CHANDIGARH, JANUARY 28
After the violence that rocked the Capital on Republic Day, it may be an uphill task for farm leaders to keep the agitation against the Centre's farm laws on course as the first signs of resistance to their sit-ins have begun to surface in Haryana.

While the farm leaders are out to re-strategise, locals from villages around Singhu and Tikri have started voicing their concern about the adverse impact of the stir on their lives and livelihood, keeping the police on their toes.

Protesting close to the main site of the agitation at Singhu, villagers of Manoli, Aterna and Sersa among others demanded that the farmers vacate the border. Stating that the traffic flow must resume between Delhi and Haryana, the residents announced the decision to hold a panchayat tomorrow to decide the future course of action if their demand was not met. To reclaim stir; unions go Gandhi way

Get tough with outfits involved in Republic Day 'sabotage' bid; seek answers

Tribune News Service

CHANDIGARH, JANUARY 28
Having been "sabotaged" briefly, farmer leaders have gone back to the Gandhian way to reclaim the movement from extremist elements.

From suspending two farmer organisations, which allegedly connived with extremist groups, to sitting on hunger strike and holding 'sadbhava' (goodwill) marches at Singhu, there is an attempt to dissociate the movement from the January 26 events in the national capital.

On Thursday, members of the farmer organisations, holding the Tricolour and union flags, took out a "sadbhava" rally at Singhu. Dr Darshan Pal, president, Krantikari Kisan Union, said there were some attempts at creating differences between members from Punjab and Haryana. "So we instantly planned this rally to tell our brothers from Haryana that we are united," he said.

During the rally, senior farmer leader Balbir Singh

Rajewal said they wanted to tell the countrymen the farmers were bigger nationalists than the BJP. "We have great respect for our national flag," he said.

The vehicles in the rally bore the national flag and photographs of Bhagat Singh as slogans of 'Long live unity of Punjab and Haryana' rent the air.

Apart from the 'sadbhava'

March, the unions have announced a hunger strike on the martyrdom day of Mahatma Gandhi (January 30). "We want to tell people we were equally pained at the hooliganism that unfolded at the Red Fort on January 26," said Rajinder Singh Deep Singhwala, vice-president of the Kirti Kisan Union.

Sources say the unions have also acted tough against organisations that allegedly became part of the "sabotage" attempt allegedly perpetrated by Deep Sidhu, Lakha Sidhana, Students For Society and Democratic Students' Organisation on January 26. The sources say the BKU (Krantikari) and BKU (Doaba) have been suspended from the platform of 32 organisations over R-Day "sabotage" bid.

BJP's charge baseless, Centre failed to tackle situation: Capt

COVER-UP ATTEMPT

The allegations are nothing but a cover-up attempt by Prakash Javadekar for his own party's role in the violence, and in fact for its utter failure in managing the situation.

Rahul Gandhi of inciting the violence, asking, "Did the Congress leader ask anyone to climb the Red Fort? He did not. It was BJP and AAP men who did that," he said, adding that Rahul had, in fact, promptly condemned the violence, and made it clear that violence was no solution to the crisis.

"How can I stop peaceful farmers from going to their own national capital to exercise their democratic right of protest," the Chief Minister further said, reacting to the Union Minister's statement that the Punjab Government failed to stop farmers from joining the tractor rally.

Meanwhile, terming the issuance of lookout notices against farm leaders as "absolutely wrong", the Chief Minister said treating the farmers this way was not only illogical but condemnable. "Where will they flee?" he asked, pointing out that most of them were small farmers with small land holdings and not big corporate giants.

the January 26 trouble, which was in fact the doing of anti-social elements who had infiltrated the tractor rally. The Centre should get a free and fair probe conducted into the possible role of any political party, or even another country, as is being alleged by BJP's own leaders, to ensure that the guilty were punished and the genuine farmers were not unnecessarily maligned or harassed, he added.

The Chief Minister also lashed out at the Union Minister for accusing Workers and supporters of the BJP and AAP, and not the Congress, have been caught on camera waving the Nishan Sahib at the Red Fort," said the Chief Minister in a strong retaliation to Javadekar's "unfounded" allegations against the Congress, and his own government in Punjab.

Not a single Congress leader or member was seen at the Red Fort indulging in any kind of lawlessness, Capt Amarinder pointed out, adding that even farmers were not responsible for farmer organisations. They have also been asked to give an explanation before a five-member committee, to be headed by Balbir Singh Rajewal, a senior farmer leader.

Till their suspension is revoked, the organisations can neither attend any meeting nor can their speakers address from the forum stage.

False cases being filed to discredit stir: AAP

CHANDIGARH, JANUARY 28
The Aam Aadmi Party (AAP) condemned the "false" police cases registered against farmers over the actions taken by RSS and BJP agents to discredit the farmers' movement at the Red Fort on January 26.

In a statement, senior leader of the party and Leader of the Opposition in the Punjab Assembly Harpal Singh Cheema said Prime Minister Narendra Modi government's nefarious moves in collaboration with the RSS, BJP and central agencies to put an end to the farmers' movement had embarrassed the country worldwide.

Cheema said by registering false cases against farmer leaders, who were not involved in the Red Fort incident, the police had proved that it was a political move. "The Delhi Police should have immediately arrested and prosecuted BJP agent Deep Sidhu, but it instead started defaming the peaceful agitators. Farmer leaders had been saying for a long time that Sidhu was a BJP agent and wanted to give a wrong colour to the movement," Cheema said. —TNS

Leave path of confrontation, SAD urges BJP

NEW DELHI, JANUARY 28
The Shiromani Akali Dal (SAD) on Thursday accused the central government of being adamant in dealing with the protest of farmers. MPs Naresh Gujral, BS Bhunder and Prof Prem Singh Chandumajra said at a press conference that the government was only trying to defame the agitation and not resolve the matter.

"The government should resolve the issue amicably and leave the path of confrontation," they said. "The contribution of the Sikh community is immense, but people from the sangh parivar are trying to defame the community," they added.

The party also condemned UAPA cases against farmer leaders. —TNS

Once a popular kabaddi player, Lakha Sidhana has donned several roles before emerging as one of the two most-wanted persons over the Republic Day violence in New Delhi along with actor-turned-activist Deep Sidhu.

By doing social work, the 36-year-old from Bathinda had been trying to erase his image of being a gangster and point-man of some politicians. Seeking prominence for Punjabi language, he had blackened English and Hindi names on the signboards. He had insisted the names should be written in Punjabi on top of the boards.

Now, he is again a fugitive. The Delhi Police have booked him for inciting and leading the mob that hoisted a religious flag on the Red Fort. In a social media post, Lakha denied the charges saying he was on Outer Ring Road when the alleged incident took place.

PSPCL saves ₹300 cr using domestic coal

TRIBUNE NEWS SERVICE

PATIALA, JANUARY 28

Sufficient domestic coal availability due to the pandemic this year and the Centre's import substitution policy have come as a blessing for the Punjab State Power Corporation Limited (PSPCL). The PSPCL will save around Rs 300 crore this year as the Coal India Ltd (CIL) allocated higher quantities of domestic coal to two private plants in the state.

This has helped the PSPCL reduce the cost of power production. Soon after the policy was enforced, the two private thermal power plants in Punjab managed to get around 26 lakh tonnes of coal allocated

26 LAKH TONNES ALLOCATED

■ Various subsidiaries of Coal India Ltd allocated 26 lakh tonnes of domestic coal to 2 pvt thermal power plants in Punjab from various subsidiaries of the CIL. "As a result, the variable cost of energy from the Nabha Power Ltd has come to Rs 2.98 per unit and from the Talwandi Sabo Power Plant at Rs 3.61 per unit," said officials.

Experts suggested that there was a structural deficit in the allocation of coal for the thermal power plants in the state. The coal allocated under the fuel supply agreement to the plants was not enough to sustain full operations. Due to this, in past, the two private thermal plants were constrained to import coal to meet the shortfall.

Documents revealed that the Nabha Power Ltd (NPL), which operates the Rajpura Thermal Power Plant, has already lifted 14 lakh tonnes of the 16 lakh tonnes of coal allocated from various subsidiaries of the CIL. The Talwandi Sabo Thermal Power Plant (TSPL) is expected to replace 10.5 lakh tonnes of imported coal with the domestic supply till March 2021.

"This helped the PSPCL cut down the fuel cost and is likely to save Rs 180 crore from the NPL and Rs 120 crore from the TSPL. The cost of power from the NPL went down by 23 paisa per unit, and from Talwandi Sabo, it slipped by 14 paisa per unit as compared to the previous year," a senior PSPCL official said. "However, it is yet to be seen whether these accrued savings in the energy charges shall be passed on to the consumers during the next year's tariff revision," said the experts. PSPCL insiders said the corporation had to face huge losses in revenue during the lockdown period.

Due to the lockdown, the PSPCL recorded a significant fall in the energy sales which went down by around 1,600 million units (MUs) as compared to the previous year. In 2019-20, the PSPCL had sold 36,917 MUs, generating a revenue of Rs 31,809 crore. "During this fiscal, it is being projected that the power utility will sell around 35,300 MUs and the annual revenue will remain around Rs 31,550 crore by the end of March 2021," said officials.

Peved at the incident, a violent crowd of people from various villages such as Shahpur, Paploha, Bar Godam, Lehi Kherawali, Banoi Sawalia of Panchkula armed with wooden sticks, rods and stones placed the body near the red light chowk at Baddi after the postmortem. SOLAN/NURPUR, JANUARY 28

Anita Sharma and Hira Devi were unanimously elected chairperson and vice-chairperson, respectively, of the Nahan Block Development Committee (BDC) in Sirmaur district yesterday.

The Congress failed to put up a contest, as it lacked adequate numbers. The dismal performance of the Congress in the BDC poll not only exposed factionalism in the party but also the absence of a strong leader who could steer the party to victory.

Anita Sharma had won from the Neher Swar ward while Hira Devi had emerged victorious from the Baneti ward. Seventeen of the 18 members supported them yesterday, claimed BJP MLA Rajeev Bindal.

He said the Congress had suffered defeat in the Nahan BDC and the party did not even have candidates at several seats. He thanked the people for supporting the BJP and said the state was moving ahead in development.

Dry January worries apple growers

SUBHASH RAJTA

TREBUNE NEWS SERVICE

SHIMLA, JANUARY 28

The year 2021 hasn't started on a good note for the cultivators of apple and other temperate fruits, especially in district Shimla. The district has seen no snowfall and little rain in January, resulting in the loss of critical 'chilling hours' for temperate fruit plants.

"We have had more than 1,200 chilling hours by January end last year. This time we have achieved only 300 to 400 chilling hours so far because of the dry spell in January," said SP Bhardwaj, former joint director, University of Horticulture and Forestry, Nauni.

Bhardwaj said the 'chilling hours' requirement (an average temperature of below 7 degree Celsius in 24 hours) of temperate fruits varies from 400 hours to 1300 hours, and the old varieties of apple, Red Delicious for example, need the maximum chilling hours.

HOPES PINNED ON BETTER SNOW IN FEB

"We had over 1,200 chilling hours by January-end last year. This time, we have achieved only 300 to 400 chilling hours so far due to the dry spell in January. The situation is critical but hopefully, we will have snowfall and rains in February."

— SP Bhardwaj, EX-JOINT DIRECTOR, NAUNI HORTICULTURE UNIVERSITY

"The chilling hours requirement is normally met by January end but this time we are lagging behind. The situation is critical but hopefully we will have snowfall and rains in February," he said. For the record, the last time the apple growing belt, except for the higher reaches of Kinnaur, witnessed totally dry January was way back in 2006-07.

The 'chilling hours' are absolutely critical for the plants. The plant goes into dormancy during this period and comes out of it with the rise in temperature ready and rejuvenated for another season of production.

"If the requirement is not met, or met partially, the plant behaves in an erratic manner. Flowering patterns will get disturbed, each variety will bloom at different time and there will be problem in pollination. All this will affect both quality and quantity of the fruit," said Bhardwaj.

So what could horticulturalists do at the moment to minimize the effect of less chilling hours? "First and foremost, they should not indulge in any activity that can lead to depletion of moisture from their orchards. Basin dressing should be avoided and the application of fertilizers, too, should be delayed," said Bhardwaj.

"Besides, people should avoid removing shrubs as it not only protects the land from direct exposure to sunlight but also helps sustain the population of wild bees", he said. The orchardists, too, are a little worried. "The deficiency of chilling hours may not affect the growers at higher altitude and new varieties, but it's a big problem for orchards at lower elevations and older varieties," said Lokender Bisht, an orchardist.

Vacancies in high courts

Time to fix lacunae in judicial appointment system

MORE than five years after the Supreme Court struck down the National Judicial Appointments Commission to safeguard judicial independence, the collegium is struggling to fill judicial vacancies in the 25 high courts. A Bench headed by Chief Justice of India SA Bobde has frowned upon the government for delaying the process of clearing the names recommended by the collegium for appointment as high court judges. Terming it a 'matter of great concern', it has asked the Ministry of Law and Justice to spell out how much time it would take to process the recommendations.

As on January 1 this year, there were 668 judges against a sanctioned strength of 1,079 and 411 posts remained vacant. The situation doesn't appear to have improved since January 2020 when judicial vacancies in high courts stood at 401. The Supreme Court has sought to put the blame on the government. More than 100 names sent to the Union Ministry of Law and Justice by various high courts to be forwarded to the Supreme Court collegium for approval are hanging fire, many of them for more than a year. There are 56.57 lakh cases pending in 25 high courts. Of this, 92,085 are more than 30 years old; 1,51,853 cases have been awaiting disposal for over 20 years.

The Memorandum of Procedure that governs the process for judicial appointments requires the Centre to give its feedback on the names recommended. Having been forced to play second fiddle, successive governments have used their feedback as a 'pocket veto'. But the judiciary can't be absolved of its responsibility either. If there are 411 vacancies in high courts, why can't an equal number of names be recommended in advance? It's time to fix the lacunae in the judicial appointment system in the interest of justice.

The show goes on

Easing curbs across sectors augurs well for economy

THE go-ahead from February 1 to increase the occupancy in cinema halls and theatres from the earlier 50 per cent, open swimming pools to the public (athletes have been dipping in them already) and permit all exhibitions (B2B ones are on) to restart comes as a shot in the arm for the beleaguered industries. Life is expected to return to near-normalcy with curbs on international air travel — overseas flights under Vande Bharat Mission and air bubble arrangements had been permitted — and social, political and religious gatherings also being further lifted. However, it enjoins upon the people to not lower the guard and observe the precautionary mask-sanitisation-social distancing routine. Recklessness may cost dearly, for the coronavirus has been seen to outsmart human efforts to contain it and mutate into fast-spreading strains.

The government decision to remove the restrictions comes riding on the gains derived from its efforts to overcome the Covid-19 pandemic as the number of daily infections has dipped over the past couple of months and the national recovery rate of the disease inched up to a heartening 96.91 per cent. Giving wind to the graded opening is also the vaccination drive that is on, with frontline workers getting the jabs first. Another pointer for cheer is the sero survey which indicates that Delhi is nearing herd immunity. Add to the optimistic scenario the IMF projection of a robust growth rate of 11.5 per cent in the next financial year for India, and things look up.

A big push to this growth in economy is expected to come from the film industry. Its loss due to the lockdown in 2020 has been pegged at a whopping Rs 5,000 crore, with virus-wary viewers staying away from movie halls. Equally impactful will be the revival of the exhibition industry, which as per the Indian Exhibitions Industry Association, has a size of Rs 23,800 crore with over 550 events conducted annually. CAPA India forecast in October that the Indian aviation industry will lose a combined $6-6.5 billion in FY21. The push button to restart these multi-crore segments is indeed vital to propelling the all-round optimistic outlook.

LAHORE, SATURDAY, JANUARY 29, 1921

The Duty of Principals and College Committees.

IT cannot be denied that the situation must cause grave anxiety to the Principals and managing committees of Colleges and the educationists generally as well as to the parents and guardians of the protesting boys. But they, too, have everything to gain and nothing to lose by keeping their head cool and not resorting to action which can only aggravate the situation. The finest example of what ought to be done was afforded some time ago by Pandit Malaviya, who not only invited Mahatma Gandhi to address the students of the Benaras Hindu University, but himself presided over the meeting at which the address was delivered. On the other hand, an example of what ought not to be done was afforded by the Principal of a College in Calcutta who so far lost his head the very moment his boys went on strike as to put up a notice on the notice board which was resented by a considerable number of members of the staff. The best is to keep in touch both with the students and their parents and guardians and to avoid the very appearance of coercion. You cannot coerce the whole student population of a city, and any method that even remotely favours coercion will only make things worse. The highest punishment provided for in the academic code is expulsion and this punishment obviously has no terrors for those who are publicly declaring their intention of expelling themselves. Our own opinion of what should be done, we have already stated. That obviously does not at present satisfy the organisers of the movement. But we venture to think that it will be accepted by them as the next best thing if and when they will find that what they consider the best is not immediately attainable.

Setback to farmers' cause

Government should get to the bottom of Republic Day violence

TRYSTS AND TURNS

JULIO RIBEIRO

CROSSING THE LINE: It is vital to probe who were the instigators of violence. PTI

If the fifth column has been the creation of foreign-based Sikh organisations, both the protesters and the government will have to tread slowly.

thought it expeditious to create a rift in the farmer's lobby?

These questions need to be answered first before the farmers, or even the government, decides on its next course of action. If the culprits are only an offshoot of the main body that had decided to assert themselves because they had ideological differences with the acknowledged leaders, then the solution will be a lot easier to find despite the flip side of a split in the ranks.

This suggestion is made by an uninformed observer searching for a compromise. Perhaps, this solution is not feasible, in which case it can be summarily rejected and forgotten. But those who know and can help to come to a just conclusion will have to think out of the box.

How did a small section of farmers create so much damage to their own cause? Were they saboteurs, as some observers had warned the farmers about? And if they were a fifth column, was this group a creation of Gurpatwant Singh Pannu's Sikhs for Justice, which is US based, but has some following in Punjab among youth? Or, God forbid, was the group a creation of those keen on the new laws and dranwale years and the subsequent era of 'Khalistani' terror. Fortunately, the Modi government has the expert services of Ajit Doval to guide it through such a crisis if it should arise. Doval, in turn, has the services of Datta Padsalgikar, a level-headed, low-key deputy, to advise him on internal security matters. Those two ex-IPS officers are capable enough to guide their political bosses through potential dangers.

The danger of relapsing to terrorism is a live one. The farmers' agitation is a live, potential hazard that can lead to such a pass. It has to be navigated by proven mariners like Ajit Doval and Datta Padsalgikar. If, however, the recalcitrant group has the blessings of the authorities, then that would be a different ball game altogether. I do not see such a game succeeding and I do hope and pray there is no such game. I have seen the authorities in Maharashtra creating a Frankenstein by secretly encouraging the Shiv Sena to get the better of the communists. I have seen the birth of 'Khalistani' terrorism on the back of a religious leader pushed centre stage to neutralise the Akalis. I would not advocate such strategies. They invariably boomerang and are best avoided.

So, the first task that the farmer leaders will have to undertake is to unearth the culprits of yesterday's fiasco. That should not be difficult. Their identities have been captured on camera and CCTVs. The police will almost surely be on their tails by now. If they are dissidents from their own ranks, it can be confirmed from the photographs.

If they are planted by foreign-based organisations or inimical governments, that will be only a shade more difficult to detect but finally a conclusion will surely be reached. And here, the government will be in a better position to investigate. In fact, the government had already warned the farmers to expect a disturbance from such foreign elements! Obviously, this type of intelligence would be available only to the authorities.

If, however, the ones involved in the violence were planted by the authorities, then it will be almost impossible to ascertain the truth. Already there appears on television screens an image of Deep Sidhu, a Punjabi actor and a man closely connected to the ruling party at the Centre, allegedly involved with the person who supplanted the Nishan Sahib, the Sikh Panth's flag, at the Red Fort. This man's name did not figure in the first FIR registered by the Delhi Police about the mayhem within the monument's precincts. It must be ascertained who it was that set him up. Till his exact role is established, a doubt will linger about the government's role in fomenting the riots.

If a government department is involved, then the true culprits will not be brought to book and you will see a repeat of NE Delhi's riots investigation and the consequent arrest of farm leaders, instead of the real culprits responsible for sabotaging the peaceful nature of the protests.

Drawing the cracker redline

JOHNNY WILLIAM

I LIVE in the heart of Jammu, better known as the city of ancient temples. While the afternoons are cosy, spent basking in the glorious sunshine, the evenings become chilly. I retreat into my comfortable room with a heater. On a calm evening, listening to sonorous lilting music, I had just started reading the book by former US President Barack Obama, A Promised Land, when suddenly, the shattering sound of an explosion, startled my pleasure and peace. It was as if a rapid fire was raging outside.

I have retired as a cop. It was like a grim reminder of the maddening moment of the times of militancy in Jammu. In the 1990s, blasts were common, but the guns are thankfully silent now.

Alarmed, I rushed from the room and dashed to the gate to check. What could it be! There is a banquet hall in front of our house where ear-splitting music is a way of life. Upon further probing, I saw teenagers at a wedding party in a frenzy, tinkering with high-grade explosive crackers — setting fire to the fuse with the crackers popping up — in a wide flurry of dazzling lights, and shattering noise. I was dumbstruck!

Only recently during Diwali, the crackers had been banned, keeping in view the repercussions, a threat to life and property, and Covid complications because of the rising pollution levels. But here, these youngsters were treating it like rock-and-roll.

Policing instincts got the better of me. It was impossible for me to not intervene and more so as a responsible citizen. So, I charged towards them and bluntly scolded them. What if it led to some mishap, I warned. The inherent danger is when the firecrackers hit accidentally. A heavy price is often to be paid. I somehow doused their gleeful rage. While I was letting my steam off, a small crowd gathered in my support. Reluctantly, and somewhat defiantly, the frenzied cracker gang withdrew and apologised.

Subdued them by my own show of zeal, I pointed out to them that I had not wanted to spoil the festivity, but only sought to warn them about the perils of bursting crackers carelessly. In times of Covid, not only is social distancing thrown to the wind along with the mask while attending festivities, but also the bursting of crackers serves as a reminder that it has been banned, for the sake of the environment, and also to try and check wasteful expenditure. We must safeguard the law for our own sake.

The vaccine for Covid is finally here. We have come a long way in our fight against the virus. But crackers are deadly, too. We need discipline and responsibility to stop this, the way we did when struck by the pandemic.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Withdraw agitation

Refer to 'Damage control', widespread violence by the protesting farmers deserves to be condemned. Red Fort, the pride of India, was vandalised. A flag of a particular religion was hoisted atop the fort. Protesters tried to mow down policemen. Brandishing swords, protesters chased and attacked them. Several policemen were injured, many hospitalised, with some in the ICU. The events have left the nation aghast. The perpetrators of violence should be brought to book. Some anti-social elements seem to have infiltrated the farmers' stir. Farmers should choose the path of dialogue, not violence. Repeal of laws cannot be through coercion. The laws have been enacted democratically and can be repealed only through a democratic process. The agitation should be withdrawn or suspended to pave the way for a fruitful dialogue. Farmers should know that they are fast losing the sympathy of the people.

WG CDR CL SEHGAL (RETD), JALANDHAR

Protest goes awry

Apropos of 'Damage control', blaming the police for letting vandals reach the Red Fort is unfair. If the police had taken action, and in that process if anything had gone wrong, the police would have been blamed for it. It was the basic duty of farmer leaders, who had given written consent to the authorities for a peaceful agitation, to ensure nothing went wrong. The fact is that these leaders lost control and brought disrepute to the country.

PAWAN RAKHEJA, GURUGRAM

Intelligence failure

Apropos of 'Damage control', where lies the justification of a section of the media and the ruling party leaders to allegedly blame the farmers for violence before factual truth comes out? The infiltration of unsavoury elements cannot be ruled out. It may have been a big intelligence failure. There should be a thorough investigation so that the culprits are nabbed.

ROOP SINGH NEGI, SOLAN

Farmers lose support

Apropos of 'March off, unions regret Red Fort incident', the details and true nature of the incident still remain unclear, but one thing is for sure that it has greatly affected the farm protests which remained peaceful for months. People are divided and farmers have lost a lot of support. This has also given rise to many conspiracy theories, both in support of, and against the farmers. The unwillingness to compromise on both the sides, the farmers and the government, made this clash inevitable.

PRATEEK SACHDEVA, MOHALI

Police lapses

Reference to 'Farmer leaders Ugrahan, Rajewal among 37 booked', ultimately the Delhi Police woke up to perform its duty belatedly. It is true that farmer leaders did not honour their terms. However, the police cannot escape the blame. In spite of a letter issued by Gurpatwant Singh Panu of Sikhs for Justice, announcing a reward of $2,50,000 for a person hoisting a 'Khalistani' flag on the Red Fort and a call to involve the agitating farmers in this cause, sufficient preventive steps were not taken by the police. Moreover, the entry of protesters in the high-security zone of the Red Fort on Republic Day raises pertinent questions. Only a high-level investigation can reveal the role of the farmers' leaders and the police in this incident.

UPENDRA SHARMA, BY MAIL

Station Army at Red Fort

The Red Fort is a historic place closely linked with our freedom struggle. Since Independence, it was under the Army. In 2003, it was handed over to the ASI and Tourism Ministry so it could be developed as a world heritage site. It is time to move in an Army unit at the Red Fort for the maintenance of its sanctity and security. There are vital places in the fort where only designated security personnel should be allowed.

RAVI BHUSHAN, KURUKSHETRA

Science policy
Reference to 'Draw from past lessons for new science policy'; universities should have the freedom to devise and evolve their own curricula and evaluation system for better local relevance, experiential learning and global competitive advantage. Granularity of autonomy, especially with respect to pedagogical approaches and student evaluation, should be at the teacher's level. Undergraduate students should be encouraged to associate with research groups to foster a research mindset at an early stage. Majority of universities should be research intensive rather than teaching intensive. International research collaborations should be closely monitored against 'helicopter' research. The focus should also be on promoting innovations in business models in order to complement technological innovations.

BHARPOOR SINGH SEKHON, LUDHIANA

Food chain consolidation limiting choices

DEVINDER SHARMA
FOOD & AGRICULTURE SPECIALIST

EVERY time you walk into a supermarket or an average looking grocery store, you are likely to be overwhelmed by ample choices. The retail shelves are packed with abundant supplies of food products — coming in attractive packages and with alluring sale offers — which give you an illusion of widening choices.

In reality, the choices are getting restricted. Most of these products are being produced by a few companies, their numbers decreasing over the years. The reason — food processing and retail business is getting concentrated — dominated by a handful of companies. So much so, some agribusiness companies have been known to put on the shelves similar kinds of product under different brand names.

If you think consolidation is happening only in the food retailing industry, hold your breath. Concentration and consolidation is not only happening in food retail but across the food value chain, thereby reducing choices, and leading first to monopolies and subsequently to building conglomerates that control the value chain. As Dr William Heffernan of the University of Missouri had forewarned way back in 1991, the control is going to be from 'the gene to the supermarket shelf'.

This is exactly what has happened. With first horizontal and then vertical integration, followed subsequently by global expansion, the very fundamental of the market economy — that more choices means more competition — has got severely limited. In fact, with an increasing spate of acquisitions and mergers that the world is witnessing, more so since the mid-1980s, competitiveness has been the biggest casualty. As Heffernan and some other economists had shown, when four companies gain dominance over 40 per cent of the market, it no longer remains competitive. The choices then disappear.

The concentration of ownership leads to concentration of wealth and power. In the food value chain, it is this unwieldy concentration of power that decides what to produce, and what to eat. With the decision making a shift from the communities to the board room, even the food choices are getting limited. The romance with traditional foods is slowly fading away. The exponential growth in junk foods, leading to a spurt in obesity and lifestyle diseases, is a classic example. Lab-grown food will further take away food choices and bring more corporate control over food. As if this is not enough, reports say the United States now wants the private sector to act as an educational agent for food and nutrition.

Over the years, the world is witnessing a convergence among the three major players — technology companies, trading companies, and the big retail — to exert a greater influence in drawing appropriate policies at the national as well as international level so as to help with consolidation. The policy of 'get big or get out' that the US pushed since the early 1970s has reframed public policies in agriculture to usher in consolidation across the entire food chain. This is perhaps what the Indian farmers are worried about, the protest actually aiming at protecting the farm livelihoods by ensuring an assured income by way of an assured price. What they are asking for holds the key to reclaiming the power imbalance in the food systems that has built in over the decades.

Whether it is land, seed or livestock, the consolidation that has happened in the US has set a global trend. While small farmers abandoned agriculture, an interesting study entitled 'The Food System: Concentration and its Impacts' for the Family Farm Action Alliance in the US, tells how the share of farms above an average of 2,000 acres has doubled in 40 years, from 15 per cent to 37 per cent; and dairy farms have grown in size, with the average number of dairy cattle increasing from 80 to 1,300 in the same period.

According to the 2020 Land Report, Bill and Melinda Gates are now America's top farmland owners with 242,000 acres. The next in the list is the Offutt family, owning 190,000 acres. Considering that Ted Turner and David Rockefeller have been recipients of massive farm subsidies in the past (they too own large tracts of farmland), it will be interesting to know how much farm subsidies the Gates family is entitled to. This also points to a different form of land consolidation.

Coming back to agriculture, with the big six seed companies seeing mergers and acquisitions, reducing their number to four, their share of the global seed market is around 59 per cent. With Trade-related Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPs) agreement, and many countries now bringing in policies to stop or restrict the use of traditional seeds, the consolidation of the seed industry is further strengthened. IPR policies are also leading to privatisation of genetic resources. Seed biotech companies insert a gene in a plant species and it becomes a new variety, with ownership shifting to the company. The genetic uniformity that the seed industry is ushering in raises concerns over the destruction from monocultures.

The three agro-chemical giants — Bayer/Monsanto, ChemChina/Syngenta and DowDuPont — have 64 per cent share of the global pesticides market. First, the seed industry dovtailed pesticides usage in the varieties developed, and now the genetically-modified seed varieties with genes for herbicide tolerance leads to increasing sales of the particular herbicides. The use of pesticides has in fact grown after the introduction of GM varieties despite claims to the contrary.

Similarly, consolidations have happened across the entire food chain.

All this leads to the question as to who controls food? Consolidation is aimed at keeping food cheap, by externalising the socio-economic and environmental costs. This is going to exacerbate further with increasing concentration of food power in the hands of a few companies. The true cost of cheap food is not only health and environment destruction, but also in the resulting sufferings of farmers who are denied their rightful income for what they produce. This leads to a worrying situation where farmers quit agriculture and the companies take over. And this is what the protesting farmers are worried about.

WORRYING TREND: Food processing and retail business is dominated by a handful of companies. PTI

Counter vaccine hesitancy by building trust

DINESH C SHARMA
SCIENCE COMMENTATOR

THE first few days of the Covid-19 vaccination campaign were marked by slower uptake. This was surprising because those covered in the first phase are doctors, nurses and healthcare workers. They are supposed to be well aware of the importance of a vaccine, having been in the forefront of the fight against Covid-19 for the past one year. The slow start was blamed on various factors — glitches in vaccination management software, lack of timely information to those in the list, and also certain level of hesitancy among healthcare workers to take the jab. The software and other logistics issues were addressed and fine tuned as the drive progressed. The numbers subsequently picked up and over two million people have been vaccinated throughout the country so far. Vaccine hesitancy, however, needs a proper and well calibrated response as several million people outside the health sector are next in queue in the coming months.

The World Health Organisation (WHO) defines vaccine hesitancy as 'delay in acceptance or refusal of vaccination' despite the availability of a vaccine. It is an umbrella term that covers hesitation and refusal of vaccine due to any reason. Well aware of this, the Ministry of Health and Family Welfare incorporated it in its vaccine communication strategy released prior to the vaccination drive.

Vaccine hesitancy, the document mentioned, could arise because of 'apprehensions around vaccine safety, efficacy' as well as myths and conceptions. Periodic surveys done by community social media

SLOW TAKE-OFF: The initial reluctance to go for the Covid-19 vaccine is surprising because the first phase involved doctors, nurses and healthcare workers. PTI platform, Local Circles, have warned of high level of vaccine hesitancy in India. The last one conducted after one week of the vaccine launch found that 60 per cent people were unsure of taking any of the two Covid-19 vaccines rolled out on January 16. Most of them said they were worried about the side-effects or not sure about the efficacy of the vaccines. An earlier survey done in 19 countries, including India, published in the journal Nature Medicine, reported varying degrees of hesitancy from all countries.

People's perceptions about a vaccine's safety, efficacy and side-effects or adverse events decide their attitude to a new vaccine. In order to prevent hesitancy, regulators, governments and vaccine companies have to be transparent about these three key attributes of a vaccine. Perceptions are also shaped by claims and statements played out in the process of vaccine development, clinical trials, regulatory approval and rollout. In the case of Covid-19 vaccines, the government played a dual role — an official agency (ICMR) is a co-developer or partner in both Covishield and Covaxin, and the government is also the vaccinator. So, it is the government's responsibility to gain people's trust in both the vaccines. In this very task, the government faltered, causing hesitancy to grow.

The government's messaging on the two vaccines has been confusing and misleading at times. Instead of focusing on evidence and data, it has focused on celebrations and bravado. Within hours of phase I human clinical trials of Covaxin starting on July 18, Health Minister Harsh Vardhan tweeted in Hindi saying 'no side-effects seen in initial trials on humans', among other claims. It was absurd to talk about side-effects when the first day's data from trial sites spread across the country was yet to be collated. Even if such data was available, it has to be shared with the regulator and not the minister.

On the same day, Haryana Health Minister Anil Vij announced that three persons enrolled for phase I trial in Rohtak had tolerated the vaccine well and there were 'no side-effects'. Such statements not only made a mockery of clinical trial process, but sowed seeds of confusion and doubts among the people. A few weeks later, Vij made a public spectacle of participating in phase III of Covaxin trial and then tested positive for Covid-19.

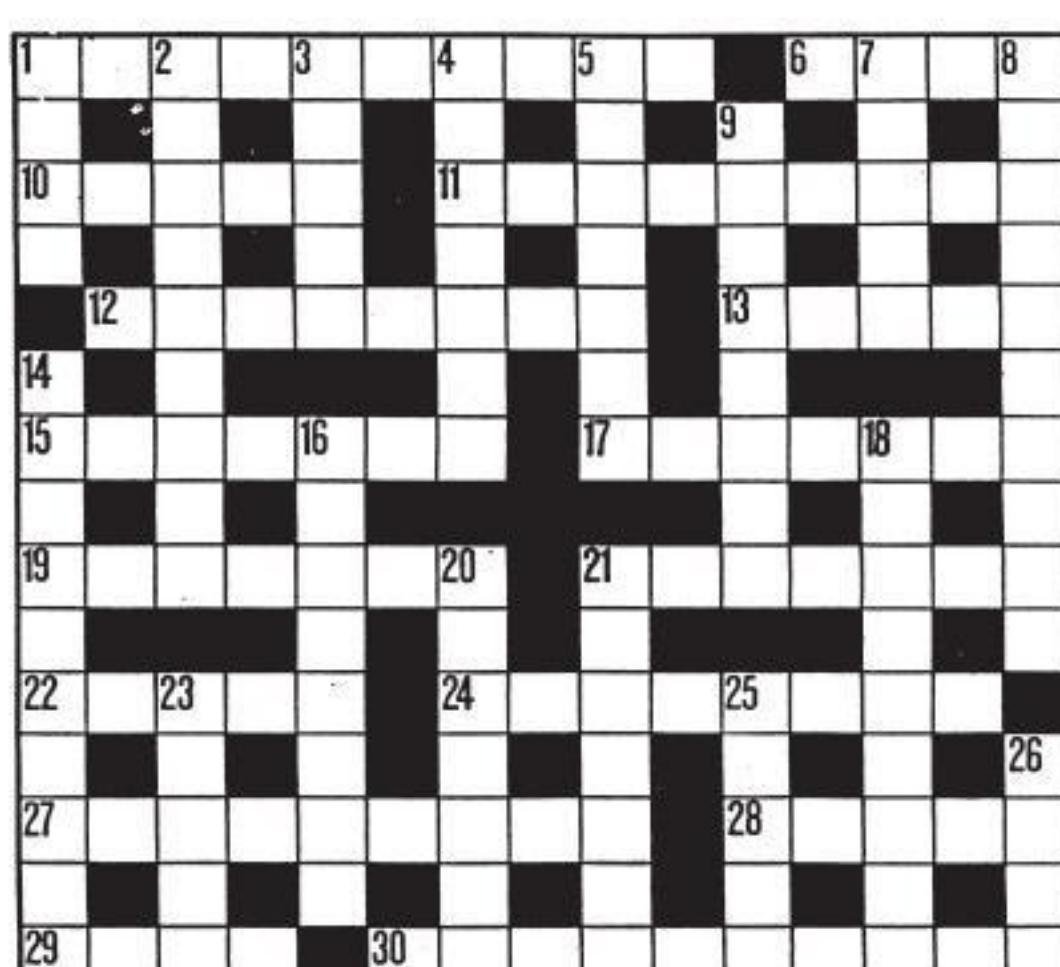

The resulting controversy further dented the clinical trial process and bred hesitancy even though Vij's Covid status had no link with his participation in the trial. In the first place, it was unethical for the ICMR and Bharat Biotech to let a trial participant who was a public figure to announce his participation. There was also the case of Serum Institute of India sending legal notice for Rs 100 crore in damages to a trial participant when he alleged serious side-effects.

The confusion multiplied when the drug regulator gave 'emergency use authorisation' to the two vaccines in two distinct ways, without offering any explanation. Covaxin of Bharat Biotech was approved in 'clinical trial mode' pending data from ongoing phase III or efficacy trial. Top government functionaries had no convincing argument to defend the decision. For instance, Director of the All India Institute of Medical Sciences, New Delhi — which is also a clinical trial site for Covaxin — declared the vaccine will be a sort of 'back-up'. The Bharat Biotech Managing Director shot back saying there was no such thing as back-up vaccine. The Health Ministry treated the two vaccines at par in its roll out plans. Independent experts who questioned vaccine approval without efficacy data were dubbed anti-nationals and peddlers of fake news. Politicians like Akhilesh Yadav did their bit by calling it a 'BJP vaccine'. All such voices provided a perfect cocktail for hesitancy to brew.

The only way to build trust in vaccines and convert hesitancy into acceptance is to be transparent and accountable. The drug regulator should instill public confidence in its approval and regulatory processes. The government, which has a direct stake in both the vaccines, should be transparent about clinical trial and adverse events data. It should accept accountability if something goes wrong during the clinical trials, as it reportedly happened in Bhopal, and for adverse events of a serious nature. Every statement a government functionary makes about the vaccines should be backed by evidence. Instead, the government seems to be in a mood to target critical voices through force and penal action by asking the states to invoke provisions of the Disaster Management Act. Let's remember, trust can't be earned through authority, and vaccine hesitancy can't be countered without trust.

Need to find a way to beat top players: Srikanth

Former world No. 1 Kidambi Srikanth, who lost his second successive match and is virtually out of the World Tour Finals, said he needs to find ways to beat the world's best players. After his second successive three-game defeat today, Srikanth said: "I have to figure out a way to pull out these matches." Yesterday Srikanth was pretty close to closing against Anders Antonsen when he led 17-16 in the third game. He could not finish the match. Today he was in control in the third game against Wang Tzu Wei, but Wang slipped away to win it 21-19. Srikanth hasn't beaten a top-10 player since defeating Indonesia's Jonatan Christie in March 2019. "I think it's about match practice, playing against top players continuously. We haven't played for a year, and before that I wasn't playing against top-eight players continuously. I feel I'm almost there. Yesterday I was there. After 15-all or 16-all it's a matter of a few points," Srikanth said. "It's about playing consistent after 16-all, you can't afford to make mistakes. Today I gave him three points after 15-all. Yesterday the same thing happened," Srikanth, who turns 28 next month, said. "Yes, it's a matter of pulling out one or two matches against top players," he said.

On the eve of the Budget Session of Parliament commencing Friday, ex-Finance Minister P Chidambaram issued a "to-do list" for Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman calling for large fiscal stimulus.

- Impart a large fiscal stimulus to the economy, even belated; such a stimulus alone will put money in the hands of the people and stimulate demand.
- Make direct cash transfers to 20-30 per cent of the families at the bottom of the economy at least for a period of six months, formulate and implement a rescue plan for MSMEs to revive closed units; reduce tax rates, especially GST and other indirect tax rates on petrol and diesel; increase government capital expenditure; recapitalise public sec-

- tor banks immediately and encourage them to lend without fear of investigative agencies probing every loan; abandon protectionist policies, reengage with the world and enter bilateral trade agreements with as many countries as possible thereby removing a bias against imports.
- On agriculture, the former Finance Minister said: "Agriculture will grow at a satisfactory rate if the government does not arbitrarily disrupt the sector with anti-farmer laws and retrograde import/export policies for agricultural produce." —TNS
