Accusing Makkal Needhi Maiam founder Kamal Haasan of ruining families through his films and the Bigg Boss reality television show that he hosts, Chief Minister Edappadi K. Palaniswami said the actor had no intention of doing any good to the people of the country.

"He is 70 years old. He is retired. How can someone who hosts Bigg Boss conduct himself in politics?" Palaniswami asked when media persons in Arivalur raised a question based on Haasan's recent remark on the unearthing of bribe money from government officials. Reacting to Palaniswami's remarks, Haasan tweeted: I am glad that the Chief Minister also watches Bigg Boss. His earlier tweet, government officials were just following the path of the government, was the one that Acknowledging the right of farmers to hold non-violent protests, the Supreme Court on Thursday suggested that the Centre put on hold the implementation of its new agricultural laws, putting forward the idea of setting up an impartial and inde-pendent committee to end the impasse. The Centre said the farmers would not come forward for negotiations if the implementation of the farm laws was put on hold.

The Centre told the court it was not possible to hold implementation of the laws.

Mr Venugopal then asked for time to discuss it with government officials and come back during the vacation, when the CJI indicated a bench will be set up to hear the matter even during the winter break. Friday is the last working day for the court before its 15-day winter recess, that ends on January 3.

NEW DELHI, DEC. 17 As the Congress' internal elections draw close, the top leadership wants to bridge the gap with the 23 letter writers demanding a change in the party's working style and an "active and present" leadership. Insiders claim a meeting between Congress president Sonia Gandhi and some of the letter writers was expected by the coming weekend. Acting as a bridge between the two sides is former Madhya Pradesh CM Kamal Nath, who has in the last couple of days met the letter writers as well as Mrs Gandhi in a bid to find a middle path.

The parleys between the leadership and the letter writers had come to an abrupt end when senior leader Ahmed Patel contracted Covid-19 in early October and passed away in late November.

The proposed meeting will see Mrs Gandhi and some of the letter writers face to face for the first time in months. It's seen as an olive branch by the party leadership so that these leaders' concerns can be addressed. They have sought elections to the Congress Working Committee and other key party posts, and also called for strengthening the party at the grassroots level. Several have said the time for introspection was over.

New Delhi, Dec. 17: The Income Tax Department has detected black income of about ₹700 crore after it raided a Tamil Nadu-based group that undertakes civil government contracts, the CBDT said on Thursday.

The department also seized ₹ 21 crore "unaccounted cash" during the searches. The raids were carried out on December 14 at 15 premises in Erode and Chennai against the group which is a "leading civil con-tractor for government works, specialised in erecting sea wave breakers along the coastlines and is also diversified into bus transport, running marriage halls and food masala business".

"It was found that the group indulges in inflation of purchases and other work contract expenses. Such inflated payments made to the suppliers and sub-contractors are received back in cash regularly," the Central Board of Direct Taxes (CBDT) said in a statement.

Dirty fight over cleaning lake

Members of the DMK got into an argument with the officials of the Chennai Corporation over cleaning the Puzhuthivakkam lake on Thursday. According to the DMK functionaries, who were led by former Chennai mayor M. Subramanian, they had received permission from the Chennai Corporation to carry out cleaning works at the lake. But the corporation officials said the local body had already started the cleaning the lake and it was not necessary for the members of the DMK to do the same. However, the DMK men alleged that the local body did not act swiftly in removing the vegetation and the corporation staff had come there only after they (the DMK workers) reached the spot. Officials pacified Subramanian, who left the spot along with his party cadre after getting an assurance from the corporation that they will work till the vegetation is completely cleared from the waters of the lake.

Chennai gives thumbs up to city corporation

The year 2020 kept people indoors with the tentacles of the Covid-19 pandemic instilling fear in the minds of people even as our system, right from the Centre to local civic bodies, functioned in an unprecedented way. Be it containment activities, campaigns, public distribution services or the migrant crisis, the local bodies functioned round the clock, offering services to the

The Greater Chennai
Corporation (GCC) is the one of the urban civic bodies that faced the pangs of Covid-19 from the beginning of the pandemic's footfall in India. In that period, the common people, in a large way, realised for the first time the necessity of reaching out to the civic body administration and seeking its services, sitting at home.

For example, in the prepandemic period, the GCC's twitter handle was followed by nothing less than a thousand people. Months after the virus hit the city, it went up to over

It would be pertinent to ponder over why people developed concern over the support from the civic Undoubtedly, the reason for this was fear and anxiety the spread of Covid-19 brought to city. It may be recalled that Chennai (still) accounted for more than half of Tamil Nadu's total Covid-19 positive cases resulting in a surge of public health worry among Chennaiites that made them think about ways to keep the pandemic at bay apart from the dwindling state of economy and its consequential job losses.

One of the biggest and successful outreach programmes the civic body introduced in this tough year was the Advanced Tour Programme (ATP) for local level fever camps.

According to the GCC administration, nearly 1 lakh fever clinics were conducted in Chennai team's efforts in serving since May attended by over 40 lakh people. Over 2 According to him, the

The higher turnout at these camps helped the GCC administration to contain the spread of virus in the city, which has a population of over 87 lakh, to a large extent. The GCC launched it after realising that at least 20 per cent of Covid-19 deaths in the city took place due to the failure of the residents in revealing symptoms to the health workers who visited their homes as part of surveys.

In addition to this, the civic body launched the state government's containment zone plan quite effectively following Tablighi Jamaat cases which became a cluster across the state in midthe hubs of smallscale industries and manufactures, has started bustling to emerge from darkness as the new dawn of a fresh year rises. Yet, the civic body has still to do many things to make things going; steady and stronger. So, those old parties are likely to accept the number of seats given to them by the coalition leaders and a third front as such could emerge only if the Haasan and Rajinikanth go for a tie up and rope in some other parties.

However, it is learnt that Rajinikanth and Haasan are averse to taking in most of the parties. Report possibility of tapping minerals in Thamirabarani river: HC to Centre

J.STALIN I DC CHENNAI, DEC. 17

Pointing out that though the presence of atomic/heavy minerals was detected even during the British regime, no steps have been taken either by the Central government or by the state government to tap these minerals for the past 75 years, the Madras high court has directed the authorities of the department of atomic energy, Union of India, to visit the subject area, assess the river Thamirabarani as well as the percentage of minerals found therein, in general and on the report of the Advocate Commissioner and report the possibility of tapping the minerals by the government.

A division bench compris-ing Justices N.Kirubakaran and B.Pugalendhi gave the directive while passing further interim orders on a Public Interest Litigation filed by Balakrishnan, which sought to prevent the illegal quarrying of sand mining fromThamirabarani

The bench said at the instance of the petitioner and the court-appointed Advocate Commissioner, a Treasure of heavy minerals found in the river Thamirabarani, Kudiyurppu, Agaram Kudiyurppu, V a l l a n a d u Village,Sivaigundam Taluk, Thoothukudi district

The bench said Advocate Commissioner, who visited river Thamirabarani on the subject matter of this petition for the purpose of ascertaining the quantity of sand taken from the river, has reported that his survey revealed the presence of substantial percentage of heavy minerals, like Garnet, Limenite, Rutile, Zircon, Leucoxene, Sillimanite, Kyanite and Monazite in the river Thamirabarani. These heavy minerals reported by the Advocate Commissioner were classified as Atomic minerals in Part B of the First Schedule of the Mines and Minerals (Development and Regulation) Act, 1957, the bench added.

The bench said in fact, the presence of the valuable Atomic/heavy minerals was detected during the British regime in the year 1942-43, by Dr.K.Jacobson. A government order dated July 15, 1944 had also been published by the then Government of Madras. Development Department, on the presence of Atomic/heavy minerals in the coast of Tirunelveli, Ramanathapuram and Tanjore Districts (East Coast). "Though the presence of Atomic/heavy minerals was detected even during the British regime, no steps have been taken either by the Central Government or by the State Government to tap these minerals for the past 75 years. The Mines and Minerals (Development and Regulation) Act came into force in the year 1957 and a separate department is also functioning for Geology and Mining. Even then, the presence of these Atomic/heavy minerals in the river Thamirabarani was not detected by the Government, so far", the bench added. Referring to the scientific and systematic study in the subject area, conducted by the Advocate Commissioner from November 30, 2020 to December 2, 2020, using advanced technology, and his submission that the heavy minerals as per schedule falls under the category of Atomic minerals. which can be regulated only by the Central government, the bench said though the presence of Atomic/heavy minerals was found even during the British regime, as early as in the year 1942-43, the government has introduced the relevant provision under section 11-B of the Mines and Minerals (Development and Regulation) Act, 1957,(power of Central government make rules for regulating atomic minerals specified under Part B of First Schedule) only in the year 2015 and enacted the Atomic Minerals Concession Rules in the year 2016, thereby allowed the erosion of such valuable minerals for the past 75 years, the bench added and posted to December 21, further hearing of the case.

He said the Centre should not be under the impression that the farmers camping at the protest sites will simply return to their homes, adding that in 1907, a farmers' protest continued for nine months till the British rulers repealed some laws. When asked about the benefit of the laws, every BJP leader says farmers can sell their produce anywhere in the country... US JOINT CHIEFS CHAIRMAN MEETS TALIBAN

Kabul, Dec. 17: The top US general held unannounced ta-Ĭks with Taliban peace negotiators in the Persian Gulf to urge a reduction in violence across Afghanistan, even as senior American officials in Kabul warned that stepped-up Taliban attacks endanger the militant group's nascent peace negotiations with the Afghan government. Army Gen. Mark A. Milley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, met for about two hours with Taliban negotiators in Doha, Qatar, on Tuesday and flew Wednesday to Kabul to discuss the peace process with Afghan President Ashraf Ghani.

Milley's meetings came amid a new drawdown of US troops, although under current US policy a complete pullout hinges on the Taliban reducing attacks nationwide. "The most important part of the discussions that I had with both the Tali-ban and the government of Afghanistan was the need for an immediate reduction in vio-

CYCLONE YASA: FIJI IMPOSES EMERGENCY

Suva, Dec. 17: Fiji imposed a nationwide curfew Thursday after urging people near the coast to move to higher ground as the island nation prepared for a major cyclone to hit.

Cyclone Yasa was expected to hit the two main islands of viti Levu and vanua Levu later Thursday or early Friday. Authorities imposed an overnight curfew and declared a state of natural disaster The National Disaster Management Office warned the cyclone could bring waves as high as 16 metres (52 feet) in some places and sustained winds of up to 250 kilometres per hour (155 mph), with gusts hitting 350 kph (217 mph).

In the capital Suva, many residents were experiencing power cuts.

Michael Cheer, who owns the Samabula Cake Shop, was moving cakes into his car so he could take them home and put them into a cooler, rather than driving them across the island to deliver them to another town.

Record cases, deaths in Calif.

Most of state's 40 mn residents under stay-at-home orders

Los Angeles, Dec. 17: California has reported more than 53,000 new Coronavirus cases and 293 deaths, setting new records as hospitals struggled to keep up with the surge.

State health officials said Wednesday a change in data processing added 15,337 previous cases to the count, but the new virus cases remained a daily record. The state has been grappling with soaring cases and hospitalisations. Most of California's 40 million residents are under stay-at-home orders because of dwindling intensive care unit capacity.

Hospitals are filling up so fast that officials are rolling out mobile field facilities and scrambling to hire more doctors and

2 health staff develop allergic reactions to Pfizer's Covid vaccine

New York, Dec. 17: Two healthcare workers, who received Pfizer's Coronavirus vaccine, developed "concerning reactions", even as the US rolled out the vaccine to frontline healthcare workers and high-risk individuals amid increasing Covid-19 infections across the country. A report in The New York Times said the two health care workers at Bartlett Regional Hospital in Alaska developed concerning reactions just minutes after receiving Pfizer's Coronavirus vaccine this week.

One staff member was hospitalised for a few days. One of the healthcare workers, a middle-aged woman, had no history of allergies but had an anaphylactic reaction 10 minutes after receiving the vaccine. She experienced a rash over her face and torso, shortness of breath and an elevated heart rate, the NYT report said adding that anaphylaxis can be life-threatening, with impaired breathing and drops in blood pressure. The second worker received his shot on Wednesday and developed eye puffiness, lightheadedness and a scratchy throat 10 minutes after the injection, the hospital said. -PTI

Paris, Dec 17: The fugitive widow of an Islamic State gunman and a man described as his logistician on Wednesday were convicted of terrorism charges and sentenced to 30 years in prison in the trial of 14 people linked to the January 2015 attacks in Paris against the satirical Charlie Hebdo newspa-per and a kosher supermarket.

The verdict ends the three-month trial linked to the three days of killings across Paris claimed jointly by the Islamic State group and al-Qaida. During the proceedings, France was struck by new attacks, a wave of Coronavirus infections among the defendants, and devastating testimony bearing witness to bloodshed that continues to shake Fran ce. All three attackers died in police raids. The widow, Hayat Boumeddiene, fled to Syria and is believed to still be alive. The two men who helped her out of France were tried in abs entia, may be dead, thou gh one received a sentence of life in prison.

The US announced sanctions earlier this week over Turkev's procurement of Russia's advanced S-400 system, under a US law known as CAATSA, aimed at pushing back on Russian influence. The sanctions target Turkey's Presidency of Defence Industries, the head of the presidency and three other senior officials. A 29-year-old Indian entrepreneur is among the seven winners of the prestigious "Young Champions of the Earth" 2020 prize given by the UN environment agency to change-makers using innovative ideas and ambitious action to help solve some of the world's most pressing environmental challenges.

Vidyut Mohan, an engineer, is the co-founder of "Takachar", a social enterprise enabling farmers to prevent open burning of their waste farm residues and earn extra income by converting them into value-added chemicals like activated carbon on-site, UN Environment Programme (UNEP) said in a statement on Tuesday.

"I've always been pas-

UN Secretary-General Antonio Guterres said in a message that in the middle of a global pandemic, with societies struggling, economies stretched to their limits and an escalating biodiversity and climate crisis, "we need to act boldly and urgently to repair our relationship with nature and take the path of sustainable devel-

Covid not a good reason to scrap Winter Session

hile the Opposition parties have cried foul, and complained of not being consulted by the government on the decision to not hold the Winter Session of Parliament this year, the Constitution is clear that they cannot demand discussion or consultation as a matter of right. That right belongs to the government alone, and the President summons Parliament to meet when advised to do so by the government. The Narendra Modi government is absolutely in the clear on this score.

There is only one constraint under which the government labours, constitutionally speaking. It must ask the President to summon Parliament at least once every six months. While recently announcing that there would no Winter Session in 2020, the government has hinted that the Budget Session would be commenced in January. There is nothing out of the ordinary about that.

The minister for parliamentary affairs, Pralhad Joshi, has claimed that he has consulted leaders of the leading Opposition parties on the scuttling of the Winter Session, and there was general agreement that the session be given the go-by in view of the Covid pandemic. Apparently, MPs were chary of travelling to Delhi. Jairam Ramesh of the Congress claims no consultation was held with his party. None of this matters, however, since the decision rests with the government Nevertheless, giving Covid as the reason for skipping the traditionally three-week long Winter Session is hardly a persuasive argument. The government and the BJP had seemed eager to hold the Bihar election when it was due recentmust the Bor had seemed eager to hold the Bina election when has due recently, rather than respect the sentiment of the Opposition parties to defer it by a few months. The election to the Hyderabad Municipal Corporation was also held recently. Covid-related considerations did not come in the way. The pandemic is raging in America but the US stuck to the schedule for its recently concluded election for President. The US Congress and the British Parliament have met as scheduled. The British Parliament did not skip meetings even during the Second World War. In November 1962, our Parliament was in session when the Chinese invaded in NEFA.

It is the widest impression today that the government has run away from the Winter Session because questions will be raised about the three-week old farmers' protest on Delhi's borders. Moreover, the Modi government has set a precedent in this regard. Future governments may also act similarly — skip a session whenever expedient. And this is hardly good for our democracy where important questions crop up all the time, often unexpectedly. A bloody-minded government may hold a session of Parliament only when it wishes to pass laws, not otherwise. This is the best way to avoid noisiness in Parliament and be an "orderly" country.

Even if the pandemic was seemed a matter of serious concern, the Winter Session could have been held online. This was done in Britain recently. MPs who could not be physically present attended on-line. India is technologically capable and this could have been organised if the government had the mind to make it happen.

While the Winter Session stands scuttled, the government can still attest to its bonafides by holding a brief session of two or three days to go over proposals for "reform" of the farm sector with which all may be invited to engage. Whatever the outcome, it is not unlikely that the farmers' protest may be defused through

Post-pandemic bonding

he choice of Boris Johnson to be the chief guest at India's Republic Day celebrations is interesting, not the least because he will be the first British Prime Minister to be bestowed the honour since John Major in 1993. Much water has flowed down the Ganga and the Thames since the time India was just emerging as a fledgling player in the free markets after pathbreaking economic reforms. It might appear the UK needs its old friends as trading partners much more now as it seeks to exit the EU as soon as possible, deal no deal. The time to strike a trade deal with the UK in the form of a FTA is ripe enough.

The world has changed post-pandemic and the shared experiences of grief and economic woes should form a sombre backdrop to what should be more sober festivities in the coming R-Day. Johnson is not the dominant figure he was projected to be when he had just staged a notable coup in the Tory Party and emerged as the champion in British eyes who would steer the island on an independent course. Just as the shadow of Covid-19 on Christmas celebrations as the UK struggles to tamp down a second coronavirus surge, the Indian Prime Minister is challenged by striking farmers who expect a "fair deal" at home.

It would be presumptuous to believe mighty geopolitics is guiding the choice of guest at this time back to Britannia and the land of colonial masters. But, in a new world order shaped by the blows of the pandemic, of which BoJo has expeence since he was personally pushed to the very brink it would examine ways of promoting ties, particularly as India might have much to contribute in IT and ITeS. Britain as well as India's ardour for Chinese goods and 5G technology has also dampened considerably and so even this crisis-ridden time smells of opportunity to get ties right.

How rise in inequality distorts Indian society

n 2013 the French economist Thomas released wenty-First Century, a magnum opus on income inequality. It was an event book very much like Stephen Hawking's A Brief History of Time. Hawking's book sold as many as 10 million copies, by comparison Piketty's tome had 2.4 million buyers so far. Such event books are more often than not read by only a fraction of the buyers. Speaking for myself, I still have somewhere a slightly read copy of James Joyce's Ulysses, still considered by the cognoscenti as the foremost work of modern literature. It is said that an analysis of Kindle readers of the Piketty book revealed that a typical reader got through 26 of its 700 pages. But have no fear, those first 26 pages have all you need to know. They encapsulate the rationale and results of Piketty's monumental

I once asked a wellknown economist who had reviewed Piketty's Capital about what the main proposition of the book was. He encapsulated it quite brilliantly. He just said that Piketty had set out to prove that R was greater than G, where R is the return on capital and G is the growth of the economy. There is much empirical evidence to back this up. In the eight years between 2006 and 2014. the US benchmark index S&P 500 gained 45 per cent, an average simple growth rate of 5.6 per cent, four times higher than the average GDP growth rate of around 1.5 per cent. The consequence of this, of course, the explosion in income inequality, which is the hallmark of the post-World War II era, and particularly after the advent of globalisation. Oxfam has informed us that in the past two decades 73 per cent of the growth has been cornered by just one per cent of the population. Oxfam has a known tendency to exaggerate a bit to prove its point, but this proposition, that few people benefitted the most during this period of huge economic expansion, is undisputable.

Paul Krugman wrote: "What excited them was Piketty's novel hypothe-sis about the growing importance of disparities in wealth, especially inherited wealth, as opposed to earnings. We are, Piketty suggested, returning to the kind of dynastic, 'patrimonial' capitalism that prevailed in the late 19th century. We only need to look around us to see that most of the wealthy today are inheritors, and without doubt many of them are building on those inheritances to further accentuate the income inequality. What is really troubling about this growing concentration of wealth is the concentration of political power in the hands of very few who are able to influence politics and policies. According to Marx an individual's position within a class hierarchy is determined by their role in the production process and argues that political and ideological consciousness is determined by class position. He saw a class as those who share common economic interests and are conscious of those interests. Classes, according to Marx, were inherently antagonistic and in a state of constant struggle. In his new book Capital and Ideology, Thomas Piketty argues, with far greater validity, that inequality is driven by human institutions, which in turn reflect the dominant Piketty defines his thesis very succinctly thus: "Inequality is neither economic nor technologi-cal: it is ideological and political. In other words, the market and competition, capital and debt, skilled and unskilled workers, natives and aliens, tax havens and competitiveness -- none of these things exist as such. All are social and historical constructs, which depend entirely on the legal, fiscal, educational, and political systems that people choose to adopt and the conceptual definitions they choose to work with. These choices are shaped by society's con-ception of social justice and economic fairness and by the relative political and ideological power of contending groups and discourses." Does this mean Marx was wrong? The times in which Marx and Piketty lived are very different. Marx saw the distortions inequity in society and wondered why? He came up with explanations. His prescriptions were limited by the knowledge and evidence available to him then. The world has moved on and moved very far since then. When Karl Marx began writing his first three volumes of Das Kapital (1867-1883), it was the early days of electricity. Marx couldn't contemplate the massive leaps of productivity made possible in the 1900s, when the world witnessed a monumental expansion of knowledge and, with it, capital. Piketty's study relates to how both capital and knowledge came to be inequitably allocated because of the instituarrangements within societies.

To understand how institutional arrangements determine outcomes, just think of India's educational system. We now have two or possibly three parallel educational streams. The two urban upper classes largely benefit from a higher standard and ideology.

quality of education imparted in English in schools with high quality teaching and facilities. This is the stream that produces India's managerial classes (both govern-ment and industrial). The working class stream flows out of our government schools, with its emphasis on vernacular education and indifferent standards. There is a third stream of rural education from which escape even into the next higher class becomes even more difficult, if not impossible. The flow into the upper reaches of Indian society from these three streams is vastly unequal. What Piketty is saying is just this. The nature of the institutions determines outcomes, not the means of production Capital and Ideology is rich in references to India and draws inferences about the institution of castes (varnas) and the rising role of brahmins, after the advent of Muslim rule, leading to the diminution of the role of Kshatriyas. The role of the brahmins expanded to an even more dominant status under the British. Piketty lauds the determined "affirmative action" policies after Independence that vastly increased the upward mobility of the lower castes, like most of us do. He also notes that the benefits could not be fully realised due to the low standards of education and its unevenness in towns and the hinterland and between regions. So, what's new? Most Indians with even an elementary understanding of postindependence India know this. The question is what is to be done now?

KERALA'S CIVIC POLLS
THE EMPHATIC win of ruling LDF (Left Democratic Front) in the Kercle's lead bady rolls provided as a ala's local body polls, perceived as a curtain raiser to the next year's as-sembly polls, has come as a shot in arm for both the state Chief Minister Pinarayi Vijayan and his party, CPI (M). The fact that the ruling left front had not only managed to retain its existing numbers but also improved its tally in the local body polls suggest the campaign of the Opposition by focusing on corruption and the alleged role of Chief Minister office and smuggling scandal had failed to cut ice with the voters. By reaching out to the voters by highlighting his government's slew of welfare schemes and several grass roots level interventions including housing for the poor, Mr Pinnarayi Vijayan had treaded a different path and struck a chord with

DROP IN HDI

THAT INDIA dropped two ranks in Human Development Index (HDI) this year based on 2019 data should serve as an eye opener for the people as well as the government. After all, it's the collective responsibility of the people, firms, producers (including farmers) and the governments that can guarantee healthy ambience and living which is a component of HDI. As far as the system of education in the country is concerned, a lot needs to be done. It is imperative that we have an education system that will not only enhance the skills of students but also instil in them values such as honesty, sincerity, patience and perseverance for sustained growth.

On 250th birth anniversary, Beethoven still holds his own

F music be the food of love. play on; Give me excess of it... The opening lines of Shakespeare's Twelfth Night might have entered the thoughts of the uniquely privileged Viennese audience that witnessed Ludwig van Beethoven premiering his Fifth and Sixth Symphonies in the Austrian capital on Dec 22, 1808.

For good measure, the artistic showcase also featured the first performances of his Piano Concerto No 4 and Choral Fantasy. A 20th-century equivalent would have entailed The Beatles, say, unveiling 'Sgt Pepper' and 'Abbey Road' simultaneously in a live performance. Incidentally, the latter album's Because is based on reversing the chords of the Moonlight Sonata. It wasn't the only time turned up in the pop

By 1808, Beethoven was already viewed as the most fascinating composer of his age. He was born in Bonn, probably precisely 250 years ago today. He first visited Vienna as a teenage prodigy, and may have been tutored by Mozart. He was obliged to return to Bonn to attend to his dving mother, but went back to Vienna at Haydn's invitation five years later and remained there for the rest of

I cannot claim to be an aficionado of Western classical music — the temporal investment it requires has always been a hard slog. Yet there are compositions that insinuate themselves into the subconscious, from Mozart's Eine Kleine Nachtmusik to Strauss's Blue Danube, Tchaikovsky's Swan Lake, Ravel's Bolero and Chopin's

I would make a particular exception, though, for Beethoven. It dates back, perhaps, to a presentation on the weekly Disney show featured on PTV in the early 1970s, where a dramatised biography of Beethoven showed the opening chords of the Fifth Symphony being inspired by a debtor banging on the door of the composer's rented accommodation. Those dramatic notes are more often described as the knocking of Fate.

The show was possibly more accurate in its depiction of a deaf Beethoven being swung around by a soloist after inaugurating his Ninth Symphony to witness the rapturous response. The Ninth came almost a decade after the Eighth, which had been unveiled before an audience of international leaders at the Congress of Vienna in 1814.

That particular segment, now the official anthem of the European Union, has stood the test of time in more ways than one. Beethoven's death centenary in 1927 was widely commemorated across Europe, from Britain to the Soviet Union. As a German, though, he was also appropriated by the Nazi regime, which continued to honour him despite determining that he was 'mixed race'. Based on Beethoven's looks, the suspicion of African ancestry has persisted, albeit without any foundation.

His politics have also served as the basis of much conjecture. Beethoven famously rescinded the dedication of his Third Symphony, Eroica, to Napoleon after the latter emerged as a potential tyrant. And there is a tale, possibly apocryphal, about how he, while out for a walk in a park with Goethe, encountered a royal party and strolled right through it, even as Goethe stepped aside to bow and scrape.

For all his antipathy towards authority, Beethoven relied for much of his life on the sponsorship of European nobles, and many of his compositions were dedicated to princes, counts and barons. But he regularly fell out with patrons, and occasionally detested royals. Yet his Symphony No 8 was unveiled before the crowned heads of Europe at the Congress of Vienna in 1814.

He never compromised his art, though, confessing at the turn of the century that his devotion to music had prevented him from suicide. His personal life was a shambles, littered with unrequited love or romances doomed by the social rules of the era. Yet, despite a handful of detractors, few who heard his compositions could fail to be moved

And the legend only grew after his demise in 1827, just three years after he had inaugurated his magnificent Symphony No 9, whose glorious final movement, a setting for Schiller's Ode to Joy, has been appropriated for political purposes throughout the past two centuries, and serves today as the European Union's official hymn. Not surprisingly, the German Nazi regime picked Beethoven as an avatar (despite concluding that he was mixed race). However, a century earlier Friedrich Engels had waxed eloquent about the Fifth Symphony, and some six decades later Vladimir Lenin declared he could listen to the Appassionata sonata every day. "What astonishing, superhuman music," he is quoted by Maxim Gorky as saying. "It always makes me proud ... to think that people can work such miracles."

But perhaps the pianist and conductor Daniel Barenboim summed up Beethoven best a few years ago by pointing out that "he freed music from hitherto prevailing conventions of harmony and structure", and that much of his work could be paraphrased "by saying that suffering is inevitable, but the courage to fight it renders life worth living"

■ Fallout of US placing India on watchlist

RBI may go slow on forex interventions

FALAKNAAZ SYED MUMBAI, DEC. 17

The US adding India to the watchlist for currency manipulation could keep the Reserve Bank of India guarded on aggressive forex intervention and may help the rupee gain, according to experts.
The United States Treasury report once again included India in its monitoring list of countries with potentially "questionable foreign exchange policies" and "currency mani-pulation" after the RBI relentlessly bought dollars to forcibly keep the rupee weak to boost

Abheek Barua, chief economist at HDFC Bank told Financial Chronicle, "The RBI will have to consider the ramifications of continuing with their action (of massive dollar buying), what possible penalties or the cost of ignoring the US altogether be? It's a difficult call but I believe that the RBI will have to take their foot off the intervention pedal a little going forward given this new develop-

"This is rupee positive and bond yields should go down theoretically, but sentiment is a critical factor in the very short term and let's see how that is perceived. There will be pressure on the RBI to stop buying dollars at the rate they have been both in the spot and in the forward market...So we will just have to see. I don't think it will have a major impact but certainly it will have some near-term impact from tomorrow onwards." added Barua

Ashutosh Khajuria, executive director at Federal Bank told FC, "In case the RBI takes the development seriously then it will reduce or stop the inter-vention and so the rupee may have a tendency to appreciate against the dollar unless the foreign flows reduce or stop."

The rupee is headed for the third yearly decline against the US dollar. So far this year, the rupee has depreciated 3 per cent to 73.52 a dollar, the worst among performance Asian currencies. The underperformance was on the back of the central bank's dollar buying and weaker domestic economic activities fol-lowing the Covid out-India's forex reserves have increased by $117.4 billion to a record high of $ 574.82 billion from April till date against the previous year's $457.47 billion.

OUICK CROSSWORD

Part of this increase can be attributed to dollar weakness against other currencies such as sterling, euro, yuan and yen.

In the first nine months of 2020, the RBI bought a whopping $57 billion just in the spot market. Its purchases through forward contracts are around $12.6 billion. The US Treasury Department's report said that the Indian central interventions bank's added up to 2.4 per cent of the country's GDP, breaching one of the thresholds that the US monitors.

India was last included in the currency watchlist in October 2018, but removed from the May 2009 list. A currency manipulator tag is given by the US to countries that deliberately keep their currency low against the dollar to gain export advantage. The treasury report, published twice a year, warns of any unfair currency practices. The US has included India. Taiwan and Thailand to its monitoring list.

Adelaide, Dec. 17: Virat Kohli's enduring love affair with Adelaide Oval resulted in a classy 74 but his untimely run-out triggered a batting collapse as India ended the opening day at 233/6 against Australia in the first Day/Night Test here on Thursday.

Kohli, who looked in complete command, was run out when his deputy Ajinkya Rahane backed out after calling for a single and it happened just before the second new ball was taken.

From a comfortable 188/3, India slumped to 206/6 as Rahane and Hanuma Vihari (16) found the pace and swing generated by the pink ball under lights too hot to Ravichandran Ashwin (15 batting) and Sana (9 batting) saw off the final few ultra-defensive approach, (2/49).

In conditions, which can't exactly be called batting friendly, Kohli blended the right amount of caution and aggression in his 180-ball innings, showing one and all that he is a few lightyears ahead of his peers when it comes to quality batsmanship.

KOHLI'S SECOND RUN OUT IN TESTS

On the opening day of the first Test against Australia at Adelaide, India skipper Virat Kohli was run out for the second time in 146 innings of 87 Test match. He was dismissed run out for the first time against the same opponent at the same ground in January

 It was also Kohli's maid-en run out in 91 innings of 56 Test matches as skip-

Red-balls pathetic for Tests: Warne

Australia spin legend Shane Warne on Thursday made a strong pitch for the pink ball to be used in all Test matches in place of the "pathetic" red cherry that offers "nothing" to the bowler. The pink ball, as of now, is only used for Day/Night matches that became a part of the crick-

"I've been saying this for the last few years. I believe the pink ball should be used in all Test matches. Day games, not just day-night games," Warne said on Fox Cricket'.

"The pink ball, you can actually see the ball easier, crowd can see the ball easier. It generally does more than the red ball and it looks fantastic on TV. So why not use a pink ball the whole time?

"Maybe change it at 60 overs because it goes soft, but I'd be using the pink ball for every Test match so more of it I would say," the Australian great said.

The Australian said the red ball doesn't swing much for the bowlers with the exception of the Dukes ball in England and gets soft very soon.

'No more red ball, it doesn't swing, it doesn't do anything, goes soft after 25 overs. It has been pathetic for so long now. Except for the Dukes ball in England, it has been rubbish.

"So let's try the pink ball in Test cricket," he added. WARNER EYES BOXING DAY RETURN Star Australian batsman David Warner on Thursday said he was aiming to play the Boxing Day against India Melbourne, calling his injury-enforced absence from the opening clash in Adelaide "devastating". Warner limped out of second ODI last month after straining his groin. "I am (hopeful), that's one that I never want to miss out on," Warner told Australian sports radio network SEN about the Melbourne Test. "(Adelaide's) my first missed Test through injury so I'm obviously very dis-appointed with that. With the big series that it is, it's devastating to miss a Test but I know that the guys who are walking out there are going to put their best foot forward."

NO REGRETS ABOUT STRATEGY: PUJARA

It took Cheteshwar Pujara 148 balls to get his first boundary but not for once did the senior India batsman feel that he batted too slowly during the opening day's play.

Pujara, who scored a sedate 43 off 160 balls in India's 233 for 6 at stumps on day one, feels that a first innings total of 350 would be very handy for the visitors. Asked if he felt that he could have paced his innings better, the Saurashtra man had an emphatic no for an answer. "Not at all. We were in a very good position in the first two sessions," said Pujara, defending the 41 scored by the team in the first session and 66 runs that were scored in the second. "We needed to make sure that we don't lose wickets when the ball is swinging. It was a great day of Test cricket and there are no regrets at all about the strategy.'

Russia to miss next two Olympics

Geneva, Dec. 17: Russia was banned on Thursday from using its name, flag and anthem at the next two Olympics or at any world championships for the next two years.

The Court of Arbitration for Sport's ruling also blocked Russia from bid-ding to host major sporting events for two years.

Russian athletes and teams will still be allowed to compete at next year's Tokyo Olympics and the 2022 Winter Games in Beijing, as well as world championships including the 2022 World Cup in Qatar, if they are not implicated in doping or covering up positive tests.

The punishments are less than the four-year ban the World Anti-Doping Agency had proposed.

One small win for Russia is the proposed team name at major events. The name "Russia" can be retained on uniforms if the words "Neutral Athlete" or "Neutral Team" have equal prominence, the court said. Still, the court's three judges imposed the most severe penalties on Russia since allegations of statebacked doping and coverups emerged after the 2014 Sochi Olympics.

The case centered on accusations that Russian state authorities tampered with a database from the Moscow testing laboratory before handing it over to investigators last year. It contained likely evidence to prosecute long-standing doping violations. The CAS process was formally between Wada and the Russian anti-doping agency. The Russian agency, known as Rusada, was ruled non-compliant last year — a decision upheld Thursday by the three

Rusada was also ordered to pay $1.27 million to

When a four-day hearing was held in Lausanne last month, Russian athletes and their lawyers took part as third parties arguing they should not be punished for misconduct by state officials not working in sports. Giving Wada the lab database by a December 2018 deadline was a key condition for Rusada being reinstated three months earlier when a previous expulsion from the antidoping community was lifted. Wada investigators in Moscow eventually got the data one month late.
