's reputation as an investment destination. Vodafone hit the arbitration trail to expose India's income tax claims as arbitrary. The basic approach hasn't changed despite NDA being in the saddle when losing such claims in arbitration awards. Far from being graceful in defeat and settling, official India has pursued matters legally through appeal and this after having acted in a questionable and predatory manner in the Cairn issue by selling the company's assets and shares to monetise its claims.

Official India can lay a claim to a sovereign right to its tax laws but this does little for the image of a country desperately seeking foreign investments in industry as they come with considerable job generating qualities while also fulfilling the "make in India" criterion dear to the central government as a policy initiative best serving national interests. At one time, there were as many as 17 claims, stemming from disputes over undelivered incentives, retrospective taxation and payment disputes, with regard to investments under bilateral treaties through which capital flowed into India.

The impression India leaves in potential foreign investors is it is a difficult country to deal with because its track record is not that good in keeping its word and delivering on promises after attracting investments. Only a change in attitude can help correct that and settling Cairn's $1.2 billion award would be one way to demonstrate that India is keen on facilitating ease of doing business.

India can vaccinate swiftly by using 'mohalla method'

Probal DasGupta

The irony is stark. Millions scramble for oxygen cylinders and hospital beds, oscillating between life and death. Around the same time, several other millions decided the political fortunes of five states/UTs.

Earlier this year, Indians defied a mortal fear of the coronavirus and voted in large numbers, with a turnout of 70 per cent or higher across states. On jabs, though, it was different. A listless rollout plan curtailed the availability of vaccines and people's tentativeness only hastened the inevitable. In two weeks, a second wave swept India, spiralling into its biggest crisis. An overpowered medical infrastructure burst at its seams.

But that's not the point. While every life-saving equipment is a survival kit, it's the pace of vaccinations that will ultimately ensure India's endurance against the virus. The point is: the secret to winning this war lies in our learning from past experience, including elections.

January 13, 2011 was a historic day for India. A two-year old child in West Bengal was found crippled by polio but was later cured. It was the last time polio would strike here. That day, India became polio-free. Two years earlier, India housed half the world's polio cases. No one thought the country could ever eradicate it. However, aided by the state, Unicef and others, India's feverish campaign against polio, led by 2.5 million vaccinators, touched 200 million homes, with 700,000 vaccinations in each round. Despite its challenges of poor infrastructure, India relied on its strengths: a "mohalla", or community, outreach.

Today, only 12 per cent Indians have got their first dose, against 50 per cent in America. Currently, the vaccination rate is less than half million a day, sometimes falling further, given the shortage of vaccines. At this rate, it may take until summer 2022 to vaccinate 75 per cent of India. Are we prepared for more casualties until then?

A more dynamic and swifter pace of vaccinations is the antidote to arrest fatality numbers, build confidence and encourage a quicker economic revival. The polio experience is a test case. Juxtaposing the polling principle onto the vaccine execution plan gives it the kick it requires. The polling database, with details of citizens and their residences, is a ready master-sheet. In December 2020, Union home secretary Ajay Bhalla asked (then) chief election commissioner Sunil Arora to identify people above 50 at the polling station level. A promising start was made, but the plan ignored key aspects of our election experience. We should replicate our polling expertise, that was used in the polio campaign: the "mohalla method".

Currently, the approach of using hospitals for vaccinations has proved counterproductive. A sudden desperation and opening up of vaccinations for the 18-44 age group has led to longer queues. This inevitably means a high probability of an infection while on a hospital visit. Using the CoWin platform to register and then showing up with identifiers like PAN or Aadhaar cards at selected job centres like schools, community halls or sports venues often used as polling booths will decentralise the process. Mumbai and Gurgaon recently started "drive-in" jabs. More such measures must be undertaken across the country. The aim should be to reach people, rather than herding them at overcrowded hospitals.

The "mohalla method" will increase vaccinated numbers in clusters. The knock-on effect is that as neighbourhoods vaccinate, infections will slow down in clusters, creating identifiable safe zones. Earmarked vaccinated zones enable city administrations to loosen lockdowns methodically in areas where jabs have crossed high numbers and infections have fallen.

Using age as the sole criteria for prioritisation, instead of a combination of age, economic status and population density, was always expected to pose challenges. The prioritisation of senior citizens meant most people unlikely to go to work were vaccinated first. Next in line were the 45-plus population, many of whom can afford private vehicles. The most vulnerable population was the 18-45 age group — where more people use public transport. Given India has over 70 per cent people under 45, and most frontline workers including delivery personnel fall in this category, the approach meant most of India was unvaccinated against the second wave.

States with worse Covid numbers could form the bigger focus in this vaccination plan. At a city level, densely populated areas require more vaccine booths — based on voter lists from elections. Citizens who aren't on voters' lists in their neighbourhoods can use Aadhaar cards. This also helps those facing a tech challenge in online registrations.

The "mohalla method" demands deployment of substantial numbers of health workers, logistics, and vaccines. Cynics may say this isn't possible. But it actually works. India has over 12 lakh medical professionals, 7.8 lakh alternative medicine professionals, around two lakh medical students, diagnostic centre professionals, armed forces doctors, nursing assistants to provide jabs, the local police and paramilitary to handle the logistics and the armed forces to provide administrative support. Every neighbourhood can plan 5-6 centres of 25-30 volunteers each. Neighbourhood clusters could be simultaneously vaccinated in around 45-60 days (given availability of healthcare resources, vaccine supplies and errors in calculation). We can reach a national jab rate of 10 million (one crore) a day, which means vaccinating the country in 4-5 months. In a worst-case scenario, if a third wave were to arrive in late 2021, most of India would have been vaccinated.

But do we have vaccines? Choosing just two vaccines and then exporting them when just eight per cent of India was vaccinated was bound to lead to shortages. India needs over two billion jabs. Scaling up is a no-brainer. J&J's Phase 3 trials are set to begin. Russia's Sputnik V is here and will be distributed by Dr Reddy's Labs. Bharat Biotech has ramped up its capacity from 200 million to 700 million doses a year. India has asked for a waiver on intellectual property and barriers on vaccines from Europe and America.

It's taken a catastrophe for us to realise we must speed up vaccinations. To execute the blueprint, the bottom line is to shed lethargic bureaucracy and ensure an efficient supply chain and execution. A crisis taskforce needs to have a crack team of senior experts from amongst medical professionals, the armed forces and civil services. Like the polio campaign earlier, a targeted media campaign involving cricket and movie stars must be the focus. The campaign must be on a war footing and the national leadership has to make this period count. The war isn't over till we have enough ammunition to fight for our citizens. And we must vaccinate to win.

KI RA NO MORE

I had the very fortunate experience of meeting Ki Ra, a legend in Tamil Literature, in the 1970s and I cherish the same till date. Ki Ra had contributed a novel by name Kidai which deals with sheep shearing and it was part of a book named Arusuvai published by Late Mrs Lakshmi of Vasakar Vattam. I went to meet Ki Ra along with Saketh, son of Thi Janakiraman, the famed Tamil writer. We started talking in English and Ki Ra honestly admitted that he did not know English at all but he was one of the finest of modern writers in Tamil.

STALIN MUST UNDERSTAND

The CM of TN would have well understood that running a state administration as its head is not as easy as blaming the incumbent CM for every cough and sneeze in every act of the government while sitting in the opposition. In the last five years the state had witnessed many demonstrations of enmity, animosity and hatred towards Modi and the slogan "Go back Modi" was the refrain on the lips of every DMK cadre. Stalin would have realised that the state cannot survive on its own without the Centre's help and cooperation. With a sober well behaved and soft spoken person EPS as the leader of opposition one can hope to witness smooth conduct of Assembly proceedings with constructive debates and conciliation and consultation bidding adieu to the old habits of walkouts, acrimony and accusations, with anger prevailing over common sense and etiquette. A sensible chapter in the conduct of the newly elected MLAs is expected. They should be honest enough to concede and acknowledge the tremendous help rendered by the Centre during the testing period of the second tsunami of Covid.

The political fallout of the Covid crisis across India

Various factors contributed to the BJP's poor performance in the West Bengal Assembly elections and one can't relate its poor showing only to the severe Covid-19 crisis and its mismanagement across the country. But the political fallout of the Covid crisis and its mismanagement for the BJP can't be ruled out. The results of the Uttar Pradesh panchayat elections have already given a glimpse of the challenge the BJP may face in the near future. It faced a tough challenge from the Samajwadi Party in the panchayat polls. The severe health crisis that India is facing at the moment may not have yet made the extremely popular Prime Minister Narendra Modi unpopular, but disappointment among a large number of Indians has started building. People may not directly blame the PM for the present health crisis, though some do, but what seems to have disappointed many Indians is his continued campaign for his party in West Bengal, which saw eight phases of voting.

With Covid cases rising alarmingly in several states, and cities gasping for oxygen, there were even demands to merge the last few phases of the West Bengal polls to reduce the campaign, but the Centre was silent and BJP leaders continued to address big rallies in that state. Prime Minister Narendra Modi cancelled his rallies, which seems to have done damage control over people's disenchantment with Mr Modi, but the Election Commission, that announced a ban on big rallies hours after Mr Modi's announcement that he was cancelling his rallies, created the perception among ordinary people that his move was guided by the EC's decision, of which he may have got a hint in advance.

What seems to have disappointed many people is Mr Modi's somewhat delayed effort in trying to address the Covid crisis, weeks after India plunged from one crisis to another — from non-availability of beds to the shortage of oxygen, not to mention the non-availability of ventilators for patients in desperate need of it for treatment. When the country faced these multiple health crises, what people saw was Prime Minister Modi addressing several election rallies in West Bengal. People saw this as a huge contrast to last year's Covid crisis and Mr Modi's handling of it. Last year, when Covid-19 had just erupted in India, Prime Minister Modi was in full command, as he took charge and announced a nationwide lockdown. There was criticism of the way the lockdown was announced and implemented without giving advance notice, but overall Mr Modi was applauded for his bold decision which seemed to have prevented the spread of Covid-19 across India.

Now, when people were looking towards Mr Modi for his leadership in handling this crisis, he failed to establish a connect with people. Citizens remember that during last year's crisis, that was far less severe than this one, he led from the front, addressed the nation several times, and kept a connect with ordinary people. It is true that the Centre is trying its best to solve even this present crisis and started the import of Covid vaccines and oxygen, along with several other such steps, but these should have been done much earlier. Though the Centre took these initiatives, at the same time it always tried to shift the responsibility to state governments, on the ground that health is a state subject. Putting the blame on state governments for the current health disaster was not appreciated by most people. It is important to note that there has been no change in the constitutional provisions — health was a state subject last year, as it is this year — so why did the Centre take all the praise last year and now, as things are going out of hand, is trying to pass the blame to the states?

What might complicate the issue further and contribute to the growing disenchantment of people with the Central government, Prime Minister Modi and the BJP, is the emerging controversy around the pricing of the Covid vaccines. Not that there were no controversies around vaccination earlier, there were news about a shortage of vaccines and India having exported vaccines to various countries, but the tu-tu-mai-mai between the states and New Delhi may increase further on the differential pricing of the vaccines. It is understood that as of now the same vaccine will be procured by the states at a higher price, but it would be available to the Centre at a lower price. This differential price is understandable if it is between private and government hospitals, but it is hard for an ordinary citizen to understand why he has to pay a higher price if he is given a vaccine purchased by a state government and a lesser price if the same vaccine is purchased by the Central government. What seems to have made people feel unhappy with the Centre is its lack of initiative in negotiating with the Serum Institute of India for a better price, and instead advising the states to negotiate the price themselves. The question is — why can't the Centre take the initiative on this? This is not a "normal" health crisis across the country, in the midst of a raging pandemic, the question of whether health is a state subject or not should not even arise. Some states may have erred in their preparations, but it is not the time to play the blame game. This is a time for all the states and the Centre to work together and fight a national calamity.

Ujivan SFB Q4 net jumps 86% to ₹136 crore

Ujivan Small Finance Bank (SFB) reported an 86 per cent jump in its net profit to Rs 136 crore for the fourth quarter from Rs 73 crore a year ago. Total income was down by 9 per cent at Rs 735 crore from Rs 810 crore. Net interest income also fell by 21 per cent to Rs 368 crore against Rs 467 crore. "The quarter was exceptionally good. Our disbursement was at an all-time high," MD & CEO Nitin Chugh said.

Occupancies improve, but revenues nearly halve Covid hotels stay in biz on thin margins

SANGEETHA G CHENNAI, MAY 18

In order to address the scarcity of beds, hospitality chains have tied up with hospitals to provide accommodation with care for Covid patients. While this has improved the occupancies, the revenues are significantly lower.

Since mid-April, several hospitality chains, including Taj Hotels, Ginger, ITC, Crowne Plaza, Radisson, Sarovar, Welcomhotel and Oyo, have opened their properties for Covid patients with mild symptoms as well those seeking isolation.

"At present, we have over 80 active quarantine and isolation facilities. Additionally, we have mapped and ensured readiness across 750 properties, which can be turned into quarantine centres across the country, in case the need arises or demand increases," said Rohit Kapoor, CEO, Oyo India and South-East Asia. "For mildly affected employees, we have isolation facilities with health-care service providers. This includes 24*7 nurse care, on-demand pathology and pharmacy support, daily doctor visits, meals, among other services," he said.

According to Pradeep Shetty, honorary secretary of the Federation of Hotel & Restaurant Associations of India, more than 100 properties should be offering accommodation to Covid patients across key cities. "The occupancies should have been otherwise nil in these hotels due to the lockdown and Covid fears. Now the properties would be having around 30 per cent occupancies," he said.

However, the revenues are significantly low for the rooms. Some of the state governments have capped the room rates for these facilities. As per the directive of the Delhi government, five star properties should not charge more than Rs 5,000 per patient per day and Rs 4,000 for four and three star properties.

"The average revenues per room would be around 50 per cent of the usual tariffs. Further, there could be some revenue sharing with the hospital partner," said Shetty.

According to Jaison Chacko, secretary general, FHRAI, there is also reluctance from the part of the staff. "We have been requesting the government to categorise hotel staff as frontline workers and provide them vaccination. Most of the hotel employees are not vaccinated and this puts their lives at risk," he said.

Sensex rises above 50000 pts, Nifty regains 15K zone

RAVI RANJAN PRASAD MUMBAI, MAY 18

The market trended higher for the second consecutive session on further drop in fresh daily Covid cases and gained over 1.2 per cent, anticipating limited impact of lockdowns currently in place in various parts of the country.

The Sensex gained 612.60 points, or 1.24 per cent, and settled well above the 50000 mark at 50193. The Nifty-50 too crossed the 15000-mark to close at two-month high of 15108, gaining 184 points.

"Barring the rising daily deaths and slower vaccination drive, we observe more positivity around the Covid-19 situation. Daily cases have fallen below 0.3 million mark this week with visible peaking, driven by Maharashtra, UP, Delhi, Karnataka, Chhattisgarh, Rajasthan, Haryana, Gujarat, MP, Telangana, Jharkhand and Bihar. India's recoveries exceeded daily cases for the first time since mid-March and India's share in global recoveries rose to 53 per cent versus 50 per cent in daily cases," JM Financial said about Covid situation.

"Even as 25 states/Union territories (UT) comprising 90 per cent of GDP have lockdown-like curbs overlapping between May 12 and May 24, cases in 20 states/UTs comprising 70-72 per cent of GDP have peaked. Thus these restrictions could be eased soon," analysts from JM Financial said.

"NSE's India VIX index, an indicator of market volatility fell further by 1.89 per cent from 19.60 to 19.24 levels, a new low for 2021. Declining volatility is supporting the bullish market sentiment," said analysts.

LNG IMPORTERS DEFER DELIVERIES ON WEAK DEMAND

STEPHEN STAPCZYNSKI MAY 18

India's liquefied natural gas importers are asking suppliers to defer deliveries as measures to curb the spread of the deadly Covid-19 virus have cut demand for the fuel.

At least three companies, including Indian Oil Corp, have asked to delay shipments slated for May and June delivery, according to traders. Inventories at import terminals in western India, such as Dahej, are near full capacity, the traders said.

The deferrals illustrate the extent of the natural gas glut, which has worsened over the past several weeks. While Indian firms have been accepting most contracted LNG deliveries, they have disappeared from the spot market since the virus worsened last month and shipments became too pricey.

To make matters worse, a cyclone in the vicinity of mport terminals has also forced diversions.

Tata Motors Q4 loss narrows to ₹7,600 cr

MICHAEL GONSALVES PUNE, MAY 18

Tata Motors, India's biggest automaker, which owns British iconic luxury car maker Jaguar Land Rover (JLR), narrowed its losses in the March 2021 quarter.

The Mumbai-based passenger and commercial vehicle maker's consolidated net loss for the quarter came down to Rs 7,605.4 crore, mainly on account of asset write downs in its subsidiary JLR, compared with a net loss of Rs 9,864 crore in the year-ago quarter. The company has incurred cash write downs on assets worth Rs 9,606.1 crore during the quarter. This is apart from the restructuring costs of Rs 5,388.2 crore. This is apart from the restructuring costs of Rs 5,388.2 crore. In total, the exceptional loss in Q4 related to JLR stood at nearly Rs 14,000 crore.

It posted a loss of Rs 9,894.2 crore in the corresponding period last year and profit at Rs 2,906.45 crore in the December 2020 quarter.

The carmaker's revenue from operations came in at Rs 88,628 crore for the fourth quarter, up 42 per cent from the revenue of Rs 62,492 crore clocked in the same quarter last year.

On a standalone basis, Tata Motors reported a net profit of Rs 1,646 crore as against a loss of Rs 4,871 crore in the year-ago period.

For the full financial year 2020-21, the company reported a consolidated net loss of Rs 13,395 crore, against a net loss of Rs 11,975 crore in the previous year.

JLR sold 12 per cent more luxury vehicles in the March quarter as purchases more than doubled in China.

However, Tata Motors has flagged global supply-related challenges, where coronavirus cases are still high in many markets.

"Supply chain issues, in particular for semi-conductors, have become more difficult to mitigate and are now impacting production plans for Q1. The company is working closely with affected suppliers to resolve the issues and minimise the effect on customers," Tata Motors said in an exchange filing on Tuesday.

"While demand remains strong, the supply situation over the next few months is likely to be adversely impacted. We expect Q1 FY22 to be relatively weak," it said.

Saudi wealth fund loads up on video-game makers

PAUL ABELSKY MAY 18

Saudi Arabia's sovereign wealth fund doubled down on its pandemic-era investments in video-game makers and added new bets as it raised holdings of US stocks by about a fifth to $15.4 billion while exiting oil shares.

The Public Investment Fund brought its total commitment to video-game makers, including Activision Blizzard Inc, Electronic Arts Inc and Take-Two Interactive Software Inc to $6 billion during the first quarter, according to regulatory filings. Those holdings were valued at $3.3 billion at the end of the fourth quarter.

The PIF also added to its roster by buying $141 million worth of stock in South Korean e-commerce giant Coupang Inc, whose biggest backer is Japanese conglomerate SoftBank Group Corp.

Another new investment last quarter included Compute Health Acquisition Corp, a blank-check company set up by Intel Corp chairman Omar Ishrak, with the PIF buying a 8.7 per cent stake for $75.7 million. The fund exited its stake in Suncor Energy Inc, Canada's top integrated oil producer, selling 51 million shares.

The $400-billion PIF is funded through a mixture of borrowing, cash and asset transfers from the government, and retained earnings from its investments. Chaired by Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman and managed by governor Yasir Al Rumayyan, the fund has outlined a plan to grow its assets to over 4 trillion riyals ($1.1 trillion) by 2025.

As the PIF is positioning itself to power the local economy, it's also made several high-profile investments in recent years, including a stake in Uber Technologies Inc and big commitments to Softbank's Vision Fund.

The Riyadh-based fund acquired more than $3 billion worth of stock in the three US video-game makers for the first time during the fourth quarter. By contrast, its exposure to US equities in the third quarter fell by $3 billion, mainly because the PIF sold stakes in exchange-traded funds that track the real estate and materials sectors.

Prince Mohammed is a big fan of video games, particularly "Call of Duty," Activision's best-selling franchise. He told Bloomberg Businessweek in 2016 that he was part of the first Saudi generation to grow up with the gaming technology.

In the first quarter, the fund more than doubled its Activision Blizzard stake to 33.4 million shares and almost doubled its holding in Electronic Arts, reaching 14.2 million shares at the end of March.

STOCKING | UP Once viewed as liabilities, fatter inventories are back in vogue

World economy is running low on everything

BRENDAN MURRAY, ENDA CURRAN & KIM CHIPMAN MAY 18

A year ago, as the pandemic ravaged country after country and economies shuddered, consumers were the ones panic-buying. Today, on the rebound, it's companies furiously stocking up.

Mattress producers to car manufacturers to aluminum foil makers are buying more material than they need to survive the bottleneck speed at which demand for goods is recovering and assuage that primal fear of running out. The corporate buying and hoarding is pushing supply chains to the brink of seizing up. Shortages, transportation bottlenecks and price spikes are nearing the highest levels in recent memory, raising concern that a supercharged global economy will stoke inflation.

Copper, iron ore and steel. Corn, coffee, wheat and soybeans. Lumber, semiconductors, plastic and cardboard for packaging. The world is seemingly low on all of it. "You name it, and we have a shortage on it," Tom Linebarger, chairman and chief executive of engine and generator manufacturer Cummins Inc., said on a call this month. Clients are "trying to get everything they can because they see high demand," Jennifer Rumsey, the Columbus, Indiana-based company's president, said. "They think it's going to extend into next year."

The difference between the big crunch of 2021 and past supply disruptions is the sheer magnitude of it, and the fact that there is - as far as anyone can tell - no clear end in sight. Big or small, few businesses are spared. Europe's largest fleet of trucks, Girtelka Logistics, says there's been a struggle to find enough capacity. Monster Beverage Corp. of Corona, California, is dealing with an aluminum can scarcity Hong Kong's Moxam Technology Ltd. is delaying production of a new product because of a dearth of semiconductors.

Further exacerbating the situation is an unusually long and growing list of calamities that have rocked commodities in recent months. A freak accident in the Suez Canal backed up global shipping in March. Drought has wreaked havoc upon agricultural crops. A deep freeze and mass blackout wiped out energy and petrochemicals operations across the central US in February. Less than two weeks ago, hackers brought down the largest fuel pipeline in the US, driving gasoline prices above $3 a gallon for the first time since 2014. Now India's massive Covid-19 outbreak is threatening its biggest ports.

For anyone who thinks it's all going to end in a few months, consider the somewhat obscure US economic indicator known as the Logistics Managers' Index. The gauge is built on a monthly survey of corporate supply chiefs that asks where they see inventory, transportation and warehouse expenses - the three key components of managing supply chains - now and in 12 months. The current index is at its second-highest level in records dating back to 2016, and the future gauge shows little respite a year from now. The index has proven unnervingly accurate in the past, matching up with actual costs about 90 per cent of the time.

To Zac Rogers, who helps compile the index as an assistant professor at Colorado State University's College of Business, it's a paradigm shift. In the past, those three areas were optimized for low costs and reliability. Today, with e-commerce demand soaring, warehouses have moved from the cheap outskirts of urban areas to prime parking garages downtown or vacant department-store space where deliveries can be made quickly, albeit with pricier real estate, labour and utilities. Once viewed as liabilities before the pandemic, fatter inventories are in vogue. Transport costs, more volatile than the other two, won't lighten up until demand does.

"We're going to continue to see some price increases over the next 12 months," Rogers said.

A growing chorus of observers are warning that inflation is bound to quicken. The threat has been enough to send tremors through world capitals, central banks, factories and supermarkets.

DISRUPTIONS MAY DELAY COMPLETION OF HOUSING PROJECTS

SANGEETHA G CHENNAI, MAY 18

Supply chain disruptions and worker migration due to localised lockdowns are affecting the construction of residential properties in key cities. The completion of more than 4 lakh housing units scheduled for this year might be delayed due to these disruptions.

Over 4.22 lakh units are scheduled to be completed by 2021-end across the top 7 cities, according to Anarock Property Consultants. Of this, 72 per cent of the total homes to be delivered by 2021-end are already sold out. Though there is no outright ban now during the current localised lockdowns unlike the first lockdown last year when construction activity came to a complete halt, disruptions in raw material supply chain may cause some delay in completion.

"The tally of 4.22 lakh homes scheduled for delivery across the top 7 cities by 2021-end must, however, be viewed in context with the severe second wave of Covid-19 infections. All the top cities have been affected, and it is likely that a part of these project deliveries will be pushed to 2022," said Anuj Puri, chairman, Anarock Property Consultants.

The transportation of raw materials is getting affected due to restrictions. Further, the closure of stores selling non-essential goods and restricted timings are affecting the availability. Most of the construction sites are permitted to deploy only a fraction of the workforce by ensuring social distancing norms. This too has affected the pace of work.

Moreover, the migration of workers to their native places ahead of lock-down in some cities has considerably constrained the construction activity.

"Now, amid the ongoing second wave of Covid-19 and the various curbs due to the lockdown in various states, the sector is facing a gradual slowdown which has made it extremely difficult to sustain the momentum," said Ashok Mohanani, president, Naredco Maharashtra.

Covid-free Saha fit for English tour

New Delhi: Wriddhiman Saha has recovered from Covid-19 and will be available for India's tour of England next month. Saha has reached his home in Kolkata after completing over a fortnight-long quarantine at a Delhi hotel. The wicketkeeper was picked for the England-bound squad subject to fitness. The 36-year-old was among the players who contracted the dreaded virus in the currently-suspended Indian Premier league while playing for SunRisers Hyderabad. "Wriddhiman is back home yesterday after two and half weeks of hotel quarantine in Delhi," a source close to the player said. Saha will have to return another negative RT-PCR test before joining the pre-departure bio-bubble in Mumbai, where the squad will undergo hard quarantine before boarding the flight to England. — PTI

India, who play their first Test in seven years from June 16 in England, will play another one during the tour of Australia. They will also play ODI and T20I matches Down Under. India last played a Test against Australia in 2006. "England and Australia are the two teams that still play Tests and going forward you will see a Test slotted in when they visit India or when India tour the two countries," a BCCI official said. "The idea was floated on the sidelines of the men's pink ball Test and later discussed in the Apex Council meeting (last month)." The tour of Australia is not yet announced but Australian pacer Megan Schutt said earlier this month the series is planned for mid-September. — PTI

The players had to spend 10 days in Maldives due to a ban imposed by the Australian government on travellers from Covid-ravaged India till May 15. Hockley said the BCCI has kept its promise and funded the whole operation. "Yes," Hockley told Sydney Morning Herald when asked if BCCI was paying for the mandatory quarantine. — PTI

Bancroft backtracks, other Aussies urge to end ball-tampering row

Sydney, May 18: Cameron Bancroft backtracked after dropping hints of other bowlers' involvement in the 2018 ball-tampering scandal while the men in question, including top pacer Pat Cummins, claimed innocence and pleaded for an end to "rumour-mongering and innuendo" surrounding the incident that tarred Australia's cricketing reputation.

Bancroft kicked up a storm recently when he stated that it was "pretty self explanatory" when asked whether other bowlers in the team knew of the plan to use a sandpaper on the ball during the Cape Town Test against South Africa in 2018.

On Tuesday, a Sydney Morning Herald report, quoting sources familiar with the situation, stated that Bancroft had no fresh information to give to Cricket Australia's integrity unit, which contacted him. CA had offered a reinvestigation after Bancroft's interview.

The men who were caught in the storm triggered by his statement were Cummins, Josh Hazlewood, Mitchell Starc and Nathan Lyon, who were all part of the team during the series. They issued a joint statement to deny any knowledge of the illegal plot.

"Bancroft, who is playing county cricket in the UK, had responded overnight on Monday in a conciliatory manner and indicated that he did not have significant new information to share with CA," the Sydney Morning Herald report stated.

"Bancroft is said to have told CA he is supportive of the investigation and satisfied with the outcome," it added.

Test also comprised all-rounder Mitchell Marsh.

According to the report, Bancroft also reached out to the affected bowlers in order to explain his recent comments.

"...Bancroft had claimed he was left flustered by the unexpected line of questioning and that there was no malice behind his remarks."

The joint statement issued by Cummins, Starc, Hazlewood and Lyon sought closure.

"We pride ourselves on our honesty. So it's been disappointing to see that our integrity has been questioned by some journalists and past players in recent days in regard to the Cape Town Test of 2018," the statement read.

"...we feel compelled to put the key facts on the record again: We did not know a foreign substance was taken onto the field to alter the condition of the ball until we saw the images on the big screen at Newlands."

The four bowlers said they learned valuable lessons and it is time to move on from the issue.

"None of this excuses what happened on the field that day at Newlands. It was wrong and it should never have happened."

"We've all learned valuable lessons and we'd like to think the public can see a change for the better in terms of the way we play, the way we behave and respect the game."

"We respectfully request an end to the rumour-mongering and innuendo.

It has gone on too long and it is time to move on," the statement said.

WARNER CAN REVEAL MORE, SAYS BROAD

England pacer Stuart Broad feels Australian cricket would be in for an "interesting time" if David Warner ever decides to write a book and open up about the ball-tampering scandal that led to him being barred from national captaincy for life.

Broad also agreed with Bancroft — who was banned for nine months for his role in the scandal — and then Australian bowling coach David Saker that the knowledge of the illegal play was not limited to the three men who were suspended for their part in it.

"I have seen a couple of comments from David Warner's agent, too, and I think it will be an interesting time when he stops playing for Australia and writes a book," Broad said.

"There's no doubt the Aussies would have been hoping this episode was signed sealed and delivered. It was an incredibly tough thing for those three players to go through. I can't see it still being a conversation (when the Ashes start) in November, but I can see it being sung in the Barmy Army stands if they're allowed."

Broad said in his experience, a bowler is very sensitive to the condition of the ball. — PTI

DE VILLIERS' SA RETURN RULED OUT

Johannesburg, May 18: Cricket South Africa on Tuesday announced that AB de Villiers won't be coming out of international retirement ahead of the upcoming T20 World Cup in India, saying that he has decided "once and for all" to not change his mind.

Putting to rest speculations around his comeback, CSA said that "discussions with AB de Villiers have concluded with the batsman deciding once and for all, that his retirement will remain final."

The statement was reportedly made after CSA announced the team for upcoming tour of the West Indies, though it focussed largely on the squads for the two Test matches and five T20Is in the Caribbean islands rather than de Villiers' retirement.

In May 2018, de Villiers had announced his retirement from international cricket. He played 114 Tests, 228 ODIs and 78 T20Is before announcing the surprise decision.

However, last month the 37-year-old versatile cricketer said it would be "fantastic" to make an international comeback ahead of the T20 World Cup. — PTI

Kane ready for showdown

London, May 18: New Zealand captain Kane Williamson is excited to face India in the World Test Championships (WTC) final next month as he considers showdowns against Virat Kohli's men to be a "fantastic challenge". India and New Zealand square-off in the final of the inaugural World Test Championships in Southampton from June 18.

"When we play against India, it has always been a fantastic challenge and so it is really exciting to be playing against them," Williamson said in a video posted by the ICC on its Twitter handle.

"It's really, really exciting to be involved in the final, obviously to win it would be that much better," said the 30-year-old considered one of the best current batsmen in the world.

Talking about championship and how it progressed, Williamson said, "We saw the contests in the WTC has brought real excitement."

"...the games were really tight such as in the India-Australia series and our series against Pakistan as well where you had to really fight hard to get the results, which is really great."

New Zealand pacer Neil Wagner admitted India possess fast bowlers who can exploit the English conditions but said the wickets can change anytime and become flat also.

"India has a lot of quality fast bowlers who have done well in different conditions, they can swing (the ball) under overcast conditions but when the sun comes out it (wicket) is flat and nothing happens."

"(English) Conditions can change throughout and so I am not getting carried away too much, trying to control the controllable."

India batsman Hanuma Vihari, who is in England for a county stint with Warwickshire, said it would be a great feeling to play for his country in the WTC final.

"I am excited but I would want to be in that moment and not to get too much carried away by the importance of the situation," he said.

"But as a sportsman, to play for India in the final of inaugural World Test Championships is always a great feeling," said the 27-year-old batsman who is currently playing county cricket in England.

The majority of the Kiwi players have reached the UK as they play a two-match series against England starting June 2 before the WTC final.

Faf received death threat for Cup debacle

New Delhi, May 18: Former South Africa skipper Faf du Plessis has revealed that he and his wife received death threats after a mix-up with AB de Villiers led to the latter's run out during their 2011 World Cup semi-final defeat to New Zealand.

Played at the Sher-e-Bangla National Stadium in Mirpur, Dhaka, South Africa lost the match by 49 runs to be knocked out of the tournament, which was won by co-hosts India.

"I received death threats after that (match). My wife received death threats. We turned on social media and we were blown away. It became very personal. There were some very offensive things said that I won't repeat," du Plessis was quoted as saying by ESPNcricinfo.

"It makes you introverted towards people and you put a shield up. All players go through this and it forces us to keep our circles very small. It's why I've worked so hard on creating a safe space within our camp," he added.

Fed dumped out in Geneva Open

Geneva, May 18: Roger Federer lost the first match of his comeback-proper on Tuesday as the Swiss tennis great tumbled out of the Geneva Open on his first outing in two months.

Federer lost 6-4, 4-6, 6-4 in the second round to Spanish clay court specialist Pablo Andujar to wreck the 39-year-old's hopes of stringing a run of matches together ahead of the French Open, Wimbledon and the Tokyo Olympics.

Federer returned to the courts in March, having been out for more than a year following two knee surgeries, winning his first match in Doha before losing his second.

He was hoping to find some form on the Geneva clay but tumbled at the first hurdle.

Federer waved to the few dozen masked spectators dotted around the Eaux-Vives centre court, with the attendance limited due to local coronavirus restrictions.

Fans gathered in the woods outside the tennis club for a glimpse of Federer through the fence.

Federer seemed at ease in his movement but took a bit of time to get into his groove, getting only 40 percent of his first serves in during the first set, which he lost by overhitting a second serve.

In the second set, Federer won his first service game to love then broke for a 2-1 lead.

He began to show flashes of the old magic, throwing in occasional backhand drop shots.

He overhit his first set point but made no mistake with the second.

Federer broke to go 2-1 up in the second set, drawing Andujar to the net and beating him with a backhand passing shot.

Andujar broke back to make it 4-4 and held serve to leave Federer serving to

SERENA LOSES IN STRAIGHT SETS

Serena Williams' disappointing return to tennis continued when she lost in straight sets to 68th-ranked Katerina Siniakova in the second round of the Emilia-Romagna Open on Tuesday.

Top-seeded Williams, who accepted a wild-card invitation for the Parma tournament after losing her opening match at the Italian Open last week, was beaten 7-6 (4), 6-2.

She had beaten teenage qualifier Lisa Pigato 6-3, 6-2 in the previous round for her first victory since defeating Simona Halep in the Australian Open quarterfinals in February. — AFP

ENGLAND REST IPL STARS FOR SERIES AGAINST KIWIS

London, May 18: England on Tuesday rested IPL stars including Jos Buttler and Jonny Bairstow for the upcoming two-Test series against New Zealand while Jofra Archer and Ben Stokes were not considered for selection due to injuries. England named a 15-man squad for the series starting June 2.

"Multi-format players Moeen Ali, Jonathan Bairstow, Jos Buttler, Sam Curran and Chris Woakes are rested after completing a quarantine period following the cancellation of the Indian Premier League earlier this month. They will spend some time resting before joining up with their respective counties in due course," said the ECB in a statement referring to the four players who had to undergo a 10-day quarantine upon their return from India.

Gloucestershire wicketkeeper-batsman James Bracey and Sussex seamer Ollie Robinson have been called up to the Test squad for the first time. Stokes (fractured finger) and Archer (right elbow) were not considered for selection as they are recovering from injuries. — PTI

Shuttle umpire Sudhakar dead

Sudhakar Vemuri, renowned badminton official, passed away in Hyderabad on Tuesday morning due to Covid-19. He was 71 and left behind by his wife and two daughters.

Sudhakar umpired at three consecutive Olympics — Barcelona 1992, Atlanta 1996 and Sydney 2000, the only Asian to do so.

The respected umpire also officiated in several tournaments including two Asian Games in 1982 (New Delhi) and 1994 (Hiroshima, Japan), one Special Olympics in 1995 (Connecticut, USA), Thomas and Uber Cups, Sudirman Cups and World Championships.

He was the deputy chairman of Badminton Asia's Technical Officials Committee.

National badminton coach Pullela Gopichand led the tributes as condolences poured in from the badminton fraternity. "A much loved, revered and respected figure in Indian badminton has left us. His

"A colossal figure in the badminton circuit, he passed on his wisdom to several upcoming players and officials. He leaves an unparalleled legacy of integrity, honesty and commitment to badminton, and will remain irreplaceable in the hearts of those who knew and loved him," Gopi added.

World champion P. V. Sindhu too expressed her sadness. "I am shocked to hear that Shri Sudhakar Vemuri sir, international badminton umpire has passed away. I extend my deepest condolences to his family," she tweeted.

Badminton Association of India and Asian Badminton also condoled Sudhakar's demise.
